But vain are the efforts of Hooker's brave men. Three fine, disciplined divisions he has led to the field, thinking to turn an exposed left flank, while Mansfield, with his new Twelfth corps, supports the attack, and the main army, advancing in force from the line of the Antietam, covers and holds the long confederate front extending far to the south of the town. Just whom to blame nobody will say, but, not until Hooker's right division is swept by lapping fires and flattened out by the fierce storm of lead; not until Meade and Ricketts, farther to the east, have charged again in line with Doubleday's left; not until Doubleday, not whipped, but brought to a stand, is fairly battling for breath, do the brigades of Mansfield appear at the east, coming late into action, and even then by no means prepared. Many battalions are new and unskilled, and before the brigade can be brought into line, gallant, gray-headed old Mansfield drops dying from his horse. Williams succeeds to command; but before Hooker half finishes giving his orders, he, too, commanding all troops at that moment west of the stream, is stricken and borne from the field, stripping it thereby of both corps commanders, and leaving the right to the care of men ignorant of McClellan's plans, and confronted by the best fighters in the southern host.

Campbell, the captain, is shot from his saddle. Half the right wing of the Sixth is gone. Half the commanders are now killed or wounded. Not a lieutenant colonel is left in the Iron Brigade. Allen, Bragg and Bachman are borne from the line, the last named to his soldier grave. The lone effort is fruitless, save for its glories and the fierce punishment given the foemen in front. There, indeed, is destruction equal to this in the cornfields and along the Hagerstown pike. No wonder old Jack bows his head in grief and supplication. Again he has lost both division commanders, Lawton and Jones being wounded. So, too, falls Douglas, heading Lawton's brigade, and with almost breaking heart Jackson sends word to his beloved general that half the commands of Lawton and Hays and fully one-third of Trimble's are killed or wounded, as are all regimental commanders but two. Thank God, 'tis their last fight with the Iron Brigade.

Before breakfast is over at the Pry house, where sit little Mac and the big staff, Hooker's fight on the right flank is over and done. Then another is started in front of the east wood, and later others occur along the line to the south, and wherever a corps is sent into attack, Lee scrapes up a corps to meet and repel it. Concerted action might have given the union a needed, a much needed, victory, but concert there is none. One splendid and disciplined corps has been held in reserve, and when toward the last the serene young general-in-chief, never excited or hurried, never able to see flaw in his own dispositions, seemed yielding to pressure and about sending them in, he hearkens to the words of their brilliant commander, so said veteran regulars at the time: "Remember, this is the last reserve of the Army of the Potomac."

And so night settles down and Lee's little army, superbly led, has beaten back in succession the scattered attacks of McClellan's overwhelming force. All through the hours of darkness the surgeons are at work with the thousands of wounded. All through the following day Lee waits for renewal of the battle, but McClellan has had enough. With the coming of another night, therefore, gathering up his wounded and prisoners, sending his trains ahead, the great Virginian silently moves his columns down to the fords of the Potomac, and by dawn of the 19th all are safely across. Lee has slipped away.

There is a significance in the greeting accorded the little soldier still in supreme command when he rides his lines a day after the battle. The corps of Porter, held throughout the combat in safe reserve, swings its caps and cheers with great enthusiasm. The corps of Sumner shouts with modified rejoicing. The men of Mansfield rise and salute in silence. The thinned battalions of the First corps make no sign whatever.

Witnessing this sight, Fred Benton contrasts it with another which it was his privilege to note the previous day. He and other officers had been sent under flag of truce within the picket lines of the southern army, to seek the wounded and to render aid. All about the barn and buildings of the Miller farm, where the brigade had rallied and hung so long, lay scores of stricken men for whom the surgeons were doing their best, but so very many seemed past help. Along the pike the Georgians, too, lay thick, and gray uniformed officers moved to and fro among them, or conversed in low tones, curiously scanning from time to time the two or three staff officials in blue who followed the surgeons, pencil and notebook in hand. Suddenly the talking ceased, for, issuing from a narrow roadway that trended westward from the pike, there came a tall, commanding looking officer, gray-bearded, yet erect, a soldier who acknowledged with grave courtesy the salutes that greeted him on every hand. Men sprang to their feet and gazed at him almost in adoration. Even the wounded strove to rise. Some few hailed him with feeble, childish voices. As for Benton and his two associates, they needed not the little group of staff and orderlies to confirm them in their belief. They knew him at a glance—the great Virginia leader—and Benton, instantly, the others following, stepped forward and stood at salute. Lee saw it, and turning so as to half face the northerners, with punctilious courtesy lifted his hat, then quickly reined back as a dust-covered, battle-stained battery came jingling out from the lane and, turning into the highway, pulled wearily on to where the spires of the Maryland town pierced the blue beyond the southward wood. Jaded and worn were the horses, black and powder-stained the men, and of a sudden one of these, a slender stripling, jogging along beside his gun, caught sight of the group of horsemen, darted from his place to where the commanding general, the picture of the soldier and the gentleman, sat in saddle at the roadside, and there, with boyish laugh, held forth a grimy hand. "It's Bob," he cried. "Don't you know me, father?" And Lee, the cavalier, bent low and with love and tenderness, with who can say what pride and rejoicing, clasped the hand of the private soldier in the Rockridge artillery, his gallant younger son. In what other army would one see the like of that!

Then the general rode on toward the Dunker church, where still the men of Jackson lay in readiness, and then uprose rank after rank with mighty shout that marked his onward going adown the weary yet intensely loyal line until lost within the distant walls of Sharpsburg. Despite the dire carnage of the day of battle, there beat no soldier heart in all the southern host that was not true to Lee.

Presently, as the time accorded for their sad mission had well nigh expired, Benton was aware of a young officer, in the uniform of the horse artillery, who had been chatting with comrades across the way, and now, dismounting, stepped briskly toward him, lifting a jaunty forage cap.

"Your pardon, sir," he courteously spoke. "Is this Capt. Benton who—visited Charlottesville not long ago? My name is Pelham," and there was just the suspicion of a smile in the keen young face.

"Captive, but not captain," answered Benton, with responsive grin, though the mention of the name was something that put him on his guard. What was it young Winston had said about Maud Pelham and Rosalie? This must be the boy captain of the name, of whom he had heard so much—Jeb Stuart's crack light gunner.

N. P. H. S. AND LEALS SCHOOL FAIL TO SCORE

CONTEST MARKED BY BRILLIANT AND SNAPPY PLAY.

After an exciting and well-played football game on the Cricket Grounds in North Plainfield, yesterday afternoon, between the elevens from the North Plainfield High and Leal's Schools, neither team was able to score. The contest was marked by brilliant and snappy play, in which there was little to chose from in either team. The relative strength of the players was so even that the result was always in doubt.

Lor Leal's School, Howard probably did the best work. His general all-round playing was a feature, while Peacock excelled for the borougr school boys, who came dangerously near scoring in the last few minutes of play. Leal's team also came near scoring, but was held for downs three times, when the whistle was blown.

This was the second game between the teams, the first contest resulting in a victory for Leal's School by a score of 6 to 0. The lineup and summary of yesterday's game follows:

N. P. H. S.	Leal's.
A. Van Arsdale	Alpaugh

Supreme Court Sets Aside Verdict on Note Given by Mrs. Schepflin.

By a decision of the Supreme Court yesterday, reversing a verdict of the lower court in the case of the People's Bank, of New Brunswick, against Mrs. Louisa Schepflin, widow of the late Christian Schepflin, the latter is relieved of the necessity of liquidating a note held under her name by the bank.

The note was signed by Mrs. Schepflin to aid her husband in raising money a short time before he died. Mr. Schepflin applied to the bank for a loan, tendering his note as security. The bank refused to accept his paper, but said it would loan the money on Mrs. Schepflin's note. The wife's name was accordingly signed to the note and the money was paid over.

The bank sued Mrs. Schepflin when the note fell due, and secured a verdict. Mrs. Schepflin, on the advice of Craig A. Marsh, her counsel, carried the case up.

It was shown that Mr. Schepflin got all the money and spent it all himself. The court ruled that n signing the note Mrs. Schepflin merely accommodated her husband, getting no benefit from the money, and was therefore not liable. The verdict was accordingly set aside.

TALK ON PARISH WORK

Grace Church's Rector Gives Sound Advice on Sunday-School Activity.

BEFORE MEN'S CLUB

Reports of Various Departments of Parish Are Read—Rev. Mr. Stevenson is Applauded.

Glimpses of all the activities that go to make up the parochial work of Grace P. E. church were most entertainingly and interestingly presented to the members of the parish by the Men's Club of Grace church at its second meeting of the season in the new parish house last night. The programme with which the club entertained a large gathering of its friends of the parish, women as well as men, was one worthy of particular note, not only because it was of a somewhat unusual nature for a church social affair, but for itself.

It was called "All the Parish Guilds: a Presentation of Grace Church Activities," and it was just that. Brief but clear reports on every organization engaged in parochial work were delivered by those best posted on them, the reports picturing the organizations as they are today, what their aims and objects are and what they hope to do. When they had been completed, those who heard them had a comprehensive view of the work that is being done, week in and week out, by the parish forces as a whole.

The rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, spoke on the Sunday school, as its superintendent, and he said some things that had no deep coating of sugar on them. He said, in words that were plain enough to make his meaning clear, that too many Grace church children were going to the Crescent Avenue and other churches' Sunday schools. The other reports were very interesting in themselves, but what the rector had to say of the Sunday school situation awoke attention enough to do for all the statements and leave a fair working amount for a number of stray and unlisted subjects.

In introducing the Sunday school subject, Hugh F. Fox, the president of the club, who was in the chair, referred to the indifference shown by parents to their responsibility in connection with the Sunday school training of the children. Mr. Stevenson took his text from that.

"What Mr. Fox has said regarding the duty of parents in strengthening the Sunday school is true," he said. "The Sunday school, as he says, is a problem, and a great problem, in every parish. I have had some experience in Sunday school work besides that in this parish, and I am acquainted with the conditions and the difficulties that surround it. In pretty nearly all charges the Sunday school workers have to contend with the indifference of the parents; they don't care whether their children attend the school or whether they don't. The situation is bad enough under those circumstances. But when the parents are actually in opposition to the Sunday school of their church the situation is very much aggravated. And that is exactly the situation in Grace church.

"When I first came to this church I was told that the Sunday school was in a most deplorable state. I was told that it was a perfect Bedlam, and parents simply couldn't allow their children to mix up in it. When I heard that I got out my axe and went into the Sunday school to do some pruning."

Mr. Stevenson, continuing, said he couldn't find any use for the axe. The children were lively enough, but no more so than human children usually were. They were actuated by a spirit of loyalty to the school and its aims, came there to work, and did work. He believed that the school was of the sort of which the best schools were made, and might easily be put on a level with the most satisfactory school to be found anywhere, especially as the new parish house gave it an equipment of unusual beauty and completeness.

"Now, I have no axe to grind. I am not thinking particularly of myself in this connection. But I state it simply as a fact that it is no encouragment for a rector to have his people come to him and say that the Sunday school of the Crescent Avenue church or the Presbyterian church, or some other church, is much better than that in their own church, and they simply have to send their children there. It is not right for members of this church to pick out the weakness of their own Sunday school. It is their duty to work for the advancement of the school in the church to which they belong and which they profess to love."

The rector was very warmly applauded. His talk produced a very noticeable impression.

J. E. Erickson, Mr. Stevenson's chief aid in the Sunday school, also spoke on the work. Mr. Stevenson paid a tribute to his collaboration, which Mr. Erickson acknowledged with frank earnestness.

Other reports were made as follows: Women's Guild, Women's Auxiliary, and the Vestment Committee, by Miss Cock; the choir, by Mrs. W. A. Freeman, the organist; the Acorn Society, by Miss Morgan; St. Agnes' Guild, by Miss Little; Girls' Friendly oSciety, by Mrs. E. C. Perkins; the Altar Society, by Mrs. E. L. Finch; St. John's Guild, by Robert Bellows; the Pilot, the parish paper, by George S. Cray; the colored Sunday school, by Miss Cock; the colored mission, by Rev. E. E. Miller, the curate in charge; the colored industrial school, by Miss Agnes Smith, and the Men's Club by President Fox.

Musical numbers were interspersed through the reports. Sattels' quintette played a number of selections, and Miss Angie Kuhl, of Somerville, executed two brilliant piano solos.

Refreshments were served. The committee in charge comprised H. O. Fleming, chairman; J. Paul Nolting, H. B. Coombe and R. M. Huse.

SCHOLARLY LECTURE ON CHINA BY DR. MARTIN

FORMER PRESIDENT OF IMPERIAL COLLEGE, INTERESTS LARGE AUDIENCE.

Dr. W. A. P. Martin, D. D., LL. D., former president of the Imperial College, of China, and the author of "A Cycle of Cathay," one of the standard books on China, delivered a lecture on "The Opening of China" at the Casino yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Hartridge School. There was a very large attendance.

Dr. Martin as a thorough scholar and possesses a large measure of international fame as an authority on China and the Chinese. He has lived for something like fifty-five years in the Flowery Kingdom, and knows it and its people as well as any Caucasian can. He has translated a number of books from the Chinese into English and vice versa. His appearance on the lecture platform here was brought about by his friendship for Miss Seward, of the Hartridge School faculty, whose father he was well acquainted with in China. The lecture was entirely gratuitous, and the audience gathered by invitation, represented the wealth and culture of the city and neighboring places. The Monday Afternoon Club was invited in a body.

Dr. Martin gave a resume of China's history from 1850 to the present date. He said that period represented a drama in five acts, each act a war. Dr. Martin is very sanguine over the future of China. The Boxers he regards as fanatics, and the ideas they stand for as lacking in permanence or great importance. He said the missionaries oftentimes acted more hastily than they might.

In one fleeting reference he made to it Dr. Martin scoffed at the Yellow Peril.

"There is no danger in the so-called Yellow Peril," he said.

Noyes was buying tickets to go on board a ferryboat at the Cortlandt street ferry yesterday afternoon. He was accompanied by a young woman who stood near waiting for him to get the tickets. A man, who said he was James Monroe, of 817 Quincy street, Brooklyn, was about to speak to the young woman when Noyes landed a right hander on Monroe's jaw, sending him through a window in the ferry house.

Patrolman Moran arrested Noyes and took Monroe to the police station. Monroe refused to make any charge against Noyes, saying: "I got mine—all that was coming to me. But I thought the girl was willing to speak to me."

Noyes paid for the window and was allowed to go.

Jersey Shrievalty In Doubt.

Freehold, N. J., Nov. 14—Whether Charles E. Close, Democrat, or C. Asa Francis, Republican, was elected sheriff last Tuesday still remains undecided. Of thirty-eight districts examined the returns from eleven only were absolutely correct. Twenty-one remain to be examined. The meeting will continue tomorrow. PLEASE DON'T NAG.

"Constant dropping wears away a stone," might be altered to "constant nagging wears away a saint," for one sees some of the finest men in creation belittled and made into morose, irritable creatures by a small tyrant of a wife. For it is nearly always the best who give in.

The man or woman with a large, generous nature, too good-hearted to be always quibbling and quarreling over petty trifles is the easiest sort of prey for the household tyrant. A woman who makes "scenes" and uses her tears and weakness as a weapon for tryanny can often subject the strongest man to her whims and caprices.

She pays a heavy price for her victory, for he ceases to love her. She rules because he is a gentleman and rightly regards such matrimonial scenes as vulgar. But his heart soon becomes cold. He is her husband legally, but her hold on his love is gone. For "love flies out at the window when tyranny comes in at the door."

COMMON COUNCIL TO INVESTIGATE CHIEF KIELY

Corporation Council Holds That City Fathers Are Authorized to Conduct Probe.

EXPECT EARLY ACTION

Formal Charges Must Be Made And Accused Given Five Days' Notice—Chief to Be Represented by Counsel.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh presented a communication at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last night relative to the Supreme Court decision on the constitutionality of the police act under which Mayor Buckle recently appointed police commissioners, which was accompanied with advice telling of the jurisdiction of the Common Council in regard to police department affairs, and informing the members that any trial on charges against employes of the department shall be before them, unless otherwise delegated by a four-fifths vote of that body.

After an hour's recess taken to discuss the corporation counsel's communication a resolution was offered by Mr. Tyler and adopted, defining the duties and powers of the councilmanic police committee. This has never been done before in the case of any councilmanic committee, but it tells exactly what jurisdiction the police committee has over the police department, and has no direct bearing on the proposed investigation of police affairs. Unless the Common Counsel by a four-fifths vote delegates this power to the board of police or some other body the alleged irregularities of the police department will be investigated by the entire Common Council.

While no date has been fixed for the trial, it is stated authoritatively that the police department affairs will be taken up at the earliest possible time and fully investigated. The sessions will be open ones and Chief Kiely will be represented by counsel.

As was expected, Mr. Marsh gave in substance the Supreme Court decision declaring the police act to be unconstitutional, which was chiefly on the grounds that it was special legislation, and then seeks to define the powers of the Common Council in the matter.

According to his opinion, this body is the only one before whom the investigation can properly come; but the Common Council by a four-fifths vote can adopt an ordinance delegating the power to the board of police or other office, but until such an ordinance is adopted the councilmanic body must take up the matter. Mr. Marsh also informed the members that specific charges reduced to writing must be made and a copy served on the accused person or persons within five days prior to the time fixed for trial, and it gives it the power to serve subpoenas compelling witnesses to attend. A copy of the charges must be filed with the city clerk. The accused person is also given the right to engage counsel and make every and any defense tending to a fair trial. When Mr. Tyler was questioned as to the probable date of the trial he said that as yet no time had been fixed, but he gave every assurance that there would be no delay in the matter.

After Mr. Marsh's communication was received and read, on Mr. Tyler's motion the Common Council took a recess for one hour to consider the document, and when the members reconvened the resolution offered by Mr. Tyler was adopted, Mr. Tolles alone voting in the negative on the resolution.

Mr. Marsh's communication to the Common Council was as follows:

"To the Honorable Common Council, of the City of Plainfield:

"Gentlemen—Respecting the report of Messrs. Tyler and Bullock, of the committe on police, dated October 24, 1905, which was submitted to the Common Council on that date, embodying the recommendation that the report be sent to the corporation counsel, and that he be requested to facilitate an early final determination of the question whether the act under which the police commission was appointed is constitutional, and the appointment of the said police commission thereunder as the same has been accomplished, is binding on the city of Plainfield; and if there is any probability that the proceedings pending in court involving said question will not finally determine that question for the city of Plainfield, or that the interests and rights of the city of Plainfield will not otherwise be fully and fairly represented to the court in said proceedings, then that the corporation counsel be requested to initiate a proceeding on behalf of said city which will in the speediest manner lead to such a determination and will fully protect the interests of the city and of the Common Council, not only ultimately, but also in the meantime, and which report was, by action of the Common Council, accepted and the recommendations of which were approved and the same referred and sent at once to the corporation counsel for his action accordingly, I have to report as follows:

"I had prior to the presentation of the committee's report advised the several members of the Common Council who consulted me on the subject, and also the Mayor, that, in my opinion, the statute in question, viz.: chapter 76 of the laws of 1905 was unconstitutional on the ground that it was a special act regulating the internal affairs of cities, but that the Mayor had a legal right to regard the statute as constitutional until some competent court should declare it otherwise. I deemed it unnecessary and unwise to embark the city in litigation, inasmuch as the question of the constitutionality of the act had already been submitted to the Supreme Court in several cases arising in other cities, and the decision of the court in those cases on that question would be binding upon all other cities affected by the act. Yesterday the cases above referred to were decided, and in the case of Attorney General vs. Nealon an opinion by Mr. Justice Dixon was handed down in which it was declared that the act in question is unconstitutional on the ground that it is a special act regulating the internal affairs of cities.

"In my opinion the grounds stated by Mr. Justice Dixon are unanswerable, and I therefore infer that it is highly improbable that a writ of error will be sued out to review the judgment in the Court of Errors and Appeals.

"Respecting the charges made or to be made against the chief of police, your attention is called to the act entitled "An act relating to police departments in cities, and regulating the tenor and terms of office of persons employed in such departments," approved March 8, 1899. (P. L. 1899, p. 26), and the amendment of sections 3 of said act, constituting chapter 41 of the law of 1902, and approved March 27, 1902, and found in the session laws of that law, on pages 183, etc.

"The first section of the act provides that the officers and men employed in the police department of every city shall severally hold their respective offices and continue in their respective employment during good behaviour, efficiency and residence in the city where employed, and that no person shall be removed from office or employment in the police department of any city for political reasons, or for any other cause than incapacity, misconduct, non-residence, or disobedience of just rules and regulations heretofore established or which may be established for the government of the police affairs or police department of the city. There are two provisos which are not germane to the present inquiry.

"The third section of the act as amended provides that no person, whether officer or employe in the police department of any city, shall be removed from office or employment therein except for just cause, as provided by the first section of the act, and then only after a written charge or charges stating the cause of complaint shall have been preferred against such officer or employe signed by the person or persons making such charge or charges and filed in the office of the municipal officer or board having charge of the department in which the complaint arises and after the said charge or charges have been publicly examined into by the appropriate municipal board, officer or authority, etc. The section provides for reasonable notice to the person charged and reasonable opportunity to make his defense, and confers power on the officer, board of authority having power to try such charges to issue writs of subpoena to enforce the attendance of witnesses.

"The section also contains the following specific direction:

"'and it shall be lawful for and authority is hereby vested in the Common Council or other governing body of any city by the affirmative vote of not less than four-fifths of the entire membership thereof to designate and appoint by ordinance the board, officer or authority by whom such charge or charges shall be heard, tried and determined; and when so designated and appointed, such board, officer or authority shall have the sole and exclusive power to hear, try and determine such charge or charges; and upon such charge or charges being by said board, officer or authority sustained to suspend for a defined period or dismiss the person so charged from office.'

An ordinance giving the Public Service Corporation the right to lay tracks and make certain connections at various points in this city, so that single end motor cars can be successfully operated, was introduced by Mr. Higham, chairman of the committee on public affairs, at last night's meeting of the Common Council, adopted on first and second readings and ordered engrossed and advertised.

The particular points where the company desires to install track connections are on Richmond street, southeast of Fifth street; West Front street, southwest of Grant avenue; West Fourth street, near the car barns, and Grant avenue, near West Fourth street, and it also desires to erect one pole at West Front street and West End avenue and two on West Fourth street, equip the same with wires for the operation of cars.

These track connections are in the shape of a "Y" and when installed will allow cars to make the circuit at these points without a lot of unnecessary changing about of fenders and backing up of cars. It is the purpose of the company to run the single end motor cars when the changes are made.

Mr. Tolles wanted to know whether the changes would be a benefit to the city of whether the trolley company intended to pay for the privileges granted.

In reply Mr. Higham stated that the committee after consultation with the street committee had decided that while it would not be any great benefit to the city, it would have a tendency to improve the service. In case of accident it would lessen the possibility of delay in the service, and it was generally believed that the changes would be a benefit to the city as well as the company. There were no dissenting votes in adopting the ordinance.

Mr. Higham stated after the adoption of the ordinance that the trolley company agreed to pay for all advertising in connection with the ordinance, and he then moved that it be advertised as required by law.

SOCIETY 25 YEARS OLD

Anniversary Observed by a Local Branch of M. E. Home Missionary Society

EVERYTHING SILVERY

Mrs. E. Clark, Jr., President of First M. E. Organization—Address by Dr. McCrea—A Good Programme.

In commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal church, a silver celebration was held in Vincent chapel last night, under the auspices of the home mission society of the First M. E. church, a branch of the general society. The general organization founded in 1880 has been doing a great work on the home field, extending from Alaska to Porto Rico, among the Spanish people of New Mexico and on the Pacific Coast; colored people of the South; immigrants, Mormons, Indians, and besides has established industrial schools, hospitals and the society has 650 deaconesses and missionaries.

The anniversary celebration was held chiefly to raise the First M. E. church portion of the $200,000 fund for the general society to liquidate its indebtedness. A collection was received from the forty members of the local society, besides others, and the members each contributed $2.50 in an envelope. This offering was taken up by two little girls, Frances Rittenhouse and Margaret Robley, who were dressed in white.

The chapel presented an attractive appearance decorated with American and silver flags. This work was under the direction of Mrs. Josephus H. Howell, chairman of the decorating committee. Clematis was also used in the decorations, and on the platform there were palms and six huge chrysanthemums. As far as possible the silver color scheme was adopted and with good effect. Over the pulpit platform was displayed a silver banner giving a list of the departments of work of the society.

A feature of the affair was a large birthday cake, done up in silver paper, tied with white ribbon and surrounded by twenty-five candles in silver candelabra. Slices of the cake were sold for ten cents and this money went into the general offering.

Mrs. E. Clark, Jr., the president, had charge of the general programme and deserves credit for the success of the enterprise. Mrs. Henry A. McGee was chairman of the musical programme, which was given in a delightful manner by Miss May Whitney and Miss Bertha Whitney on the piano, assisted by Mrs. Guy Bender and Miss Clark. During the evening Rev. A. C. McCrea, pastor of the church, made a short appropriate address, congratulating the society and telling of its work.

Mrs. J. M. McNaughton was chairman of the supper committee, and under her direction a number of young women dressed in white, served a fine supper. Mrs. George H. Whitney and Mrs. O. L. Jenkins were in charge of the cake table. Miss Bertha Whitney and Mrs. Robert W. Davis were at the lemonade table and served this beverage free.

In recognition of the celebration and as a souvenir, each person received a silver badge. These were distributed by Mrs. Judd Stewart and Mrs. Arthur Krone.

ABRAM BAKER DEAD.

Former Plainfielder Succumbs in California.

Abram Baker, who several years ago resided on East Front street, the present home of Walter Scott, died on Monday at his home in Lordsburg, California, where for four years he was interested with his son, Dr. Vincent W. Baker, in an orange and lemon ranch.

After Mr. Baker left Plainfield he moved to Asbury Park, where he was a well known and familiar figure for several years. He went from Asbury Park to Lordsburg, California, where he continued to live up to the time of his death. He was a member of the First M. E. church, this city.

He is survived by a wife and four children, Mrs. J. C. Pierson and Mrs. Dr. W. F. Gaston, of this city; Dr. Vincent W. Baker and Miss Louise Baker, of Lordsburg. Mr. Baker was seventy-nine years old.

HELP OPPRESSED JEWS

Plainfield Hebrews Organize to Assist in Relief of Russian Hebrews.

QUICKLY RAISE $300

Former Assemblyman William Newcorn Made Chairman of Committee—Society Here to Be Permanent.

At the instigation of Jacob Schiff, of New York, who is in charge of the national movement to secure funds for the oppressed Jews in Russia, thirty or more Plainfielders met in the offices of Lawyer William Newcorn last night and formed a permanent organization to solicit local contributions. They entered into the movement with hearty sympathy and $300 was at once subscribed by those present.

The organization formed is to be known as the Plainfield Russian Relief Committee and the following officers were elected: Chairman, William Newcorn, vice chairman, Abram Hart; secretary, H. Adelberg; treasurer, Moses Schloss. Chairman Newcorn outlined the purpose of the gathering when it was first called to order and he afterward appointed various committees to take care of the different affairs in connection with the movement. These were as follows: Subscription, Abram Hart, M. Leichtentritt, M. Abrams, Nathan Meyer, S. Hochberger, William Schloss and Herman Schwed; Ministerial committee to interest local clergymen, Kalmon Rothberg, J. Sacher and Moses Schloss; corresponding committee, H. Adelberg and H. C. Levy. All the work is to be purely non-sectarian, and it is probable a mass meeting will be held in the near future at which the plight of the Russian Jews can better be made known to the public.

Committees similar to the one organized last night have been formed all over the country, and hundreds of thousands of dollars are pouring into Banker Schiff. In Newark several thousands of dollars were subscribed in one day and the fund has now reached a total of nearly $8,000. With last night's start of $300 it is thought the opporessed people have the sympathy of all Plainfielders and that the local fund will reach a good sized figure before the money is sent to New York. Contributions may be sent to William Newcorn or Treasurer Schloss.

PUMPING STATION PLANS PRESENTED

PUBLIC HEARING TO BE HAD DECEMBER 4.

Plans for the installation of a pumping station to be operated in connection with the sewage system and intended to cover the easterly and westerly sections of the city which cannot be sewered by gravity, were presented by Councilman Gloak at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night, and an ordinance providing for these improvements was put on first reading for the information of the members. A resolution offered by Mr. Gloak and adopted, fixed Monday night, December 4, as the time when the Common Council would grant a public hearing and act on the ordinance.

This action is in line with a previous one taken by the Common Council when it authorized the expenditure of money to investigate the advisability of installing a pumping station to cover that section of the city indicated.

Some of the streets included in the section proposed to be sewered include Randolph road, Park avenue, Arlington avenue, Arlington place, Grove street, Clinton avenue, McDowell street, Manson place, Monroe avenue, West Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh and Eighth streets and Hobart avenue.

It is proposed to install mains, motors, vaults, walls and other necessary appurtenances. The ordinance does not indicate the cost of the improvement, and this information will be made known when the bids are advertised for and received.

SPECIAL SESSION TO PAY POLICE BILLS

COMMON COUNCIL TO MEET AGAIN ON MONDAY NIGHT.

Before the Common Council adjourned last night Mr. Tyler, chairman of the police committee, inquired about the police bills which were laid over at the regular meeting, pending a decision regarding the constitutionality of the police act under which the former police commissioners were appointed. He expressed a desire that the members adjourn to an early date to pay these bills, now that the standing of the councilmanic police committee had been determined.

Mr. Bullock said that he had been informed by a member of the police department that the police had received their money and signed the vouchers and he did not think it would be necessary to meet especially for that purpose. He said that he also heard that Mayor Buckle had advanced the money and if this was true he said that His Honor should be reimbursed as soon as possible.

Mr. Tyler said that it would be impossible for the money to be taken from the city funds, unless authorized by the Common Council and he thought it would be best to meet within a few days and settle the matter properly. Accordingly, on his motion, the members adjourned to meet on Monday night, November 20.

Mr. Gloak thought the bills could be paid last night, but was informed that they were not in regular form for presentation and payment and that probably a sufficient amount of time had not been allowed between the time of receiving the decision and the Common Council meeting to put them in the usual form for payment.

SCADUTO MAY KNOW VERDICT BEFORE NIGHT

MURDER TRIAL DRAWING NEAR TO CLOSE.

The case of Luigi Scaduto, charged with the murder of Lorenz Fousch, a fellow Italian fish peddler, is still on in the Union County Court today. The prosecution concluded its side this morning, when the defense was heard. It is likely that the case may go to the jury before night.

Among the witnesses called for the defense were Dr. Charles Lufburrow, who testified to the condition and treatment of the accused man, who was badly cut; Arthur C. Runyon and Frank Jones, employes at Scott's Press Work, who testified that while on their way home to dinner they saw two men wrestling and heard three pistol shots, but were unable to tell who did the shooting.

John J. Rafferty told about viewing the body of the dead man, and Louis Bezk and William Hand, the latter eleven years old, said that they saw two men wrestling in the road and heard pistol shots, but neither could tell who fired them. Several other witnesses will be called during the afternoon.

The musical features included piano and violin selections by Miss Clara Van Fleet and Martin A. Korff. There were also games and refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoagland were married by Rev. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, and the genial pastor was one of the participants in last night's affair.

CAPTURE CAR THIEVES

Detectives Take Five Prisoners After Exchange of Shots.

ONE MAN ESCAPES

Exciting Time Before Railroad Men Handcuff Their Prisoners—Merchandise Their Loot.

After a running fight across fields and swamps between Dunellen and Lincoln this morning, Mike Laveratt, one of the Jersey Central's best known detectives, assisted by Harry Gaffney, of the road force and Detective Totten, of Somerville, captured five of six men who had broken into and robbed a car of merchandise. In the pursuit, one of the gang drew a gun on Laveratt and made an attempt to shoot him but without success. The detective also drew a pistol and fired several shots before his quarry was brought to bay.

The prisoners taken were Frank Johnson, aged 22, of Newark; Frank Clark, aged 36, of Scranton, Pa.; Samuel Willis, aged 18, of Morton, Kan.; George Carroll, of Chicago, and Frank Martin, aged 36, of Elmira, N. Y. They were taken to Somerville and lodged in the county jail.

Laveratt received word early this morning that the men had entered the car just before the train to which it was attached had left Somerville and that the conductor had closed the door, locking them in. In a telegram it was stated that they would be carried through to Elizabeth and that he should have a force of police ready to take them out. When the train arrived at Elizabeth it was found that the gang had cut through the car door and had lifted the staple, allowing them to get out. The car was filled with clothing and much of it had been taken.

Nothing daunted, Laveratt set out and soon located his men in the woods just west of Dunellen near the Greenbrook tanks. Securing Gaffney and Totten he surrounded the gang but all made a break as they closed in. Willis attempted to shoot Laveratt but his aim was poor and he with three others was soon handcuffed. Johnson was the hardest to capture and led Laveratt a merry chase through bushes, brooks and swamps, but finally tumbled into a hidden hole and was caught before he could get up. Laveratt was thoroughly drenched and covered with mud from the forced run but was still able to best Johnson when he showed fight.

The sixth man escaped toward Dunellen but afterward went over to New Market and boarded a Lehigh Valley train going east. Laveratt came to this city and after posting the local police took up the trial. All the men caught had on new sweaters and other clothing taken from the car and it is believed that hid a lot more near Lincoln.

EAGLES' NEW ROOMS.

Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, Took Possession of Them Last Night.

Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, F. O. E., took possession of its new quarters in the New Plainfield theatre building last night. No formal celebration marked the observance, but the members are planning to hold one within the next few weeks.

The rooms are located on the third floor of the building and will be used jointly with the Elks. They are handsomely fitted up and will make a splendid home for the organizations that are to occupy them. The walls are covered with paper of a soft green hue to harmonize with the carpet, while the wood finishings are in oak, matching the furniture.

The club rooms for both the Elks and the Eagles are on the second floor, each organization having a separate compartment.

A Touching Tribute.

A touching tribute of appreciation was witnessed at the Court House, Elizabeth, last night just before former Sheriff B. Frank Coriell left the place for the last time as a county official. The scrub women about the Court House met Mr. Coriell and one of their number presented him with a handsome bouquet of flowers. The woman making the presentation expressed, on behalf of the other women, her appreciation of past kindness and courtesy shown by Mr. Coriell during his term as sheriff. Mr. Coriell sincerely thanked the women.

HIDDEN DANGERS.

Nature Gives Timely Warnings That No Plainfield Citizen Can Afford to Ignore.

Danger signal No. 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They will warn you when the kidneys are sick. Well kidneys excrete a clear, amber fluid. Sick kidneys send out a thin, pale and foamy, or a thick, red, ill-smelling urine, full of sediment and irregular of passage.

Danger signal No. 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the coming of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Here's Plainfield proof:

Oliver H. Voorhees, job printer, living at 21 Stone street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I was suffering from kidney weakness for a long time, due, probably, to my being compelled to be on my feet so much of the time. On arising in the morning, I would find myself very weak, and suffering from severe pain in the back and sides, accompanied with headache. The kidney secretions were of bad odor, and the desire to pass them was too frequent. I could not seem to find either a doctor to cure me, or a medicine that would help me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's pharmacy. Before I took three boxes I was relieved of my aches and pains, and my kidneys were well again."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

THE MAN BEHIND THE OVERCOAT

likes to feel so far as "looks" are concerned that he is "It." A soiled coat, worn and crumpled collar, ragged button holes and a generally run down and hung-in-the-garret-all-summer-look, certainly detracts the best of all overcoats and puts the man behind it in the undressed class. "A specialty of ours"—Velvet Collars put on while you wait. The Remedy! The only one! Take the overcoat to is a heavenly phenomenom that struck fear to the hearts of our ancestors. They would have received the Gas Heater in the same spirit of wonder. A stove, easily carried from room to room, turned on and off at will, and ready at a minute's notice would have savored to them of witchcraft. Today it is a necessity. We sell Gas Heaters at $1.50. Connections and tubing free.

Rev. Charles E. Herring will give an illustrated lecture on his trip in Spain before the Men's Club of the First Presbyterian church, tomorrow night.

In the interest of the American Seamen's Friend Society, a representative of that organization will speak at the Congregational church on Sunday night.

Rev. Doremus Scudder, who has been a missionary to Hawaii for several years, will speak at the Congregational church on Thursday night, November 23.

An entertainment consisting of Thanksgiving stories and tableaux will be given in Vincent chapel Friday night under the auspices of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church.

F. C. Iglehart, of New York, who recently moved to this city, has been engaged as bass soloist at the First Presbyterian church, to succeed Howard Lewis, who has moved to New York.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the German Reformed church will hold its regular monthly meeting this Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. William Hurst on Netherwood avenue.

The Young Men's Christian Associations of North America began on Sunday a week of prayer services. At the East Side branch of the New York Association Don O. Sheldon spoke on "Life at Its Best." Mr. Sheldon paid a tribute to Sir George Williams, the founder of the Young Men's Christian Association, whose burial will take place in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, tomorrow. Mr. Sheldon said in part: "The career of Sir George Williams is typical. For more than fifty years he has been representative of a growing body of business men in all parts of the world, who have taken an aggressive part in the work of the churches. In his young manhood friends of his family, noticing his unusual zeal in Christian work, said to his parents: 'It is too bad. Your son is insane on the subject of religion. He will be no good for business now, and you will have to take care of him all the days of your life.' In his nineteenth year he went to London and became a clerk in a large drapery establishment. He prayed that he might find another yong man who would cooperate with him in working for the betterment of the young men in the house. He soon found his man. The two united their efforts. Others became associated with them, and on June 6, 1844, the first Young Men's Christian Association was founded. Other London business houses took up the work, and it steadily extended into England and America. There are now 7,676 associations at work in nearly every nation. George Williams did not sacrifice his business prospects and his social position when he thus gave himself unstintedly to Christian activity. He became the head of the business house which he entered as a clerk sixty years ago. He was one of London's leading philanthropists. Queen Victoria knighted him. He will be remembered as one of the most widely useful Christian laymen of his time. His career taught that no man makes a mistake when he gives the utmost that is in him to the highest forms of Christian service. He had the Christian spirit and it worked itself out in thought and feeling and conduct. Hence the whole Christian world mourns his loss and ascribes to him honor for his vigorous Christian career."

TO CONTEST GAME LAWS

A Meeting of Huntsmen Was Held in Newark Monday.

NUMBER FALL VICTIMS

Two Are Dying of Accidents Received While Hunting Game.

As a result of the wholesale arrests of sportsmen made Saturday, under the new game law in this State, which went into effect on Friday, an indignation meeting was held in Newark Monday. A committee was named to get a list of the men fined as a preliminary, it is said, to carrying the cases up in the courts for a test of the law.

One of the provisions of the statute prohibits the taking of game out of the State, and great activity of game officers at the ferries is a consequence. There is an incentive for the twenty-four game wardens in the fact that, besides an annual salary of $500, each receives two-thirds of the fines collected on his evidence. A number of New Jersey residents who took ferries in the course of their journey home, it is said, fell victims to the game wardens' activity.

The hunters who are out in all parts of the State report that quail are very scarce, while rabbits are abundant. One train leaving Dover on Friday night, carried 60 hunting dogs, 100 gunners, and more than 500 rabbits.

There have been already two accidents due to the hunting season, the victims of which may die. Charles Dougherty, two years old, of Stanhope, was shot on Saturday by his four-year-old brother, Davis, Jr. The older child picked up the rifle belonging to his cousin Frank, who had come in from a hunting expedition. He tugged at the trigger until it went off.

Benjamin Trimmer, 35 years old, of East High Bridge, was mortally wounded by a shotgun in the hands of his companion, David Thompson. A twig caught the trigger of Thompson's gun. The charge entered Trimmer's back. He was sent to the Easton Hospital.

John Fox, the armless gunner of Milltown, who is 73 years old, shot his first rabbit of the season on Saturday. He watches for the rabbits days before the law is off. With the stump of one arm supporting his gun, holding in his mouth the end of a string tied to the trigger, he takes aim, gives a jerk of his head, and almost always lands his game. Fox then goes home for help to load his gun.

TOO KEEP KIAOCHAU.

German Troops to Be Withdrawn from Town of That Name.

Berlin, Nov. 15.—The report that Germany would restore Kiaochau to China in January is explained to have had its origin in the fact that Germany intends to withdraw her troops from the Chinese town of Kiaochau, which is outside the German sphere, although it was occupied temporarily at the time of the Boxer troubles. The withdrawal of the troops was not instigated by Japanese pressure, as has been suggested.

FORMER MAYOR FISK MADE A MASTER MASON

ANCHOR LODGE CONFERS THE DEGREE ON FOUR OTHER CANDIDATES.

In celebration of the conferring of the Master Mason's degree on five candidates, one of whom was former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F and A. M., enjoyed a social period last night. In all 175 members of the order were present, visitors being in attendance from New York, Brooklyn, Boston, Bayonne, Elizabeth, Bound Brook and Westfeld.

The communication chamber was lavishly decorated with large palms, greens and cut flowers, presenting an attractive appearance. Following the work, informal addresses were made and several selections were given by a quartette composed of Elmer E. Runyon, Morris Van Arsdale, Bertram and Louis V. Tallamy.

In conclusion, the brethern adjourned to the banquet room, where an excellent collation was served by Caterer W. W. Warnock.

"OLD FAITHFUL" LAID LOW.

Apple Tree of Honored History Chopped Down by Firemen.

An apple tree that has stood for nearly fifty years was cut down yesterday in the yard back of fire headquarters. Its end is interesting because it is one of the two trees that remained of a once extensive orchard that used to take in all the land about headquarters.

The old tree was a great bearer. Year after year its branches bore thick clusters of fruit, and after it passed into the hands of the fire department the firemen took it under their care and kept it clear of pests, and healthy. It rewarded them with unfailing yields every summer, and they finally dubbed it "Old Faithful." Two years ago "Old Faithful" started to rot, in spite of all the men could do to save it. It was finally decided that the axe was the only thing for it, and Driver Jaeger, of the Chemical engine, brought it down. Jaeger spent the rest of the day sawing "Old Faithful" up into firewood, so that the hardworking old tree will serve the firemen even in death. It is a curious thing that rotted as the tree was, last summer it still bore fruit of excellent character.

THANKS TO MR. GLOAK.

Business Streets Will Be Sprinkled When Necessary.

As a committe on the whole, the Common Council last night placed the matter of street sprinkling in charge of Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett, relieving Chairman Wilson of further worry over the subject. Councilman Gloak, who couldn't understand why the chairman does not bother the other members of the committee by calling them together, brought up the subject. He urged that some relief be given the merchants against clouds of dust.

After some discussion it was ordered that Commissioner Gavett be given charge of the work and that the water wagons should be used in the business center whenever he deems it necessary. Chairman Wilson is relieved of the arduous task.

Mrs. Eugene Leach Dead.

The funeral will be held from her late home, 82 Given street, tomorrow night, at 7:30. Interment will be in the Samptown cemetery at the convenience of the family.

TO INVESTIGATE CHIEF KIELY

police commission act of 1905 is that the only body in this city having authority to try the charges against a police officer of the character described in the committee's report is the Common Council. It would, of course, be competent for the Common Council to pass an ordinance by an affirmative vote of not less than four-fifths of its entire membership and thereby to designate and appoint the board of police or other board, officer or authority by whom such charges shall be heard, tried and determined; but until such an ordinance shall have been passed the Common Council is the only body having authority in the premises.

"In the case of Carey, chief of police, vs. board of police of the city of Plainfield, the Supreme Court reviewed a trial, conviction and sentence of suspension of Mr. Carey under a similar statute, and set aside the proceedings on the ground that the Common Council alone had power to try Mr. Carey and subject him to the sentence of suspension, and that that power could not be delegated to the board of police.

"The present statute gives the Common Council power to delegate the authority, but only in the manner above pointed out, namely, by ordinance adopted by affirmative vote of not less than four-fifths of the entire membership of the Common Council. My conclusion is that in order to properly dispose of any charges against the present chief of police, such charges should first be made specific and reduced to writing and signed by the person or persons making the same and presented to the Common Council and filed with the city clerk; that thereupon a time and place should be fixed for the trial Certified copies of the charges and of the resolution fixing time and place for trial should be served upon the accused person not less than five days before the time fixed for the trial. The accused person should be allowed counsel for his defense. The trial should be conducted so as to carry out the intent of the act which is therein expressly declared to be: 'to give every person against whom a charge for any cause may be preferred under this act a fair trial upon such charge, and every reasonable opportunity to make his defense, if any he has or chooses to make.'"

This is the resolution offered by Mr. Tyler and adopted:

"Resolved, That the committee on police of this Common Council be and hereby is appointed and declared to be the committee of members of said Common Council upon the subject of the police department in relation to the affairs of said department which are or shall be within the jurisdiction of said Common Council with all powers and authority conferred upon such committee and its members by law."

On October 24 the councilmanic police committee filed a report with the Common Council, in which it was stated:

"During the past year evidence has accumulated tending to show that the example of our own chief of police has for a long time been prejudicial to correct discipline and efficiency. Rumors and statements apparently well founded have from time to time come to the board, the correctness of which can only be ascertained by a thorough investigation. Among those which appear to be well supported by evidence are the following:

"Wilful disobedience of orders in neglecting to enforce certain provisions of the hack ordinance and of the liquor ordinance, after repeatedly being instructed so to do.

"1st. By frequenting places where intoxicating liquors are sold or furnished while on duty.

"2d. By unduly neglecting to pay just debts.

"3d. By permitting police headquarters to be made a lounging place by parties not connected with the force.

"4th. By intoxication.

"5th. By permitting a person not a member of or the police force to exercise authority and control over or concerning persons confined in the city jail and by permitting the release of such prisoners without due authority.

"6th. By collecting political assessments from members of the force in a manner demoralizing to good order and discipline.

"7th. By collecting a large amount of reward moneys for another officer of the force, under a promise to pay over the same when collected, and neglecting to pay over the said moneys to said officer, or to otherwise account for them to said officer.

"8th. By permitting the employment of officers of the force for the distribution, on the day of the primaries, of ballots favorable to certain powerful political influences."

Clothes Caught Fire.

A suit of clothes hanging too near a stove in the cleaning establishment in the old hospital building, on Muhlenberg place, caught fire last night shortly before 6 o'clock. Because of the use of gasolene in cleaning it flared up and filled the room with flame. An alarm was turned in from box 45, but the fire had been put out when the department arrived. The damage will reach $100, half of which is placed on the clothing. A LeVine, the proprietor, had his arms and face burned in extinguishing the flames.

MR. M. Stelle, of Central avenue, is seriously ill at his home.

S. B. OPDYKE, JR., GETS STORM SEWER CONTRACT

ROUTINE MATTERS AT THE COMMON COUNCIL MEETING.

S. B. Opdyke, Jr., of New York, was awarded the contract for constructing the Richmond street storm sewer at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last night, his bid being the lowest of two submitted for this work. Mr. Opdyke's bid was accepted and the contract awarded to him on a resolution offered by Mr. Wilson, chairman of the committee on streets and sewers, and the Mayor and city clerk were authorized to sign the necessary papers for the city.

The other bidder was Richards & Gaston, of Somerville, and on motion of Mr. Wilson that firm's check, offered as security, was returned.

On Mr. Wilson's motion an ordinance providing for further improvement of the sewer system and one providing for the macadamizing of Sherman avenue, were called up and adopted on third reading.

Mayor Buckle appointed Frank Ingraham, call man, to the vacancy in the regular fire department, caused by the resignation of Lewis M. Dunavan, and the Common Council confirmed the appointment.

Mr. Bullock inquired of Mr. Tolles, chairman of the finance committee, whether the $7,000 recently given to the fire department in anticipation of taxes had been transferred to the fire department fund, his object being to save, if possible, the interest on that amount, as taxes are now coming in and this money is available for department use. Mr. Tolles said that the money had been transferred and that there would only be two months' interest to pay.

To Cancel Citizenship.

By direction of the Court, County Clerk James C. Calvert, after having received a letter from Secretary of State Root, drawing his attention to the fraudulent manner in which Somer Somerman, of Pittsburg, Pa., had obtained naturalization papers in the Union County Court, wrote to the Secretary of State that the courts here were ready to take proceedings against Somerman, providing the whereabouts of the man could be made known.

AMUSEMENTS.

While the songs in "Simple Simon Simple," the new rural operatic extravaganza, have been selected from the pens of a dozen different composers, they have been chosen with regard to their special fitness for the situation and character. Among the best known and most popular numbers may be mentioned "Simple Simon Simple," by Carlos Curti, chef d' orchestra of the Waldorf-Astoria in New York; "The Bachelor Maid," by Charles Peurner, composer of many operatic works and writer of the music for Mrs. Fiske's biblical play, "Mary of Magdala;" "Pickaninny Mose," by Rollin Bond; "Oskaloose Lou," by J. Arndt Morris; "Juno," by Bert Howard, and "Dear Old College Days," by Theodore Bendix. "Simple Simon Simple" will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night, November 16.

B. E. Forrester's bright, breezy and spirited musical comedy, "Bankers and Brokers," headed by the cleverest of fun makers, Yorke and Adams, will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night. The comedy is one of those rattling, humorous conceits which is ever popular, filled to the brim with charming satire, upto date specialtfes and all that goes to form two and one-half hours of solid pleasure and wholesome laughter. A bevy of pretty girls and a coterie of capable comedians coupled with a magnificent scenic equipment formes an ensemble resplendent in its entirety.

Blaney's "The Curse of Drink," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre Saturday night, is a melodrama that is sure to cause a sensation, especially in the top of the house. Thrill follows thrill with such rapidity that the "gods" will be allowed little respite for a breathing spell.

Miss Vivia Brewster, the beautiful and accomplished young lady who is the prima donna soprano of the Aborn Production Company's revival of "Robin Hood," has no doubt proven another "find" for her managers. She was chosen for her peculiar fitness for the role of Maid Marian in "Robin Hood," and judging from the flattering reception she receives from her audiences nightly her management have under contract a future comic opera star who will be heard from very soon. Alice Neilsen began her operatic career in the chorus of Miss Vivia Brewster in "Robin Hood," at New Plainfield Theatre Monday Night.

The Bostonians, and later in the role of Maid Marian made such an impression that she was starred. Miss Brewster possesses a clear soprano voice of wonderful range and flexibility. She also has great personal magnetism. Miss Brewster and her associate principals, all of whom have made names in the field of comic opera, will appear here in a grand revival of "Robin Hood" on Monday night, November 20, at the New Plainfield theatre.

It is a most agreeable and acceptable performance of "Twelfth Night" which E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe invite favor at the Knickerbocker theatre, and it is a notable one. Miss Marlowe's Viola, already familiar, takes on new beauty with the passing of the years, and Mr. Sothern's Malvolio, revealed for the first time, provides a new and surprisingly competent addition to his gallery of Shakespearean portraits. It has been a long time since one of the poet's comedies has been more sympathetically and adequately staged. The play is one that lends itself capitally to the kind of adornment in scene, costume and accessory of which the modern stage manager is so fond, but the temptation to overdo these features has been resisted, and as a result the pictures, while rich and effective, are never obtrusively so, providing, as they should, merely an effective framing for the characters. Miss Marlowe's playing of Viola being already familiar to the public, interest in the performance to an extent centers in Mr. Sothern, who as Malvolio takes up a character differing in most respects from any he has attempted since he became a familiar figure in the public eye. His Malvolio is a distinctly human personage—the word is used advisedly—and while discosing him all his absurd and fantastical pomposity, he happily never once makes the very common mistake of bringing him down to the level of his fellows at Olivia's house, but skilfully cmopasses the temptation to play him in the too obvious low comedy vein. The steward's quixotic follies are sufficiently emphasized, but not so much so that one fails to see in him an underlying dignity, which might have been a virtue but for the monumental conceit with which nature has coupled it. Mr. Sothern's comedy method is most fluent, and it is probable that few actors have given a better quality of unctuous humor to the famous scene in which, cross-gartered and smiling, he makes his peacock-like passage before his mistress.

MAY HAVE GOLF COURSE.

Newark Club to Increase Membership.

There is a strong possibility that the city of Newark will be able to boast of a first class eighteen hole golf links before another season comes around. Whether this will be accomplished depends almost entirely upon the members of the Newark Golf Club, which is shortly to lose its course. Paul Heller, one of the best known golfers of the Forest Hill Filed Club, says there is no good reason why the Field Club s course could not be increased from nine to eighteen holes.

Property could be secured and there would be absolutely no danger of encroachment for many years. All that is needed at Forest Hill to warrant the club going ahead with an eighteen-hole course is an assurance of seventy-five or 100 new members. There are a trifle more than 200 members at Forest Hill now, and with a total ranging anywhere between 300 and 400, everything could be made satisfactory from the financial end.

NEGRO LYNCHERS.

Atlanta Mob Has White Man Ready to String Up.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 15.—An alleged attempt to criminally assault Ida Beavers, a six-year-old negro girl, so infuriated the negroes in the Darktown section of Atlanta yesterday that J. Z. Justice, a white man, came near being lynched. When a police detail arrived they found Justice in the hands of a mob of 500 blacks and preparations in progress for lynching.

The police rescued Justice, and it was proved that he had no connection with the alleged assault.

WASHING WITHOUT WATER
Is Like Trying to Get Rid of Dandruff Without Herpicide.
Did you ever see any one trying to wash themselves without soap or water?
If you did what would you say of him?
It is every bit as foolish to try to get rid of Dandruff and to prevent Baldness by feeding the germs which cause it, with Canthrarides, Vaseline, Glycerine and similar substances which form the principal ingredients of most so-called Hair Vigors.
Newbro's Herpicide is successful because it attacks and kills the parasitic germ which feeds on the hair roots.
It is the original and only genuine scalp germicide manufactured.
Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Fisyne," Etc.

Copyright, 1902, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

"Yes, I have cousins there," continued Pelham, as though reading Benton's thoughts. "But it is long since we met. You are the man, as I happen to know, who showed so much courtesy to Lieut. Winston, as well as to Jack Chilton. Now you can do me a favor if you should see Dr. Chilton, and that is, tell him for me that the men at the front utterly disapprove the doings of that self-styled citizens' committee at the rear. Those people," he went on disdainfully, "are too old or too feeble-minded to fight like men. They stab like women."

"It will comfort them—or rather the doctor—to get such a message from you, Capt. Pelham," answered Benton, almost eagerly, "and I shall see that he does get it. I shall write at once. You can do me a favor, too if you will. An old school friend of mine, Paul Ladue, is a staff officer in Ewell's division. Give him a greeting for me, will you?"

"Ladue," said Pelham, his fine features clouding instantly. "I fear—I heard— Oh, Capt. Lamar," he called, "what Lieut. Ladue was it brought that note Wednesday morning to Gen. Stuart?"

"Paul Ladue, Eleventh Alabama," was the prompt answer. "Killed right here in front of the battery not half an hour afterwards."

CHAPTER XX.

A CRY FROM THE AMBULANCE.

The autumn, the wasted autumn has gone, "the winter of our discontent" indeed has come. For weeks the army hangs there inert and chafing along the Potomac, while Lee and his bronzed veterans saunter away through the Shenandoah, "feeding on the fat of the land." Marveling at the inaction of McClellan, Stuart rides back with 1,800 horse and two light guns and, of course, Pelham; and, just as he did a few months earlier down on the peninsula, jogs contemptuously clear round the bewildered and indignant divisions, laughing at the effort of Pleasanton to catch or others to head him. McClellan says his cavalry is too wearied and broken down to accomplish anything, and the president mildly asks what it has been doing to so fatigue it. Another correspondence of complaints begins, and finally ends at Warrenton, when the order comes early in November that severs once and for all McClellan's connection with the Army of the Potomac. He had done much to make it, God knows. He was great as an organizer and instructor. He had the faith and regard of most of the officers and the love of all the men. It was in battle and campaign that he failed them, not they him, for mortal man had never deeper devotion than was accorded Little Mac until he took the field. Even now, this sad November day, there are scores of officers and soldiers whose faces are furrowed with tears as they see him ride away. There are many commands that would gladly recall him. There are regiments that could not be made to cheer him after Antietam that mourn' his going now, even in the hard-used First corps.

Changes, too, have occurred in many a minor grade. The Fifth corps mourns the loss of the brilliant, gifted, handsome soldier whose head is demanded as one result of the woful mismaneuvers about Manassas. Old names appear at the head of grand divisions, as Burnside calls the doubled corps. New names, comparatively, appear at corps headquarters. New brigadiers, a full crop, ride up from the roster of field officers, and not so many now hail from the ranks of influential but unskilled civilians. New regiments have been grafted on old brigades; new blood injected into old and toughened veins. It is high time our friends of the Iron name had reinforcement, for despite Wisconsin's praiseworthy course of recruiting veteran commands as well as raising new ones, their ranks are wofully thin; so, as neither Badger nor Hoosier regiment comes to swell the Army of the Potomac, there is assigned to the old brigade, thereby assuring its distinctive western character, a brand new, ambitious and, as it turns out, most pugnacious and fightful array of Wolverines, "all teeth and toe-nails," say the Badgers, who take them under advisement, and so the much-vaunted menagerie is complete again.

Changes, too, have come to the staff, and, to Benton's blushing delight, he is called upon at Catlett's to "wet" a new commission, recommended by his old general and heartily approved by the new. It is Capt. Benton, additional aide-de-camp now, and he rides for the time being with a division commander famous for staying qualities, if not for urbanity, a man who is of the fight-to-a-finish mold, and would hang every rebel from Maine to Mexico. We have had few as yet of these vehement patriots in high places. We have had far too many, storms Stanton in Washington, of those who would handle treason with gloves, furnish guards for the homesteads of hard-fighting chiefs on the southern side, hold commerce and communion through flags of truce with former comrades across the lines. "We must stop it, by heaven!" says Stanton, splitting a table top with one blow of his fist. "We must drumhead and shoot 'em," says Fred's new commander, "and I'll hang the first man of my staff that I catch."

GEORGIANS REVOLT.

Ready to Resist Russian Force—Anarchy in Caucasus.

London, Nov. 15.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Mail represents Georgia as being lost to Russia. He says that 24,000 Georgians, armed with modern rifles, hold the country and are ready to repel three important Russian forces that are converging on them. Two army corps will be required to reconquer the country, but even one cannot be spared owing to the general anarchy in the Caucasus. Moreover, the railway men are in sympathy with the rebels and they have stopped communication.

The official view in St. Petersburg is that only vast trasure and uch bloodshed will now save the Caucasus for Russia.

OFFERED PRAYERS, ORDERED TO HADES

WIFE SUES FOR ALIMONY, BUT THE COURT TELLS COUPLE TO MAKE UP.

Trenton, Nov. 15—Lambert Rickey and his wife are trying to get along together at the suggestion of Vice Chancellor Bergen. Mrs. Rickey sued for $7.50 alimony each week. The court decided two weeks ago to allow the couple until today to make up.

There was testimony as to several violent quarrels, in one of which Rickey told his wife to go to the devil when she asked if she should not pray for him.

Counsel for Rickey said in court that the couple have been living together for more than a week and that the husband reports that their life thus far has been peaceful, quiet and happy.

Vice Chancellor Bergen said that though the quarrels in the Rickey home were doubtlessly somewhat aggravated by Mrs. Rickey, yet the husband was not entirely without blame.

"When a man marries he must expect to have a few quarrels," the court added.

Mrs. Rickey is worth $20,000. Her husband is an expressman and well to do.

Arrangements Made for Inspection.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., met last night and announced that the annual inspection would be held on Tuesday night, November 28. Augustus C. Lindsley, of Wadsworth Post, No. 75, of Somerville, will inspect the post. Invitations were sent to the posts at Somerville, Rahway, Dahlgren and Kilpatrick posts, of Elizabeth, to be present. The Women's Relief Corps has also been invited. On that occasion officers will be nominated by Post 73.

VAN ORDEN LOST.

No Cause of Action Against Alex. Kane.

The contract case of Daniel Van Orden against Alex. Kane was tried before Justice Nash and a jury of twelve men, yesterday afternoon. The jury was out but a short time, when it returned a verdict of no cause for action. V. W. Nash, Jr., Esq., represented the plaintiff and Francis J. Blatz, Esq., the defendant.

Mr. Van Orden sought to recover $145, the balance of $175, claimed to be due the plaintiff for work performed in changing and altering the Fillmore Avenue Baptist church into two seven-room flats. According to the testimony there was a question as to whether there was a written, verbal or any contract. The plaintiff claimed that he started work under a verbal contract, which was afterwards to be reduced to writing and which he claimed was signed by him in the law offices of C. M. Dolliver, but which Mr. Kane refused to sign on the grounds that there was no surety clause. Mr. Van Orden continued to work until September 19, when his wife died. He then stopped for a time and when he returned to work he found other contractors on the job, hence the suit.

Mr. Kane's defense was that the plaintiff offered no surety, that he was employed by the day and the verbal contract was void because it was agreed to on Sunday. The following jurors served: Henry Paul, Harold Durar, Andrew McKeon, W. W. Coriell, George Dean, Henry Buckley, Abram VanCleef, Cornelius vanHerwerden, Andrew Love, Sr., John Ross, Abram Nelson and Edward Willis. Counsel for plaintiff gave notice of appeal after the trial.

Musical Treat Promised.

The third annual concert by the VanEps Brothers and William Mac Clymont, which is always a delightful affair, will be given in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium on Thursday night, December 7.

FREEHOLDERS' WORK.

Somerset Board Does Routine Business.

The meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders yesterday in the Court House at Somerville was attended by all the members. According to the new law the old members of the Board hold over until January 1, when the newly-elected members will be sworn in.

Rev. C. P. Case, of Franklin Park, asked that the approach to the Franklin Park Reformed church be macadamized, but the Board refused to take action until Friday morning at 10 o'clock, when the members will meet there to go over the road with State Supervisor Hutchinson.

Counsel Frech announced that a verdict of $19.32 had been awarded Harry W. Hoffman against the Board for placing a pipe under the road in Bernards township. The bills of costs and judgment was laid over until the next regular meeting.

Messrs. Emmons and Demler and Engineer Doughty were appointed to examine into the matter of the construction of the bulkhead at the foot of the Washington avenue bridge in North Plainfield.

The Board will meet November 21 to pay election bills.

SEEKS INJUNCTION.

Plainfield Woman and Others in a Western Civil Case.

Mrs. Caroline T. Lincoln, of West Eighth street, and the Blackwell Hotel Company, a New York corporation, owner and lessee, respectively, of the Lincoln Hotel, at Fourth avenue and Madison street, Seattle, Wash., have filed an application in the Federal court for an unjunction against the city of Seattle on the regrade of Third avenue, the biggest improvement work at present under way in the city. The complainants assert that the regrade operations will injure the business of the hotel to a serious degree by making a heavier grade than at present, between Third and Fourth avenues.

Federal Judge Hanford has signed an order summoning the municipal authorities to appear before him and show why an unjunction should not be issued. The New York Hotel Company has a five years' lease on the hotel property. It is one of the most aristocratic hotels of the city, and the building alone cost $200,000, and is contructed on property worth $125,000.

DR. CHAMBLISS IN CHARGE.

Baptist Divine Led Services at Monroe Avenue M. E.

The special services at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church were continued last night, when Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, was in charge. He gave an earnest talk from the text found in John 4:10, "Jesus answered and said unto her, if thou knewest the gift of God and who it is that saith to thee, give me to drink, thou wouldst have asked of Him and He would have given thee living water."

One of the many thoughts presented by Dr. Chambliss was that God needs his people for his satisfaction and pleasure, disputing the often accepted belief that God can get along without anyone.

During the service Mrs. Robert Humpstone sang a soprano solo, "Come Uuto Me." Tonight Rev. T. C. Horsfield, of the Brooklyn City Mission and Tract Society, will have charge. He is well known here, where he has spoken at the Y. M. C. A. He is also a talented singer.

ANOTHER BIG CROWD.

St. Joseph's Fair Proved to be a Strong Drawing Card.

Another large crowd attended the fair being given by the members of St. Joseph's church in Saengerbund hall, last night. The dancing was the principal feature, music being furnished by Suhr's Imperial orchestra. Miss Emily Henry, of New York, a little girl of eight years, sang several songs delightfully, and Edward LaPorte and Percy Bailey gave a blackface sketch.

Miss Henry will again sing tonight and Miss Eganey will recite. The programme for tonight will be in charge of the Children of Mary.

For Mrs. McKinley, the trustees and noted guests a platform has been erected. There will be no set address.

WHO WILL BE SPEAKER?

Topic of Conversation at the State House Gathering.

MANY CANDIDATES

Some Talk of Randolph Perkins, of Union County — Number of Leaders on Hand Yesterday.

The assembling at the State House in Trenton yesterday of a majority of the members-elect of the next Legislature, with many State leaders and lesser politicians, was productive of several surprises. It had been anticipated that when the preliminary slate making began yesterday the Essex and Hudson delegations would be on hand and would at least give some intimation as to their wishes concerning the organization of the next House.

Instead the twelve Republicans from Hudson absented themselves entirely from the gathering, and the Essex men devoted themselves almost exclusively to becoming acquainted with their fellow members and gossiping generally about the coming session.

There was not a word to indicate that any understanding had been reached between the Hudson and Essex members, but on the contrary Assemblyman William P. Martin, who had been chosen to lead the Essex delegation, declared that the men from his county were free from all alliances and did not propose to enter into any, for the present at least.

In the absence of anything resembling a definite slate for the organization of the House, there were nearly a dozen more or less openly avowed candidates for the position of Speaker. Most aggressive among these were Samuel K. Robbins, of Burlington, and John R. Mills, of Morris. Mr. Robbins had been in the field for some time, and up to this time seems to have held his own. He has developed a strong following in the South Jersey counties, is said to be favorably looked upon by the administration forces and, in the event of a decision that the speakership should go to South Jersey, would, it is said, be acceptable to the Colby followers, who will be at least a potent factor in the organization of the House.

Mr. Mills and his friends lost no chance to further the claims of the Morris county man, and expressed themselves as well pleased with his chances of success.

Mr. Barber, of Mercer, was a receptive candidate for Speaker. He made no effort to secure votes at this time, but should occasion arise that would seem to offer him a chance, he is prepared to jump into the contest at a moment's notice. Mr. Elvins, of Atlantic City, did some quiet missionary work in his own behalf, and was looked upon as a candidate to be reckoned with in the event of the speakership being conceded to South Jersey. Messrs. Babie and Heck, who comprise the Bergen delegation, both appeared as aspirants for the speakership, Mr. Mabie somewhat aggressively and Mr. Heck among his closest associates.

The selection of the Speaker will, it was generally conceded, hinge largely on the determination of the Colby followers regarding the leadership. Mr. Martin, of Essex, was frequently spoken of for this position, but it soon developed that there was considerable feeling among the old members present against the selection of a first year man for the place. In the event of too strong an opposition to this plan, it was rumored that the Colby followers would be willing to support Randolph Perkins, of Union, with a view to cementing the friendship said to be growing between the delegations from Essex and Union counties

With Senator Bradley, of Camden, slated for the presidency of the Senate, there was not much interest in the organization of that body.

Senator McKee was out as an active candidate for leader of the majority, for which position Senator Hillery, of Morris, was also boomed by his friends. Senator Horner, of Burlington, was possibly in the field, but will probably not press his candidacy unless it shall develop that his associate in the House, Mr. Robbins, is out of the speakership fight. In the event of Mr. Mills being bowled out of the speakership, Mr. Hillery is regarded as one of the strongest candidates for the Senate leadership.

Among the leaders on hand yesterday who took an active interest in the affairs in the corridors were State Treasurer Frank O. Briggs, ex-Senator William M. Johnson, of Bergen; Vivian Lewis, Clerk in Chancery; State Assessor David Baird, of Camden; Banking Commissioner David O. Watkins, of Gloucester; ex-Speaker Benjamin Jones and Colonel Harry Potter, of Essex. Major Carl Lentz, the erstwhile boss of Essex, was there, but spent most of his time in the office of the State Board of Equalization of Taxes, of which he is a member.

SUNDAY GOLF TO BE CARRIED TO COURT

Advocates of Proposed Change of Country Club Constitution Hit Upon a Scheme.

WHAT THEIR PLAN IS

Will Overrule President at Meeting and Play on Sunday Hoping for Expulsion—Then Fight for Reinstatement.

Believing that they have been unfairly treated in their demand to have the course of the Plainfield Country Club open on Sunday afternoon after 1 o'clock, some members of the Plainfield Country Club have decided to fight the matter out in the courts. It is proposed to have a friendly suit instituted to determine the question as to whether a two-thirds or majority vote is necessary to amend the organization's constitution in order to allow Sunday play.

The advocates of Sunday golf think their request is well within reason. They have asked that the course be open on Sunday after 2 o'clock, that the clubhouse be kept closed and that no caddies be employed. Being denied this by a vote, they will now put forth every effort to secure what might be termed a "wide open" condition of affairs at the club. In other words, they will seek to have the course and clubhouse open after 1 o'clock in the afternoon and the privilege of hiring caddies and securing refreshments.

Two eminent lawyers, John W. Griggs and John Parsons, have given an opinion that a two-thirds vote to change the constitution of the club is necessary, while two equally learned barristers, R. V. Lindabury and William Hornblower, have given an opinion that a majority vote would be legal. These two opinions places the members in about the same position that they occupied originally and does not tend to settle the perplexing question. Neither side is willing to accept the opinion of the other side's counsel.

For the purpose of settling the matter as soon as possible, the advocates of Sunday golf have sent out notices to the club members asking them to attend a meeting to be held at the Casino on Thursday night, November 23, when another effort will be made to amend the constitution so that Sunday golf may be permitted. It is confidently believed that a majority vote favoring the amendment can be secured, but inasmuch as the constitution specifies a two-thirds vote it would be necessary for the president of the club, George P. Mellick to declare the amendment lost if it should be carried by a majority vote.

It is then the intention to pass the amendment over the president's ruling, and on that result about 100 members of the club will visit the course a week from Sunday for the purpose of playing. Of course, this fact would be known generally and the opponents of Sunday play are expected to report to the trustees of the club that the club's consitution has been violated. It will then be up to the trustees to expel all of the members who violate the constitution. The suspended members will appeal from the club's action and take the matter into the courts, where a friendly suit will follow between those favoring and those opposing Sunday play on the course. Of course, both factions will be represented by able counsel and it is hoped in this way to have the question of majority or two-thirds vote settled once and for all.

LONG TO BE TRIED FOR MURDER MONDAY

NEGRO PRISONER IS SERVED WITH COPY OF INDICTMENT.

Charles Long, who was indicted for the murder of Matthew Cunningham, and whose trial will take place Monday, was served yesterday, in the Mercer county jail, Trenton, with a copy of his indictment and a copy of the names of forty-eight jurors from whom twelve will be selected to consider his case.

When served with the papers Long said nothing, and his expression indicated that he did not know what the proceeding of service was. He never opened the documents, and when Prosecutor Crossley told him to hand the papers to W. Holt Apgar, who will defend him, he looked at the prosecutor and said "Um-um."

After committing the crime Long escaped and was tracked to the vicinity of South Plainfield, where he was finally made a prisoner by the Plainfield police. The hunt for the fugitive was a sensational one, but he finally surrended while working on a farm.

The papers were handed to Long by Deputy County Clerk John Matheson and Under Sheriff Harry V. Holden in the jail office, where Long was brought to acknowledge service.

With Captain Matheson and Under Sheriff Holden were Prosecutor William J. Crossley, County Detective Frank Munro and Constables William Hartman and Harry Potts.

TRUCK RAMMED BY CAR

Dunellen Man Badly Injured in Crash on West Front Street Last Night.

NOW AT THE HOSPITAL

Two Other Occupants of Vehicle Cut and Bruised—Motorman Failed to See Obstructions.

Traveling down West Front street at a speed of forty miles an hour late last night Main Line car No. 1935 crashed into the rear of a truck owned and driven by Michael A. Gallagher, of Dunellen, and turned it completely over, afterward tossing it to one side with Frank Kean and Harry Van Fleet, also of Dunellen, beneath. These two had been sleeping in the vehicle and knew nothing of their danger until they found themselves being lifted in the air. Kean was badly hurt and still lies unconscious at Muhlenberg Hospital in a serious condition. Gallagher was tossed from his seat into the road, but escaped with a few bruises, while Van Fleet was equally fortunate, getting off with a few cuts and general shakeup.

The car left the Watchung avenue terminus at 11:15 in charge of Motorman John O'Donnell and Conductor Leo Reese, both competent and capable men. The former had let his controller out to the last notch after passing Giraud avenue and was unaware that anything was ahead of him until almost directly upon the Gallagher truck. Contrary to the usual custom the owner had failed to hang a lantern from the rear axle and as the vehicle was but partially on the track the headlight did not reveal it.

When O'Donnell first saw the truck he reversed the current, but he was too near to avert the crash. The heavy vehicle was lifted up and deposited squarely on the horses, knocking them down and heaping everything in a confused mass against the sidewalk curb. The car was going so fast it went fully 150 feet before stopping and the noise of the collision aroused the entire neighborhood, many of the residents rushing from thir homes believing a house had fallen.

Among these were Councilman Herbert Buxton and Elvin E. Hoagland, who set about rescuing the imprisoned men. Buxton called the police patrol and Kean was hurried to the hospital, the others going to their homes. The tongue of the truck was across the neck of one of the horses and held it prisoner, while its mate had one leg shoved between the spokes of a wheel. Their rescuers had to use a crowbar in order to pry them out. Both animals were uninjured.

At the hospital this noon it was said that Kean's condition is critical. He has a fractured skull and concussion of the brain, besides many severe contusions. He is seventeen years old and has been employed as a laborer.

Gallagher and his assistants had been to Linden with a load of furniture and were returning home when the accident occurred. The truck was badly damaged.

SCADUTO IS CONVICTED

Italian Who Stabbed Fouchi to Death Found Guilty of Manslaughter.

SENTENCE DEFERRED

Jury Out Forty Minutes—Defendant Had Been Out On Bail And Is Ordered Locked Up.

Luigis Scaduto, the young Italian fish peddler who killed his rival, Lorenzo Fouchi, in a stabbing affray on North avenue, was this morning found guilty of manslaughter. The jury which heard his case retired at 10:25 and returned with the verdict at 11:05. Presocutor English at once ordered the prisoner taken in custody and locked up. Sentence was deferred for the present but it will probably be pronounced next Wednesday. The penalty for manslaughter is twenty years.

The case was practically concluded yesterday afternoon when the lawyers on both sides summed up. This morning when court resumed, the time was occupied by Judge Vail in making the charge. He cited the affray in detail, telling how the two men had quarrelled over the territory in which they sold fish and how their anger had led to knives being drawn. They sprang at each other and were fighting evenly when Fouchi drew a revolver and shot Scaduto through the cheek. This bore the prisoner in his plea of self defense but in some respects the court's view was against him. The judge declared a lesser charge could be brought and specified in that way.

Scaduto had been out on bail furnished by Mat Wade, of Elizabeth. His home is in New York, his trips to Plainfield being on certain days.

With the disposal of this case the charge of larceny preferred against Justice William F. Brown, of Roselle, by Mrs. Aurora Salvania, formerly of New Orange, but now of Philadelphia, was taken up and is still on.

RANDOLPH M. STELLE HAS PASSED AWAY

BRIGHT'S DISEASE CAUSED DEATH OF A WELL-KNOWN CITIZEN.

Randolph M. Stelle, aged fifty-nine years, son of the late Manning Stelle, died early this morning at his home in Central avenue, following an attack of Bright's disease. Until recently he was able to be about tiwn, but a turn for the worse in his illness hastened the end. During the past few days he was in an unconscions condition.

Mr. Stelle was one of Plainfield's best known citizens, and while he never took an active part in city affairs, he was public spirited and enjoyed a large friendship. He was born on the Stelle farm, where he lived the rest of his life. His father was one of Plainfield's leading citizens and for many years a deacon in the First Baptist church.

Mr. Stelle was for a long time engaged in the drug business under the firm name of Reynolds & Stelle, the pharmacy where the City National Bank is now located. Afterward Mr. Reynolds took the business and later it was sold to J. Howard Leggett.

For several years Mr. Stelle was a director of the First National Bank, and he was also an active member of the First Baptist church. A few years ago he married Miss Clara A. Mthey, of Jersey City, and she and three sons survive him, together with two half-sisters, Miss Julia Stelle and Mrs. William Randolph.

The funeral services will probably be held Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the home, and Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss will have charge.

Samuel Fish's Brother Dead.

William Edgar Fish, of New York, a brother of Samuel Fish, of the Manganese Steel Safe Works, died at Muhlenberg Hospital last night, following a long illness with a complication of troubles. He came to Plainfield Monday to visit his brother and was removed to the hospital. His early home was in Connecticut, and he was married. Owing to his illness he had been out of business for some time.

FRIENDS IN CONFERENCE

Half-Yearly Meeting of Plainfield and Shrewsbury District is in Session.

REPORTS ARE READ

Accounts of Geneva Peace Conference and of First Day School Work Are Given—Some Wholesome Talks.

The half-yearly meeting of the Religious Society of Friends of Plainfield and Shrewsbury began this morning at the meeting house on Watchung avenue and will continue until tomorrow nion. The meeting opened at 10:30 o'clock this morning for worship. John H. Shotwell, of Matawan, spoke on the topic, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye love one another." He dwelt at some length on the importance of loving one another and thus helping to fulfil the law of Christ.

Mr. Shotwell was followed by W. D. Williams, of this city, who spoke in the same line of thought as expressed by the first speaker.

Then followed the usual business session, when the reports were received from the constituent meetings. These reports were very satisfactory and indicated an encouraging condition.

J. Edward Borden, of Eatontown, was re-elected clerk and Margaret F. Vail as his assistant. Mr. Borden had charge of the meeting. After the business session adjournment was taken for dinner.

This afternoon was devoted to a report on the First-day School conference held last summer at Buckhill Falls, Pa. This was given by Sarah C. Hutchinson, of this city, and others who attended that conference. The reports showed that steady progress is being made in these schools.

Another interesting feature were the reports given by Phoebe C. Wright, of Manasquan, and Frances E. Baright, of California, concerning the Geneva Peace Conference held in Swithzerland. They both attended the conference. The first speaker is over eighty years old and has made the trip to Europe several times. Her report of the conference a remarkable one for clearness and detail.

Tonight the meeting will be of a social character and there will be a general discussion along the various lines of work in which the Friends are engaged.

Tomorrow morning there will be a business session of the ministers and elders, when reports of their work will be presented. This will be followed by a meeting for worship at 11 o'clock and at noon the conference will be concluded and dinner served.

Those in charge of serving dinner and supper include Clara S. Rushmore, Sarah C. Hutchinson, Sarah L. Vail, S. Fanny Stryker and Hannah E. Poole.

DAY NURSERY PLANS.

Matron Engaged to Have Charge of Institution.

The day nursery committee from the City Union, King's Daughters, met this morning for the purpose of planning for the proposed day nursery. It was decided to either engage a house of two or three rooms, and a yard for the children is essential. Quarters will be engaged in a few days. A matron has also been engaged. As soon as the committee arranges a few details her name will be announced.

An entirely wrong impression is abroad that this nursery is to cost $2,500 a year. That is the expense of the two nurseries at Orange, but here everything will be conducted as economically as possible and the expense will probably not exceed $1,500. The committee comprises Mrs. A. E. Faber, Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney, Mrs. Anna Most, Mrs. F. W. Jones, Miss DeLany, Miss Holly and Mrs. Charles A. Reed.

After Stolen Rig.

The local police received a telephone communication from New Brunswick, late last night, asking them to be on the lookout for a brown horse and black top buggy that had been stolen from a livery stable. The thief was said to have started in this direction but though a sharp lookout was maintained the rig was not sighted.

Marriage on Thanksgiving.

Miss Lillian M. Knight, of this city, and Charles Bueche, of Somerville, are to be married on Thanksgiving Day. The wedding will take place at the bride's home, the ceremony to be performed by Rev. A. C. McCrea, pastor of the First M. E. church.

Miss Georgianna Smith, of Netherwood, is home from a pleasure trip abroad.

DISTINGUISHED WOMAN ENDS LECTURE TOUR

MRS. FLORENCE HOWE HALL TALKS TO CLUBS IN SEVERAL STATES.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall has just returned from a lecture trip to New England and Pennsylvania. During her absence she addressed the Women's Club, of Coventry, R. I.; the New England Women's Club, of Boston, Mass.; Women's Club, of Athol, Mass.; Teachers' 5 o'clock Tea Club, of South Bethlehem, Pa., and the Twentieth Century Club, of Lansdowne, Pa.

At the last named club Mrs. Hall's lecture was given on "Reciprocity Day," when representatives of neighboring clubs assembled for recreation and improvement.

The discussion of the morning was on "What Part Should Women Take in Public Affairs?" Many of the women present had assisted in the recent election campaign in Philadelphia, working for honest government. It was the opinion of all present that women should use all their power to procure integrity in public service, and to exercise the vigilance which is the price of liberty. Mrs. Hall's lecture, "Personal Reminiscenses of Distinguished People," brought the day to a close and was listened to with great interest.

FRIENDS IN SESSION NOV. 25.

Young Members of That Society to Hold Conference Here.

An event of unusual interest to members of the Society of Friends in this city will be the annual general conference of Young Friends Associations to be held at the Watchung meet-house on Saturday, November 25. There will be a morning and afternoon session. There are forty branches in this association and it is expected that nearly all will be represented. There will be delegates from Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Washington and possibly from the Western meetings. This will be the first time that the conference has come to Plainfield.

The morning session will be devoted to reports on the work of the Woodbrook School, in England, by Arthur Dewees, of Philadelphia, and Eleanor C. Wood, a teacher in George School, at Newton, Pa., both of whom were students in the English school.

In the afternoon there will be an address on the subject of "Peace," by Dr. Benjamin Trueblood, a noted Friend, of Boston, Mass. All interested are invited to these meetings. It is expected that there will be at least 250 out of town representatives and they will be entertained by the Religious Society of Friends here.

Union's Official Vote.

The Union County Board of Elections, which has been canvassing the vote at Elizabeth for the last few days, completed their labors yesterday. The board was delayed in its work because three election boards failed to make returns of the vote for or against the Hillery tax law in Elizabeth. The tax rate adopted by council of $2.86 was carried by a total of 2,762 against 612. The official canvass showed that Ernest R. Ackerman (Rep.) received a total of 11,089, as against Edward Nugent's (Dem.) 8,290, for State Senator. Dr. W. H. Lawrence, of Summit (Rep.), received 11,145, and Noah Woodruff (Dem.), 8,213, for sheriff. The Assembly returns are: R. S. Perkins (Rep.), 11,430; Peter Tillman (Rep.), 11,481; E. K. Tucker (Rep.) 11,549; W. D. Stanford (Dem.), 7,900; Nicholas Feid (Dem.), 7,847; H. C. Coulter (Dem.), 7,847. Coroner, Jacob Hagin (Rep.), 11,376; D. R. McElhinney (Dem.), 7,935.

—White clover and buckwheat honey can be procured at Neuman Brothers. They are quoting a low price this week.

If Mr. Reed Carries Out Expressed Intention, Investigation Will Drag Along.

INTERRUPTION LIKELY

Chief's Counsel Says He Will Seek Court's Aid to Restrain Two Councilmen From Sitting As Judges.

If Chief Kiely's counsel, former State Senator Reed, carries out his expressed intention of making a fight in the courts against Messrs. Tyler and Bullock sitting as members of the Common Council at the investigation of charges against his client, it is improbable that the matter will be decided before the newly elected councilmen take their seats on January 1. What bearing this will have on the result is not revealed, but it is generally believed that it will only have the effect of allowing the excitement over the matter to subside somewhat.

Mr. Reed objects to Councilmen Tyler and Bullock sitting as judges on the ground that they filed the report which tells of the derogatory rumors afloat regarding the official and private conduct of the head of the police department. He places them in the position of accusers, and for that reason demands that they be excluded from participating in the investigation otherwise than as witnesses. According to his own statement, Mr. Reed will carry the matter to the highest court of record in the State, the Court of Errors and Appeals, if the two members of the councilmanic police committee sit as judges.

It is generally believed that when the investigation is started Chief Kiely's counsel will ask the court for a restraining order provided the two councilmen mentioned are among the trial judges, and in this way the probe may drag along until after the first of the year at least.

According to law, the Common Council must sit as a body in hearing the charges. But it can, if it so desires, delegate the power to any committee, provided it does so by a four-fifths vote. In this way the city fathers could pass a resolution that all members of that body excepting Messrs. Tyler and Bullock hear the charges. This turn of events is unlikely, however, for it is generally considered that four-fifths of the members will abide by the police committee's wishes.

JOHN HARTPENCE DEAD.

John R. Hartpence, a former patrolman on the local police force and a well known resident, died early this morning at the home of his son, William Hartpence, of Lafayette place. ORDER FOR A RECOUNT.

Close Wins in Action on Monmouth Vote for Sheriff.

Red Bank, Nov. 16.—Although sworn in as Sheriff of Monmouth county yesterday, Charles Asa Francis may be compelled to relinquish the place. Wednesday Justice Charles E. Hendrickson, of the Supreme Court, granted an application for a recount of the votes for Sheriff. The application was made by Charles E. Close, the Democratic candidate for Sheriff. There were no special grounds for a recount beyond what were discussed before the Board of Canvassers.

Close's counsel contended that votes were counted for Francis which should not have been counted, and there are rumors that there are evidences of fraudulent voting. According to the returns compiled by the canvassers, Francis' majority is only 85.

Close gave $1,000 bonds to secure the expenses of a recount. E. W. Arrowsmith and Rulif V. Lawrence represented Close. Senator Applegate and Prosecutor Nevius represented Francis. The recount will begin before Judge Hendrickson on Saturday, November 25.

WON'T AID ARCANUM.

Attorney General Will Not Agree to Injunction.

Boston, Nov. 16—Attorney General Herbert Parker yesterday decided that he would not lend his name to a petition for an injunction by members of the Royal Arcanum against the supreme officers of the order, restraining the latter from putting the new assessment schedule into operation.

The attorney general concludes that members who dissent from the Supreme Council's ruling have a remedy in carrying their petition to a court of equity. State Insurance Commissioner Cutting, who sat with the attorney general in the case, concurs. The petitioners sought the use of the attroney general's name in their injunction proceedings, on the ground that the attorney general was the proper person to take up the matter of injunction proceedings. Counsel for the order contended that the attorney general has no legal right to interfere and that every policyholder and member had adequate and perfect remedy at law.

HELD ON SHOOTING CHARGE.

Trenton Man, Alleged Assailant of a Negro.

New Brunswick, Nov. 16—Charles Knapp, of Trenton, a real estate and comission broker, with offices in New York, waws arraigned before Judge Strong yesterday on a charge of assault with intent to kill, the camplaining witness being Daniel Coleman, a negro hostler at Rule's livery stable, Metuchen. According to the story told by Coleman, Knapp, who is a Southerner, came to the stable and quarreled with him because he did not attend quickly enough to Knapp's horse.

Then, it is charged, Knapp went to a hardware store, bought a revolver, and returning, fired two shots at Coleman, one of which struck him in the neck. Knapp pleaded not guilty and gave $600 bail.

William Sweeney, formerly of this city, but now of Trenton, where he is employed in the legal department of the Trenton Abbatoir Company, will make his home here after this week, commuting between this city and Trenton.

EXTRADITION REFUSED.

Governor Will Not Give Up Eloping Husband.

Orange, Nov. 16.—The Orange police and the officers of the Children's Aid and Protective Society of the Oranges are indignant at the refusal of Gocernor Pennypacker, of Pennsylvania, to honor the requisition papers in the case of Franz Berns, of Orange, who is under indictment on the charge of deserting his wife and child, who live in Orange. The case has aroused great interest. He eloped to Philadelphia with Rose Wohleitter, nineteen years old, a nurse, who was ta the home of Mrs. Samuel Lord in Centre street, Orange, where Berns worked as a gardener.

Berns was arrested in Philadelphia on October 20 by Detective Sergeant Gallagher, of that place, and Detective Sergeant Drabell, of Orange, and was remanded for thirty days, to await extradition papers. The Orange authorities declare that Governor Pennypacker intimated he might not honor the requisition papers because a marriage was a civil contract which it was not a crime to break. When arrested Berns was living with Miss Wohleitter, who first said they were married, but later declared that they were not, but that they intended to be some day.

CHILDREN GAMBLE AT FAIR.

Further Charge They Became Intoxicated.

Trenton, Nov. 16—An investigation by the State Military Board and the State school authorities is expected because of allegations that gambling was permitted and encouraged among the school children who last week patronized the National Guard bazaar in Jersey City. It also is charged that many boys were made intoxicated by liquor secured at the fair.

Col. Joseph H. Bresinger, of the Jersey City Regiment, and also principal of one of the schools in that city, declares that if there was gambling or intoxication at the fair it was contrary to his orders.

It has been asserted by patrons of the fair that members of the Colonel's family assisted with some of the gambling devices, which were operated to increase the revenue from the entertainment.

Capt. George T. Vickers, who is assistant prosecutor of the county, is also accused of having closed his eyes to alleged gross violations of the law.

MILL AND MODEL CITY.

Kinkora, N. J., Will Have All Modern Town Belongings.

Trenton, Nov. 16—The only private town in New Jersey is being built at Kinkora by the John A. Roebling's Sons Company, of this city. Codtracts were given out today for three workingmen's hotels and nearly a hundred private dwellings, in addition to a large hotel and fifty houses already erected.

These buildings will be used exclusively by the company's men, who will work in the new rolling mill being erected at Kinkora. More than two thousand men will be employed. The mill and the model city will represent an outlay of more than half a million dollars. The work will be done in less than a year.

The Roeblings will provide paved streets, water and gas plants, electric lights, schools, churches, a library, fire and police departments and all other adjuncts of a modern city.

Princeton Curriculum Changes.

Princeton, Nov. 16—A plan has been drafted by a member of the Princeton Seminary faculty involving several minor changes in the curriculum. The changes are not of a radical nature, consisting only of a rearrangement of the time for the students, and will not alter the substance or amount of the various courses at all. The three-year course will not be reduced in any way. At present the plan is merely in a tentative form, as ti has not yet been presented to the faculty for its consideration. After that it will have to be approved by the board of trustees. The next meeting of that body will not be held until next May, so that there will be no changes put into force before next September at the earliest.

The "Royal Road" to Music—
The AUTOPIANO

This Marvelous Instrument Makes
An Accomplished Musician of Its Possessor

The young man or young woman who loves music, but has been too busy earning a livelihood to spend time and money securing a musical education, need only purchase an Autopiano, and the ability to play any music desired is theirs at once. And possession is so easy as to be within the reach of any young man or woman of honest reputation.

The man of business, who has made his way in the world, may not have had time to devote to music. Today he buys the ability to play the piano with the instrument—simply by purchasing an AUTOPIANO.

And it is a splendid instrument. It is not the second or third grade instrument of a factory where the best workmen are put on some higher-priced pianos. The Autopiano is the only instrument built in the factory of which it is the pride. Manager, workmen—everybody from top to bottom of the establishment does the best that is in him for this one instrument, the Autopiano, and the results are remarkable.

The piano has an excellent scale, producing a tone that satisfies the musical ear. The cases are beautifully made and finished—the pianos are handsome and artistic. The playing device is excellent, and superior in many ways to others in higher-priced instruments.

And yet

The AUTOPIANO is sold for $485
Cash, or Easy Payments

And that price, while we have maintained it against the strongest opposition of the manufacturers, may shortly be increased—for, compared with every other Player-piano we know, sold outside of this store, the Autopiano should cost a hundred dollars more.

The more you examine it, and test it—the more you compare the Autopiano with instruments you see elsewhere, the more you will realize its excellence.

But remember that while we have an ample stock now, we are likely to run short before Christmas time. The demand for such an instrument—THAT EVERYBODY CAN PLAY—sold for a hundred dollars below its comparative value, will be tremendous when the holiday rush begins. Secure yours early, while you can examine it deliberately and in comfort.

AND START THE ENJOYMENT OF IT NOW.

Make your own home the place that your family most enjoys, and the place that your friends most enjoy to visit.

A very small cash payment, and easy monthly sums will buy this splendid instrument.

REBATES, INSURANCE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

DOCUMENT WILL BE LONGEST OF ROOSEVELT'S STATE PAPERS.

Washington, Nov. 16—The proofs of the message that President Roosevelt will send to Congress on the first Monday in December are now in his hands for final revision. It is said by those members of his cabinet who have heard portions of it read that it will be the longest and most memorable document that has been written by President Roosevelt. Among other topics that have been treated in striking manner are the following:

Telling of what has been done toward building the Panama Canal; advocating legislation that will expedite the work.

Urging the reorganization of the diplomatic and consular service.

Advocating moderation in Chinese exclusion laws.

Suggesting methods for cementing up the cracks in the immigration laws.

Recommending administrative reforms in governmental departments and the adoption of business methods in operating the Government.

Urging the ratification of the Santo Domingo treaty.

Recommending better tariff relations with the Philippines and Porto Rico.

Explaining the Government's rights to inquire into corporations engaged in interstate commerce.

Pointing to the benefits of a greater navy.

Preservation of Niagara Falls from the encroachments of commerce.

Statehood for territories.

Federal supervision of insurance companies greatly desired.

Other topics touched upon are: Treaty of Portsmouth; trade in the Orient; treasury deficiencies; public lands; forest reservations; rights of labor; Venezuela; economy in Government expenditure.

"A SOCIETY CIRCUS."

World's Greatest Showmen Plan for Hippodrome's New Bill.

Thompson & Dundy announced last night that a new production will be presented at the Hippodrome on Monday evening, December 11. Rehearsals, costume designing and executing, scenery construction and the other manifold big and little details have been in progress for months, and the managers of the big playhouse are sure its first Christmas musical extravaganze will be the artistic sensation of the American stage. The piece bears the title of "A Society Circus," and its five scenes in three acts will comprise the entire entertainment, departing from the previous custom of a succeeding spectacular drama. To make possible the early presentation of "A Society Circus" the run of "The Romance of a Hindoo Princess" will end on November 25. The tons of scenery required in the East Indian spectacle congest the immense stage to its capacity, and room must be had for the correspondingly enormous effects of the new show. "The Raiders," the military spectacle, with plunging horses, will replace it for the two weeks preceding the opening of "A Society Circus."

"A Society Circus" is the conception in scene, plot and general detail of Frederic Thompson. Manuel Klein has arranged the music and Sydney Rosenfeld produces the lyrics. The scenery has been intrusted to Arthur Voegtlin. Alfredo Edel, of Uaris, designed the costumes and Landolff, of Paris, and Dazian, of New York City, executed them. They cost $106,000. The other outlays will bring the disbursements preliminary to the presentation of the piece to a sum near $300,000. The climax of "A Society Circus," in the fifth scene, will present, Thompson & Dundy declare, the most entrancing stage scene ever witnessed here or abroad. The great reservoir will form a lake into which thousands of fountains play their sterams. Four hundred thousand candle power of electric lights will shed its refulgence upon the scenes. Two dolphins, with twenty-foot tails, conch shells sixteen feet square, an eighty-foot sea serpent with staring electric eyes, griffins, mermaids, pond lilies with electric blossoms, are some of the "properties" whose novelties, beauty and magnitude are expected to mark an era in stagecraft. And back and forth will glide a fifty-foot barge in which dozens of girls are seated. Four thousand gallons of water will spout from jets in ceaseless sterams, and in multitudinous design and quantity each minute, requiring the concealed efforts of five steam and electric pumps.

Four searchlights, of range and power equal to those used in the navy, will aid in making the spectacle one of beauty and grandeur. The new Hippodrome ballet will be the "Song of the Flowers," executed by 144 girls. More than 700 persons will have part in the production, the largest number ever assembled for the presentation of a dramatic spectacle.

—Two refrigerator cars, Nos. 34-999 and 35000, have been received at South Bethlehem by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, making a total of 100.

PASTOR'S DAUGHTERS NAMED.

They Are Involved In Petition For Divorce.

St. Louis, Nov. 16.—Two daughters of the Rev. G. W. Shepherd, pastor of Trinity M. E. church, are named in the divorce petition of Mrs. Laura G. Bernritter, of Chicago, who alleges that her husband hopes to marry one of the sisters.

The two young women, who are now in St. Louis, are extremely good looking and of different types of beauty. Mrs. Bernritter alleges that one of her husband's manifestations of affection for the sisters was the gift of an automobile.

The petition declares that one of the daughters went by the name of Lucia Suthern. This is explained by the father, who declares that his daughters assumed the name of Suthern in business on the Board of Trade. He says there is no shame or wrong connected with his daughters' life and that the charges are absolutely baseless.

$3,000 FOR HEART BALM.

Breach of Promise Suit Settled In Court.

Allentown, Pa., Nov. 16.—The suit of Miss Belle Duncan, of McDonald, a suburb of Pittsburg, against Dr. Hope T. M. Ritter, of this city, for $10,000 damages for breach of promise, was settled in court here yesterday. The young woman alleged that after she had her engagement ring and all the preparations made for her wedding Dr. Ritter broke the engagement and married Lydia Smith, of Chester, a nurse in the Medico Chirurgical Hospital at Philadelphia, of which he was formerly resident physician.

Miss Duncan was fortified with a stack of love letters and the case promised to be an interesting one. At the last moment Dr. Ritter agreed to settle and will pay the young woman $3,000, it is said.

Powers Warn Turkey.

Paris, Nov. 16—The combined squadrons of Great Britain, France, Russia and Italy, which are to be employed in an attempt to coerce the Porte into carrying out the promised financial reforms in Macedonia, will assemble at the Piraeus, the port of Athens, on November 22. A naval demonstration against Turkey will follow. An ultimatum was sent to Constantinople yesterday.

Lady Curzon Coming.

Chicago, Nov. 16—Joe Leiter, brother-in-law of Lord Curzon, returned home Tuesday from New York, where he was visiting his mother, and is responsible for the statement that Lord and Lady Curzon are to visit this city within a short time.

Balaklava Hero Dead.

London, Nov. 16.—Lieut-Col. Arthur Tremayne, one of the few remaining survivors of the "Charge of the Light Brigade" at Balaklava, in which he was wounded and his horse shot, died at Cornwall Tuesday at the age of seventy-eight.

AMUSEMENTS.

"Simple Simon Simple," which is to be seen at the New Plainfield theatre tonight, has the brightest, most efficient as well as the prettiest chorus of any musical attraction Messrs. Nixon & Zimmerman have ever piloted. In securing singers and dancers for this vehicle they took the pick and cream of the 150 odd girls they had under contract and not one of the famous forty has as yet celebrated her twenty-fourth birthday. It is indeed a wealth of youth and beauty, terpsichorean and vocal accomplishment.

F. Stanton Heck, who will appear here in the Aborn Production Company's big revival of the Bostonians' comic opera, "Robin Hood," made a big reputation with "A Chinese Honeymoon" when appearing in the character of the Emperor. He is peculiarly fitted for the great character comedy role of the testy old sheriff of Nottingham in "Robin Hood," and along with the other well known cast of principals is making a great hit nightly. "Robin Hood" with a beautiful and gorgeously gowned chorus of nearly fifty and the new and magnificent production especially built this season from original models of The Bostonians' production will be seen here on Monday night at the New Plainfield theatre.

An equine actor, one of the best that ever played a part, has a prominent part in "Big Hearted Jim," the new comedy melodrama which Geo. Klimt and his able company will present at the New Plainfield theatre, Thanksgiving afternoon and night. The horse was chosen for his fine intelligence, it being necessary for him to respond at once at important moments as the faithful aid of the big hearted sheriff, Jim Saxon.

"Bankers and Brokers," which is the title of the new musical comedy which B. E. Forrester will present at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night, can truthfully be termed the very quintessence of fun. Unlike most musical comedies it has a tangeable plot and this plot is in the main, responsible for the many ludricous mishaps and complications that round out a solid two hours and a half of genuine merriment. The organization is headed by those premier comedians, Yorke and Adams, whose infectuous humor has made millions laugh and they are surrounded by a company of fun-makers second only to themselves. "Bankers and Brokers" is a madcap, merry concoction of hilarity and as such leads the world in laughter.

Charles E. Blaney, author of "Across the Pacific," "Child Slaves in New York," "More to be Pitied Than Scorned," "For His Brother's Crime," "King of the Opium Ring," "My Tom Boy Girl," and in fact more melodramas than any one author, will offer his latest and what he claims to be his best melodrama, "The Curse of Drink," at the New Plainfield theatre, Saturday afternoon and night. As the title suggests, the theme of the play is temperance, but Mr. Blaney has evolved a new and interesting story. The play is filled with bright comedy and many sensational situations. Included is a railroad scene, which shows a locomotive at full speed. In this scene a young fireman saves his sweetheart from being ground to death beneath the wheels of the engine which is being driven by her father.

A Model Winter Colony.

The attractiveness of Lakewood is greatly enhanced by the architecture of private residences which has been successful to a remarkable degree. Every variety of style and scale is artistically represented. Those which harmonize best with their surroundings, on the whole, are perhaps those after the antique Dutch model designed from the Copley prints. Their colored roofs and rough plaster half hidden in ivy, peep out charmingly from their setting of gnarled pines. The hotels are built on a vast scale and are not surpassed by those of any other resort in appointments and comfort. The fact that Lakewood does not contain a single cheap or tawdry feature should not convey the impression that it is exclusively a resort for the rich. Rates are moderate at the hotels and it is pre-eminently a resort for the business man. There are also numerous private boarding houses suitable for families of moderate means, and the excellent schools make Lakewood especially suitable for a winter home. The Lakewood booklet, published by the Central Railroad of New Jersey, contains information of value to those interested, including institutions of the town, opportunities for outdoor recreation and general advantages, as well as the names and rates of the best hotels and boarding houses. This suggestive brochure will be sent to any one writing for it to C. M. Burt, General Passenger Agent, 143 Liberty street, New York City.

—Two new Pacific type engines, Nos. 2000 and 2001, for passenger service, have been received at South Bethlehem by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company.

—Attention is called to the advertisement of the entertainment to be given under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday night, November 21, at 8 o'clock.

AN ELECTION MUDDLE.

Middlesex Republican Canvasser Halts the Certificates.

New Brunswick, Nov. 16—The delivery of certificates to the various Middlesex county, township and city officials who were elected last Tuesday has been delayed by the contention of John E. Elmendorf, Republican member of the County Board of Elections, which met yesterday to canvass the vote. Mr. Elmendorf refused to sign the certificates because the tabulation of the vote as prepared by the county clerk had not been compared by the County Board of Elections with the tally sheets of the election boards of the various election districts of the county.

It has always been the custom of the County Boards of Elections to accept the county clerk's tabulation as official, after swearing in that official as clerk of the board. The election board would then compare a few of the tally sheets with the transcript on the tabulation, and then sign the certificates. Mr. Elmendorf, at yesterday's meeting, declared that this procedure was incorrect. He insisted that every vote should be read from every tally sheet.

The other members protested, but Mr. Elmendorf insisted, and the secretary of the board, Dr. J. L. Suydam, of Jamesburg, a Republican, read the returns from the polling places in New Brunswick and Perth Amboy. Then he struck. He declared it was a useless waste of time to compare the tabulation with the transcript and declared he would read no more. He was supported in this ultimatum by the two Democratic members of the board, Oliver Kelly and H. H. Brown.

—E. B. Maynard's tonsorial parlors on North avenue are undergoing many improvements, including painting, new paper, lace curtains and the place looks very clean and neat. Mr. Maynard hopes to secure a hardwood floor before the work is completed.

Mrs. White and son, Philip, of Hartford, Conn., are visiting Mrs. White's mother, Mrs. Williams, of West End avenue.

By order of the Common Council.

J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

FARMERS TO MEET AT THE SEASHORE

NATIONAL GRANGE WILL OPEN ITS ANNUAL TEN-DAY CONVENTION.

Atlantic City, Nov. 16—Active preparations are going forward for the great gathering of the brightest homes of the United States in this city, beginning today and continuing ten days. It is the annual session of the National Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, and it is expected that fully 10,000 of the members, men and women, will be there. Two Governors—Stokes, of New Jersey, and Bell, of Vermont—are on the programme for addresses, while former Governor Bachelder, of New Hampshire; Congressman Gardner, of this State, a farmer himself, and Mayor Stoy, of this city, will speak.

The farmers are to have a vacation for themselves and their families and are liberal in leasing apartments in the hotels. The resort has reduced rates and the sons of the soil are to be housed in the fashionable houses, as well as in the modest hostelries.

A drill of the life savers will be one of the features of the visit, a trip in the roller chairs on the boardwalk will be a novelty, and they will be invited to a football game and entertained at dances and receptions.

George W. F. Gaunt, of Mullica Hill, master of the State Grange, has been busy with details for the gathering. The New Jersey Grange is going to show its brethren from the rest of the country what the State can do in the way of entertainment and exhibits. The State Horticultural Society and every subordinate grange and farm society is assisting in every way possible to make this meeting a memorable one in the history of the National Grange.

BAD NEWS FOR BOSTON.

The Bean Crop This Year Is a Partial Failure.

Boston, Nov. 16.—Statistics from the books of the Boston Chamber of Commerce furnish figures which are startling to Bostonians, for they show that the bean crop is not a success this year. The New York crop is a failure and Boston is getting her supply from Michigan and California. In the last six weeks the receipts have been only one-half what they were for a corresponding period last year. The total number of barrels of beans received since and including the week ending October 7 is 8,253, compared with 16,642 barrels for the corresponding period of 1904. The total for the month of October was 3,665 barrels, against 8,721 barrels a year ago.

Not From Mosquitoes.

Havana, Nov. 16—Dr. Guiteras writes to the papers saying that Las Animas is not a favorable place for the mosquito that spreads yellow fever. Some months ago 2,937 mosquitoes were killed there and not one of the fever propagating species was found. He therefore considers that the present outbreak of the disease here is not due to the escape of mosquitoes from Las Animas Hospital. An American named Skillim has been taken off ship in the harbor here suffering with yellow fever. The vessel has been in port a month.

Boy Tamed Wild Bull.

Philadelphia, Nov. 16—South Broad street was thrown into great excitement Tuesday night by the sudden appearance of a big white bull near Fitzwater street, which, bellowing with rage, charged everything in sight. The street was thronged, but in a twinkling the crowd melted like snow before the sun. After twenty minutes a small boy appeared, clutching a stout stick, and when the animal charged him he stepped aside and struck him over the nose. After repeating this twice the bull turned and fled.

Uprising Likely.

Havana, Nov. 16—The Lucha criticises the reports that are being circulated regarding a revolution, and says that they are due to officials. It adds that it is time for the needless alarms to cease. The Government fears a revolution such as occurred under the Spanish regime, but there never was then alarm in the palace. It is laughable for the head of a free State to fear that he is an object of attack. The guard at the palace has been increased from ten to seventeen men.

Red Men Invade West.

Carlisle, Pa., Nov. 16.—The Carlisle Indian football team left here yesterday on a two weeks' playing trip in the West. It is expected that they will return with a good list of victories. Thursday they play in Cincinnati, and on Monday go to Canton, where they have a game for Wednesday. From Ohio they go to Pittsburg, where they play Washington and Jefferson College on Saturday, November 18.

She Shot at Burglars.

Lynn, Mass., Nov. 16—Mrs. L. M. Whitney, of No. 38 Silsbee street, was awakened about 12:30 yesterday morning and saw two men attempting to open her chamber window. Mrs. Whitney's husband was absent, but she seized her revolver and fired three shots at the men, who ran off. An officer captured a man who gave his name as Frank Whitte, of Boston.

Plainfield, N. J., November 16, 1905.

Miss Roosevelt says she needs a rest. So does the afflicted public. Baby McKee was certainly brought into enough public gaze, but not a circumstance to what "Princess Alice" has been.

From excellent authority comes the report that the Sunday golf agitation in the Plainfield Country Club will be carried to the courts. As told in our news columns today, it is proposed by some of the members to bring about their own expulsion by seemingly, at least, violating the organization's constitution. If the scheme is carried successfully that far, the ousted members will go to the law to obtain reinstatement, thereby opening up the question whether a majority or a two-thirds vote is necessary to change the constitution. When such eminent lawyers as William Hornblower and R. V. Lindabury, on the one part, and John Parsons and John W. Griggs, on the other part, disagree in the interpretation of the law, the opinion of the court is the only recourse, even if the "learned judge" may not be so profound in his knowledge of the law as the distinguished counsellors mentioned.

Reading between the lines of the statement of Chief Kiely's counsel, former State Senator Reed, it can be seen that the proposed investigation of the police department head is still a long way off. Certainly if Mr. Reed resorts to the courts to prevent Messrs. Tyler and Bullock, two members of the Common Council, from sitting at the trial, the probe will drag along for some time. In fact, it is perfectly reasonable to suppose that the incoming Common Council will finally take charge of the affair. As counsel for the Chief, Mr. Reed is duty bound to use every legitimate means in protecting his client. He takes the position that the two members of the police committee who filed the now famous report really stand as accusers. Taking this for granted, he strenuously opposes their participation as judges and declares he will carry the matter through the courts. This turn of events would postpone the deliberations for some time at least and in the meanwhile the term of Councilman Bullock and others among the city fathers will grow shorter.

HOPE BOYS DEFEATED.

Y. M. C. A. Juniors, 22; Hope Boys' Club, 9.

In the return game of basketball played at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, last night, between the Y. M. C. A. Juniors and Hope Boys' Club, the visiting team was defeated by a score of 22 to 9. The first game last week was won by the Hope boys by a small margin. Last night the home team played a superior game and was too strong for the West End aggregation. In throwing goals, Lines, of the home team, excelled, scoring 12 of the 22 points. The teams lined up as follows:

Y. M. C. A.—Steiner, centre; Lines, right forward; Mueck, left forward; Freeman, right guard; Williams, left guard.

VISITING LADS ROUTED BY A SCORE OF 17 TO 12.

The North Plainfield High School eleven defeated Westfield High School team on the Cricket Grounds, in the borough, yesterday afternoon by a score of 17 to 12. There was little of interest in the first half aside from the fact that the borough school boys scored a touchdown on line plays.

Peacock made a long end run of thirty yards for a touchdown. Webster and Mundy each made long end runs for touchdowns. The borough school team kicked off and held its opponents for downs, followed by long end runs by Mundy and Webster and one by Peacock for thirty-five yards for a touchdown.

N. P. H. S. then kicked and E. Keyes made the star run of the game for eighty-five yards, scoring a touchdown, after which he kicked the goal. The borough team then kicked off and Westfield made end runs and line plays for a touchdown. E. Keyes kicked the goal. Westfield then kicked and Peacock received the ball. A soiled coat, worn and crumpled collar, ragged button holes and a generally run down and hung-in-the-garret-all-summer-look, certainly detracts the best of all overcoats and puts the man behind it in the undressed class. UNLIMITED FRANCHISES JUST GIVEN IN TRENTON

REPUBLICANS IN COMMON COUNCIL FAVORED TROLLEY COMPANIES.

Trenton, Nov. 16.—At is meeting Tuesday night the Common Council passed the ordinances giving power to the Trenton Street Railway Company and to the Trenton, Hamilton and Ewing Traction Company to build th loop in Perry street, and the extension of the West State street tracks from Parkside avenue out to Trenton Junction.

The Democrats in Council tried to impose a twenty-five-year limitation on the Perry street loop and a fifty-year limitation on the extension of the West State street line. The first of these propositions was successfully opposed by the Republican councilman, Frederick W. Gnichtel, Mayor-elect of this city.

Mr. Gnichtel said he had always stood for limited franchises, but in this case could not vote for it. The objections he offered were that the amendment gave no provision for action after the expiration of the twenty-five years; also that the people desired the road built, and it was known that the company would not accept a franchise with a twenty-five-year limit. The amendment was voted down. The Republicans all voted against it.

Councilman Morgan, Democrat, made a fight for a fifty-year limit in the West State street line extension franchise, and Judge George W. Macpherson, counsel for the Trenton Street Railway Company, as strongly opposed it. He said the company would be unable to secure the funds to build the road with such a limit. The amendment was voted down.

After Council adjourned the members were entertained at luncheon at Hildebrecht's, East Hanover street, by Peter E. Hurley, general manager of the Trenton Street Railway Company.

CHARGED HIM WITH ROBBING THE MAILS

RED BANK'S ASSISTANT POSTMASTER PLACED UNDER ARREST.

Red Bank, Nov. 16.—Fred J. Cullington, assistant postmaster here for the last ten years, has been arrested on a charge of rifling the mails. The specific charge is not known, but it is believed to be extracting money from letters. The arrest was made by a United States marshal, who started with Cullington for Freehold in the belief that a United States commissioner was located there.

Arriving at Matawan, the marshal learned that there was no such commissioner at Freehold, and Cullington was brought back here. He was placed in charge of Constable Elwood Minugh, who remained with Cullington at the latter's home all night. Yesterday morning Cullington was taken to Jersey City, where he will be arraigned before a United States commissioner. A number of friends accompanied the marshal and his prisoner, prepared to furnish bail.

It is said that Cullington's alleged wrong doings have been going on for the last three years. The amount of his alleged peculations is not known. The assistant postmaster was not suspected until a few weeks ago, at which time two decoy letters containing money were delivered at the postoffice. Both of these letters, it is declared, were opened by Cullington.

The arrest has caused a genuine sensation in town. Cullington has always been regarded as an honest and upright young man, and he enjoyed the respect of every one in the community. He has served as assistant under four postmasters—William Pintard, William Applegate, William T. Corties and Odadiah E. Davis, the present encumbent. Mr. Davis was appointed postmaster last spring.

Although efforts were brought to bear to oust Cullington in the interest of another man suggested for the place, the young man's popularity and knowledge of the postoffice business secured him the place. Cullington was not extravagant in his habits, he lived modestly, and his friends cannot account for any reason for his alleged crime.

His salary was $1,200 a year. Cullington belongs to the Free Masons, Knights of Pythias and Monmouth Boat Club. He is about thirty-five years old and has a wife and child.

Mrs. William Singer, of Newark, has been visiting her father, Samuel Dreier, of West Front street.

Orville Waring, of Park avenue, has gone to Europe on a business trip for the Standard Oil Company.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Nov. 19: "My Covenant With the People of God"—Ps. 11, 6; Mal. 11, 5, 6; II Cor. viii, 21.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

"We take thought for things honorable, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men."

What are the honorable things? Are they the popular things of the day, those which bring the largest financial returns and social recognition? Not always. The honors of society are not always given to most substantial worth. The honorable things of God are not always those most valued in business circles nor recognized as binding in the world of politics, but the honorable things are the good things for men and are the safe things to hold tenaciously.

"Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward parts." That is the first requisite of favor with God—the desire and intention, the choice, of that which accords with the divine nature and the constitution of things. It is a great achievement to get where you are capable of knowing truth. Some folks never get there. Many have no desire to either know the truth or to have it prevail. Their chief anxiety is rather for the agreeable, the pleasant or the gainful. Right belongs to a world in which they do not largely dwell. We all know people who are incapable of telling a truthful story where their own interests are involved. They draw on their imagination for their facts. Not all of these are outside the church.

God's covenant with His people is that they shall know the truth and the truth shall make them free. This was the promise of Christ to all who follow Him. This is above all other possible treasure in value to a rational human being. Error can never be permanently profitable. All God's works are pledged for its overthrow and annihilation. God in highest heaven and on the earth with all His power must be ever against it so long as He is God.

With relish for knowledge of things as they are there comes practical wisdom. This is the common sense so rare to observation, but so essential for success.

The most inveterate liar believes it is unwise and wicked for others to deceive, but in himself is unable to see the fault.

The severest penalty for untruthfulness is the inevitable loss of ability to distinguish truth from falsity. This comes as certainly as the night follows the setting of the sun.

He that desires the truth and inwardly loves it increases ever in ability to discern it in the midst of all falsities and acquires increasingly the ability to speak it and to be it himself. This was shown strikingly when Jesus declared, "I am the truth!" There comes a positive personal identification of self with the true, which is the highest reason and becomes, when known, the right to be acted, the beautiful to be the object of supreme desire and the perfect to be striven for in attainment.

He who will learn this lesson shall come to peace in a world of strife, to righteousness in a world of fraud, to reverence in a world of ungodliness, to light through surrounding gloom. He who said, "I am the way," calls you to find that track. It may be as difficult to discover as the old bridle path was some years since up Mount Washington from the Crawford notch, but the difficulty lies chiefly at the beginning. Get started right at the foot of the mountain and the course is plain, and then what glory bursts on the sight as you rise above woods and rocks and walk the upper heights and see visions never possible to valley travelers! It pays to climb the steeps of God's high hill with the Christ for guide.

"To him that overcometh I will give to eat of the tree of life which is in the paradise of God."

Value of Prayer.

Prayer in Christ on earth and in us cannot be two different things. Just as there is but one God, who is a Spirit, who hears prayer, there is but one spirit of acceptable prayer. When we realize what time Christ spent in prayer and how the great events of his life were all connected with special prayer, we learn the necessity of absolute dependence on and unceasing direct communication with the heavenly world, if we are to live a heavenly life or to exercise heavenly power around us. We see how foolish and fruitless the attempt must be to work for God and heaven without, in the first place in prayer meeting, getting the life and the power of heaven to possess us. O my brother, if thou and I would be like Jesus, we must contemplate Jesus praying alone in the wilderness.—Andrew Murray.

Lend a Hand.

Lend a hand to the tempted.
Lend a hand to souls in the shadow.
Lend a hand to those who are often misjudged.
Lend a hand to the soul crushed with unspeakable loss.
Lend a hand to the poor fighting the wolf from the door.
Lend a hand to those whose lives are narrow and cramped.
Lend a hand to the boy struggling bravely to culture his mind.
Lend a hand to the young people whose homes are cold and repelling.
Lend a hand to those whose surroundings are steadily pulling them down.
Lend a hand to the prodigal sister. Her life is as precious as that of the prodigal brother.
Lend a hand to the girl who works, works, works and knows nothing of recreation and rest.
Lend a hand—an open hand, a warm hand, a strong hand, an uplifting hand, a hand filled with mercy and help.—Silver Cross.

ANOTHER WONDER OF SCIENCE.
Biology has Proved that Dandruff is Caused by a Germ.
Science is doing wonders these days in medicine as well as in mechanics. Since Adam lived, the human race has been troubled with dandruff, for which no hair preparation has heretofore proved a successful cure until Newbro's Herpicide was put on the market. It is a scientific preparation that kills the germ that makes dandruff or scurf by digging into the scalp to get at the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality; causing itching scalp, falling hair, and finally baldness. Without dandruff hair must grow luxuriantly. It is the only destroyer of dandruff. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 19.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Medical missions at home and abroad.—Mark i. 29-34.

The Scripture in many places teaches the importance of what we call medical missions as a part of the work of Christianity. Mark in the topical reference gives us an account of Christ's healing of Peter's wife's mother, and healing the sick seemed to be one of His supreme purposes in life, and through the power to heal He was often put in the position where he could heal men's souls. Later on when Christ sent forth His disciples to advance His kingdom He gave them two especial commands, (11) to preach and (21) to heal, "And as ye go preach, saying the kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, cast out devils. Freely ye have received, freely give." Paul in his work among the gentiles was also given the power to heal. To the lame man at the temple gate he said: "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have I give unto thee. In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk!" And immediately he was healed. Thus healing both body and soul was the work of the church in the time of Christ and His apostles.

Following the example of Christ and the apostles, the church today is emphasizing medical missions as never before since apostolic days.

Medical missions in connection with home mission work have a rather limited field. Yet the church is doing the work of healing at home as well as the work of preaching. Local churches look after the sick in their neighborhoods who are poor and unable to look after themselves, and in this way win many souls to Christ. In addition, in our large cities almost all the great Christian denominations have hospitals, where the bodies of men may be cared for, and in many cases the poor are attended absolutely free of charge, those who are able, of course, being expected to pay, that the expenses of the institutions may be met. But with all this the hospitals are erected by Christian money and principally sustained by the generosity of Christian people. These hospitals are Christ's for the healing of the sick, and in them many find peace of soul as well as healing of body.

Medical missions have found their greatest fields of labor in foreign mission work. There are three principal reasons for this condition:

1. In most heathen countries medical science is very little advanced. Perhaps there is nothing cruder in heathen life today than the methods of taking care of the body. The practice of medicine, instead of being a science, is more largely a superstition. Instead of helping the sick, the treatment practiced is more frequently injurious. This fact of itself makes medical missionaries an absolute necessity. Even before doctors went as missionaries those who had gone simply to preach the gospel were compelled to practice the art of healing as far as they could do so.

2. Medical missions are a great influence in winning the confidence of foreign people. They are naturally strongly prejudiced against foreigners, but when they see their loved ones relieved from pain and restored to health and strength this prejudice is very largely overcome. They can realize that the missionaries to this extent are beneficial to them, and anything that will assist in removing their prejudice to the missionaries is a great blessing to mission work.

3. Through the medical treatment of the body the opportunity to heal the soul by the gospel is the more readily attained. The medical missionaries gain admission to homes where the purely gospel teacher would be excluded. This is especially true of the women of the orient. Most of them lead secluded lives, where the ordinary missionary is never allowed to enter, but into these same homes the Christian woman who is a medical missionary has no difficulty in obtaining admission when there is sickness in the house. The king of an oriental country was once led to accept Christ and to sanction and support Christian missions as the result of the healing of his son by medical missionaries.

The hour of sickness is always the hour of opportunity for all who would win souls to Christ. Let us visit the sick in our neighborhood, send them flowers and words of sympathy and support our denominational hospitals and at the same time earnestly pray for God's richest blessing upon the medical missionaries abroad and give them our sympathy and support.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," Etc.

Copyright, 1902, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

"The winter of our discontent" indeed! With gloomy heart and sad anticipation Benton rides away through the leafless woods to the old familiar scenes about Fredericksburg. Word from Washington has brought him little comfort. Rumor of his commander's sayings has filled him with foreboding. Dr. Chilton, to whom he had written on almost any provocation and who had gratefully and promptly answered his Sharpsburg missive, giving young Pelham's message, now wrote not at all. "He seems sad and brooding," said Jack, in the one letter that young gentleman had managed to send through since his incarceration. Jack was well enough to resume duty and most eager for exchange, but negotiations hung fire unaccountably, so said he, and Benton thought he knew the reason why. Lounsberry had been back again in Richmond over six weeks now, exchanged and restored to his old and influential post in the war department. Lounsberry could be counted on to lose no chance to injure the Chiltons, father or son, and so long as it was possible he would block all plan to exchange Jack Chilton, thereby lending color to the stories spread about in Virginia that poor Jack rather tried to be caught and to stay caught, such hard fighting as his fellow Virginians had to do being little to his taste. It would have burned his heart out with fury had he known it, but few of us begin to realize the half of what is whispered to our detriment, else there would be deportation of sensitive souls or deserved destruction in the army of detractors. Jack was nearly mad with misery when told of Stuart's impudent dash at Chambersburg and the second circling of the Army of the Potomac. He was then just beginning to stump around quite comfortably. Elinor and the squire had returned to the west, the former with red-rimmed eyes and pallid cheeks. No one knew how she had sorrowed over the sad news about Ladue. It was that, though, that seemed to break the ice of Rosalie's reserve, for now, for the first time, the Virginia girl read the secret of her Wisconsin would-be friend, and melted to her instantly. It was that, though they rarely spoke his name, that led to the letters now passing frequently between them. It was through that correspondence the sisterhood began that, despite trial and trouble, proved eventually so sure an alliance in time of need.

But though Elinor wrote in many a page of her brother, and in only a few referred to Paul—and then only as "he" or "him"—Rosalie would write only of the latter. Ordinarily this would have led to resentment and a breach. Now it did not, for what Rosalie had to say was stirring new hope into the somber current of the western girl's monotonous life. Rosalie had amazed and rejoiced her, about the end of October, by the assurance that she believed Capt. Lamar to be totally mistaken. It was true, she admitted, that Paul Ladue had not been seen with Ewell's division, but neither had Ewell, as yet—for the latter had not become accustomed to a cork leg—yet she had tidings from "friends"—who, she would not say—that Paul Ladue was still alive when borne from the awful front of Gibbon's guns, then belching canister in double rounds. "More dead than alive he looked," said her informant, but while she had no tidings of his present whereabouts, neither was there any record of his death.

All this was presently sent to Fred on the Rappahannock, and made him the more eager to communicate with some one across that modern Rubicon—some one who could speak advisedly. But though there were places near the fords up stream where the cavalry vedettes sat long hours in saddle, facing, and often within hailing distance of each other, the orders against communication of any kind had become exacting, for it was evident that Burnside was marshaling his grand divisions for a move.

In the early summer time, when he hated to leave the front and longed to push on to Richmond or Charlottesville, Benton had been summoned to Washington. Now, when he longed to go to Washington, there was prospect of a midwinter dash across the Rappahannock. News of the Chiltons was sorely disquieting. Rosalie would not write. Jack, in prison camp, could not, except to kindred, and the doctor evidently shrank from writing. It was a winter of courts-martial at the capital, and several such tribunals were in session, trying officers of various grades. Many new regiments had come and were held about the city until suitably drilled and disciplined. As a consequence the avenues again were alive with uniforms, the hotels crowded, and many thrifty households were "coining" money taking boarders. Mention has been made of Dr. Chilton's sister, with whom they were again dwelling after their return from the summer seashore. Being only moderately well-to-do, and besieged with applications, she had yielded to pressure and let two of her rooms to officers sojourning in the city. Then one of these, ordered west, begged leave to present a successor, a major of a new regiment, who, being a "smart" lawyer, had been assigned to duty as a judge advocate of a court for the trial of officers of rank in the volunteers. When the squire wrote that McKinnon had been appointed major of a newly raised regiment and ordered with it to Annapolis, Fred Benton felt, so great was his antipathy, a vague sensation of annoyance and chagrin. Three weeks later when Col. Goff, of the ——teenth, came down to pay the Iron Brigade a two-days' visit, the young staff officer was confounded to hear that Maj. McKinnon had just found domicile under the same roof that shielded Dr. Chilton and the lady of his love. It meant mischief and Benton knew it.

One bleak December morning Benton had ridden with his general down the river bank on the Stafford side and sat watching the work of the engineers. The pontoon wagons were being run to the front, and many an officer and man looked at the heavy, ungainly boats and the long loads of balk and chess, then studied the distant line of heights across the stream, saying little but thinking much. Whoever sought to storm that crest had a precious job on hand, was an expurgation of the way in which the average veteran expressed his individual views.

And while seated in saddle, shivering in the wind blowing from the distant Chesapeake, and wishing the chief would quit his comments on the orders of the corps commander and trot home to dinner, Benton caught sight of a little column of cavalry riding dejectedly in from the far left flank. Horses jaded, men disgusted, and three or four prisoners in their wake looked worst of all. "Where d'ye s'pose those dam-fools have come from?" asked the general, cheerfully. "Captain," he cried, hailing the officer in command, "what you got there?"

The officer touched his cap, turned out of column, so as not to halt the methodical march, rode up toward the general and said: "Prisoners, sir, taken by one of our scouting parties a few miles down, and sent in by us, for most of these horses with me have to be shod."

By this time the greater part of the troop, in their ugly light blue overcoats, had plodded by, and the squad of prisoners came footing it wearily after. Foremost of these a tall, thin-faced, ungainly specimen, dressed in one of those self-same cavalry overcoats, glanced curiously at the general from under his broad-brimmed slouch hat; threw a look over the blue-nosed, watery-eyed pair of orderlies at his back, and then on Benton and a brother aide, sitting a few yards aside; then instantly a flash of recognition shot over his face, and he called aloud:

"There, captain. There's a gentleman who will vouch for what I say. Ask Capt. Benton."

It was our friend Jennings, he of the stone house and the Warrenton pike, and Jennings would not be denied. He plunged into a voluble story to the listening chief, despite the efforts of an Irish trooper to prod him forward.

"D'you know him?" asked the general, shortly, as he turned to Benton. "He says you do."

"I saw him once or twice, sir," was the guarded answer. "I do not know him further than that he held Gen. McDowell's pass and went in and out of our lines at will last summer."

"And I'm just as loyal as I was then," protested Jennings, "only they caught me down here trying to help some folks of mine that were sick and nigh starving——"

But the general shut him off impatiently. He was giving ear to the words of the captain, who had ridden closer.

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

WHERE FASHIONS ARE MADE.

There is no fashion but Paris fashion, writes Eleanore Hoyt Brainerd, in Everybody's Magazine. Faithful worshippers of the vanities agree upon that point and turn toward the Rue de la Paix as devoutly as a Mohammedan toward Mecca, though the prophets of fashion are many, and each has his loyal followers.

Americans are said to be, next to the French, the best-dressed women in the world, but there's a certain lamentable levity in the American attitude toward dress. The French take everything pertaining to clothes seriously. One need only read a page from one of the best French fashion journals in order to grasp the national point of view. There is no mere curt chronicle of the modes. The writer's rhapsodies put our spring poets to shame. Called upon to describe a creation in pink taffeta, he dips his pen in May-morning dew and invokes the Muses. He soars upon the viewless wings of poesy and, soaring, sings impassioned chants of praise; he culls his similes from all the realm of beauty, his adjectives glow with fervor, he quotes from the classics, he draws upon history and fable, he winds up with a fervid apostrophe to fair woman—and not one of his French readers smiles. They see no extravagance in his periods. The pink taffeta was from Paquin. Upon what shrine could flowery tributes more fittingly be laid?

It is this popular attitude toward things satorial that has made Paris the centre of the dressmaking world. The great dressmaker may be born anywhere, but even a sartorial genius, born to dressmaking as the sparks fly upward, will not come into his artistic heritage outside of Paris. Your artistic temperament must have its sympathetic environment, and only in Paris is the artist dressmaker ranked with the immortals, only in Paris is dressmaking classed among the fine arts.

GOOD HINTS.

Needlework should be ironed on the wrong side on a piece of flannel, and it should be kept long enough under the iron to thoroughly dry it.

A frying pan should never be scraped. Instead, fill it with cold water, to which a little soda has been added, and let it stand for several hours.

When the burners of lamps become clopped with char put them in strong soapsuds, and boil awhile to clean them.

Lemon juice mixed very thick with sugar will relieve that tickling cough that is so annoying.

Scraps of old, worn chamois skin strung on twine, bead fashion, and then tied into a "chamois ball," will last for years and polish glass as nothing else will do.

A long-handled, weighted brush brings out a fine polish on a waxed floor.

Kerosene will clean a white enameled sink.

Every pan of dish water contains grease, which coagulates on the cold pipes. Result, evil deposits on those pipes: eventually the plumber. A pint of boiling hot solution of washing soda poured down the sink every day dissolves and carries away the grease.

Ordinary popcorn, ground fine in a meat grinder or a coffee grinder, and then served with rich cream, is said to be a popular breakfast food in Iowa. It can be ground the night before in order to save time the next morning. The ground popcorn can also be browned a little over the fire for a change before serving.

When mixing flour for thickening add a pinch of salt to the flour before mixing with water, and it mixes much more smoothly, without lumps.

MAYOR'S AUTO STALLED.

Farmer Drives Mr. and Mrs. McClellan to Trolley.

New Brunswick, Nov. 16.—Mayor McClellan, of New York, and Mrs. McClellan took a train for Princeton yesterday after having been forced to spend the night here because their automobile broke down.

The automobile met with some mishap near Berdine's Corner, about 9 o'clock in the evening. Mr. McClellan and his chauffeur could not make the machine go, and he finally hired a farmer to drive Mrs. McClellan and himself to the line of the Trenton and New Brunswick Railway, where they caught a trolley car to this city. They arrived about 10 p. m.

They registered at the Manson House and retired without telephoning news of the break to New York.

Mayor McClellan has frequently been seen on his way to Princeton within the last few months. It is reported that he has been having conferences with Grover Cleveland.

Dr. Cunningham gave temporary relief and hurried the sufferer to Jefferson Hospital, Philadelphia.

There was much interest in the suggestion and the sense of the meeting was finally expressed in a motion by William D. Murray making the accumulation of an alumni fund one of the objects of this organization.

Edward J. Patterson, '90; William D. Murray, '75, and Lucius L. Gilbert, '87, were selected to draft a circular letter to be sent to all alumni by the committee in charge of the reception. These letters can be obtained at the Y. M. C. A. on Monday night.

GIRL SAYS SHE BALKED THIEF.

Miss Bigler Scared Robber Off With Iron.

Washington, Nov. 16.—According to the story of Miss Lizzie Bigler, sixteen years old, the burglars who have terrorized the town for two weeks are getting very bold. Miss Bigler resides in part of a triple house in East Stewart street. About ten days ago she discovered that burglars had entered the house during the night, but were frightened away without securing any plunder. Tuesday the girl was alone in the house. She claims that she opened the kitchen door and a tall man demanded her watch and chain. "I know your father and mother are not at home, and if you do not give me your watch and chain I will blow your brains out," is what Miss Bigler claims was the demand of the stranger.

Miss Bigler had been ironing and had the iron in her hand, and states that when she made a move to throw the weight at the man he hurriedly left, tearing a false mustache from his face as he went down the steps. Miss Bigler says she was too frightened to call for help.

HOSPITAL HARVEST HOME

Annual Affair in Charge of Women's Auxiliary a Decided Success.

SCHOOLS MAKE GIFTS

Pupils Send Donations—Committees in Charge of the Affair Yesterday Afternoon.

Fully as successful as similar affairs in years past, the annual harvest home and reception held at Muhlenberg Hospital, yesterday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock, proved to be a pleasant and profitable one for this worthy institution. The donations of vegetables, fruits, canned goods, cereals and other necessary things, also contributions of money, were as liberal as heretofore.

The large number of friends of the hospital responded liberally, and from all of the public schools as well as from the Parochial School, came donations of vegetables and fruits. The donations were displayed at the hospital and gladdened the hearts of those in charge there.

The decorations, which were in charge of Mrs. F. D. Warren, were in keeping with the harvest season, there being used an abundance of corn in the husk, red berries, palms and Southern grass. On the porch there was an arrangement of cornstalks and red berries, while overhead was displayed the words "Harvest Home," made of red berries with a white background. In the dining room where tea was served there was a pleasing and attractive arrangement of red and white chrysanthemums and lighted candles.

Those who assisted in receiving the guests were Mrs. Samuel Huntington, president, and Mrs. D. T. Van Buren and Miss Cox, vice presidents of the auxiliary board; Mrs. Paul Taylor Brown, Mrs. Dorsey W. Hyde, Mrs. J. S. Zelie, Mrs. H. H. Williams, Mrs. T. S. Sullivant, Mrs. Weaver, and many other members of the auxiliary.

Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, Mrs. Arthur Murphy, Mrs. A. T. Slausson and Mrs. John Grierson poured tea in the dining room, and were assisted by the Misses Helen Timpson, Florence Stuart, Louise Booth, Hope Ivins, Molly Perkins, Carolyn Martin and Miss Sullivant.

Mrs. John B. Dumont and Mrs. J. E. Corlies were in charge of the exhibit from the Needlework Guild, there being a large number of garments donated to the hospital by this organization. The social features of the affair were greatly enjoyed by all and many accepted the opportunity to visit the wards and various other rooms in the hospital.

Horse Bites Off Fireman's Finger.

Cranford, Nov. 16.—The home of Jacob Johnson, on Garden street, was destroyed by fire Tuesday. Mr. Johnson and wife were away, and left a four-year-old son, locked in the house. Frank Smith, a one-armed colored man, discovered the fire and seizing an axe battered the door down and rescued the child, who was nearly suffocated. The firemen attached to Union Hose Company, while on the way to the fire, had trouble with a balky horse, which refused to pull the wagon. G. J. Wenke, a fireman, seized the bridle and while urging the animal had his forefinger bitten off by the vicious beast.

Cleveland After Ducks.

Baltimore, Nov. 16.—Ernest Gittings, a clubman of Baltimore, left Tuesday for Norfolk, where he will be joined this morning by Grover Cleveland and the Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke, of Princeton University, and together they will proceed on their annual duck hunt. They will spend the rest of this week at the Back Bay Duck Club, in Virginia, thirty miles below Norfolk.

GOFF TO RECEIVE HIS SENTENCE ON WEDNESDAY

Alleged "Speak-easy" Proprietor Pleads Non-Vult to Indictment in Court Today.

SEQUEL OF A RAID

Defendant Retracts His Plea of Not Guilty—Local Machine Figures in the Councilmanic Report on the Raid.

John J. Goff, of this city, whose hotel on West Front street was raided by Councilmen W. S. Tyler and William Starr Bullock, and who was indicted by the Grand Jury, appeared in court this morning, retracted his plea of not guilty and entered one of non vult. He will be sentenced on Wednesday, November 22.

Ever since the sensational raid was made at Mr. Goff's hotel there have been a succession of surprises and disclosures in the local Republican "machine," following the report of the councilmanic police committee report.

This report associated Andrew McCardell, one of the State factory inspectors, as well as Hamilton F. Kean, former chairman of the Union County Republican Committee, with an effort to secure a liquor license for Mr. Goff, on the alleged grounds that he had contributed to the Republican campaign fund.

Councilmen Tyler and Bullock claim that they knew Mr. Goff was violating the law, and that they instructed Chief Kiely to stop it. According to an interview with Mr. Tyler, the chief informed him that he did not know of violations there and when told to stop it said that he was unable to secure evidence against the proprietor.

This led to the raid and was followed later by the sensational report of the councilmanic police committee which alleged gross irregularities in the police department and on the part of Chief Kiely, which are to be investigated. Later Chief Kiely stated in a published article that he was securing evidence against John Goff's place and intended presenting it to the Grand Jury. He also claimed that he was acting under the instructions of the county prosecutor, and it is also claimed that Prosecutor English knew that Chief Kiely had evidence against Mr. Goff.

Mr. Goff's original plea of not guilty was received with considerable surprise on the part of many Plainfielders. It was known that if the case was allowed to go to trial it would result in many well known persons being called as witnesses.

Goff now occupies a neutral position, not admitting that he is either guilty or not guilty.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Elma Burdick Hubbard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Burdick, of Lockport, N. Y., to Orra S. Rogers, of this city. Mr. Rogers is well and favorably known here. He is an active member of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, also of the Y. M. C. A., where he is chairman of the committee on boys' work. Miss Hubbard is also known here and both enjoy a large circle of acquaintances.

Arion Dance Enjoyed.

Fully 100 young people enjoyed the Arion Club's first dance of the season in the former I. C. T. Hall last night. Music for the dancing was furnished by O'Reilly's orchestra and was continued until an early hour this morning. The committee which had the affair in charge consisted of Vincent W. Nash, Jr., chairman; Arthur Beekman, Henry L. Keen, Raymond L. McVoy and Frank Purcell.

Organized Aid Election.

The annual meeting of the Organized Aid Association will be held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church on Tuesday evening for the election of officers for the ensuing year and the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting. The address of the evening will be delivered by the Rev. George B. Wight, commissioner of charities for the State of New Jersey.

A Special Board Meeting.

The borough Board of Education will hold a special meeting Monday night to discuss plans for improving the grounds about the new addition to the Somerset school. At the present time they are being rough graded for the winter, but it is intended to have hedges and shrubbery set out in the spring.

LOCAL ELKS PREPARING FOR BIG MINSTREL SHOW

PARTS TO BE ASSIGNED AND REHEARSALS COMMENCED NEXT WEEK.

At their regular meeting Wednesday night the members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., took the first steps toward preparation for their first annual minstrel show. It was decided to give the production at the New Plainfield theatre some time during January, and as it is aimed to surpass anything in this line seen in the city before, rehearsals will be commenced next week and continue regularly under the direction of a professional coach.

Exalted Ruler William N. Runyon, who is a past master in the art of working up black-face entertainments of the plantation type, will have charge of the plans and will allot the various parts. The lodge has as much good talent in its ranks as any other organization in the State, and he will be sure to bring out the best that there is. Manager Counihan, who was recently decorated with the antlers, is greatly interested in the forthcoming production and will have special scenery and electrical effects for the entire bill.

The programme as outlined at present will comprise the customary first part, with interlocutor, end men and chorus of fifty, an olio of professional numbers and a sketch by members of 885. Special attention is to be paid to the dancing and costumes, while in all other details the boundary between the amateur and professional will be striven for.

DAY NURSERY PLANS NOW BEING MADE

KING'S DAUGHTERS AT WORK ON NEW UNDERTAKING.

Detailed plans for the future were effected at the meeting of the day nursery committee of the City Union, King's Daughters, held yesterday. This committee, comprising Mrs. A. E. Faber, Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney, Mrs. Mrs. Anna Most, Mrs. F. W. Jones, Miss Olive DeLany, Miss Holly and Mrs. Charles A. Reed, decided to hold a meeting every Thursday morning at 11:30 o'clock at the dispensary in the rooms of the Plainfield Relief Association.

At these meetings plans will be discussed for carrying on the day nursery work. It is expected that quarters will be secured within a few days. On the first Thursday morning in each month this committee will meet at 11:30 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A., and a representative from each King's Daughters' circle will be asked to attend. At this meeting ways and means will be considered for the day nursery work. This will be conference purposes.

The committee feel sure that there is room here for a nursery, but it will have a very modest beginning. When fully equipped it is expected that it will cost about $1,500 a year to engage a matron, a helper, and meet the expense of the laundry, food and rent.

A report reached the committee that one Plainfield woman, who goes out to wash, recently left her three weeks' old daughter and two years' old boy with a boy nine years old, and to keep the baby quiet the carekeeper fed the infant a lot of bread which resulted in a severe attack of stomach trouble. It is presumed that all of the bread in the house was given the baby. Now the infant is being cared for by Miss DeLany, the city nurse.

Although the committee is not yet able to announce the name of the matron engaged for the nursery, it can be said that she is a trained nurse, and is especially well-fitted for the position.

It is proposed to conduct this nursery along the same lines as the one in Orange, although it will not be so elaborate. A charge of five cents a day for each child left at the nursery will be made. This will provide food and care for the child during the day. The nursery will not be open on Sundays or holidays for the care of children.

The King's Daughters have entered upon this work with considerable zeal and enthusiasm and all feel as though the nursery will be a success and in time become a useful institution.

HINT AS TO HOW SOME CLOTHING IS MADE UP

YOUNG MAN IN COURT EXPLAINS DIFFERENCE BETWEEN RAGS AND CLIPS.

A glimpse of the inner workings of the clothing trade was afforded by Max Auster, arrested for buying rags without a junkman's license, in the city court this morning. Detective McCarthy caught Auster carrying a big bag of cloth-ends from a Front street store to the station yesterday afternoon. The prisoner seemed amused when the charge was read in court.

"They ain't rags what I buy," he said. "You don't understand the clothing trade. Those is clips what I get; no junkman can buy them. They cost ten cents a pound."

"What's the difference between rags and clips in the clothing trade?" asked the judge. "What do you do with clips?'

Auster shrugged his shoulders.

"What we do with them? Why other cloth can be made of clips, just like new goods. You see? No, No; these is far from rags."

Judge Runyon looked through the ordinances but couldn't find any legal difference between rags, for paper-making, and clips, for cloth-making. He told Auster he would either have to quit buying clips here or take out a junkman's license. Auster said he would quit. Sentence on the past offenses was suspended.

MISS BERTHA NEEDHAM A NOVEMBER BRIDE

DAUGHTER OF FORMER MAYOR NEEDHAM WEDDED TO H. M. CASE.

Miss Bertha Needham, daughter of former Mayor H. E. Needham, of the borough, and Howard M. Case, of Plainfield avenue, this city, were married yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. The ceremony was perfromed at the home of the bride's father, 52 Craig place, by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church. The home was decorated with ferns, palms and chrysanthemums.

The wedding march was played by Mrs. J. Herbert Case, and as the bride and groom entered the parlor, where the ceremony was performed, they were preceded by Everett Case as page and Bessie Case as flower girl, nephew and niece of the couple. The bride was gowned in white crepe albatross trimmed with chiffon ribbon and lace. She carried white chrysanthemums. The page and flower girl were dressed in white. One carried pink carnations and the other white chrysanthemums.

After the ceremony an informal reception was held, and later Mr. and Mrs. Case left for Philadelphia, where they will spend a few days. From there they will go to Atlantic City for ten days. The bride received a large collection of handsome and costly gifts, including furniture, silver and goldware, cut glass, etc.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Case are active members of the First Baptist church, where Mr. Case has been organist for several years and Mrs. Case a member of the choir. They will reside at 52 Craig place upon their return home.

MISS STONE ENTERTAINS.

For the Benefit of the Day-School Work in Syria.

Miss Dotha Stone Pinneo, a well-known story-teller, of Norwalk, Conn., gave two delightful entertainments in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon and evening. The affair was under the auspices of the Sunshine Mission Band, which is helping to support day-school work in Syria.

Miss Stone entertained the children at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and at 8 o'clock in the evening the older persons attended. She is gifted as a story-teller and her selections both humorous and pathetic, were thoroughly enjoyed. Miss Stone is a member of the free lecture board engaged by the Board of Education of New York.

E. N. Cole was elected secretary of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association at the annual meeting yesterday of that body at Asbury Park. Eighteen of the twenty-two members attended. Reports of the past season's work showed success in every department. The entertainments given cost about $11,000. The three vacancies caused by death during the year were not filled. Vice President A. E. Ballard was granted a month's vacation.

MR. REED'S EXPLANATION

Lawyer For Chief Kiely Tells Why He Objects to Messrs Tyler and Bullock.

WANTS NO DELAY

But Says the Two Councilmen Should Not Sit as Judges at the Councilmanic Investigation About to Be Made.

"If the trial of Chief Kiely is delayed because Messrs. Tyler and Bullock insist upon sitting as judges, it will be their fault and not ours," said former State Senator Charles A. Reed this morning. Continuing, Chief Kiely's counsel declared: "The law does not require them to sit. The nine other Councilmen can legally try and decide the case.

"Under the statutes and decisions of the courts, Kiely is entitled 'to a fair trial and every reasonable opportunity to make his defense.' It seems to me perfectly obvious that it is improper and unfair, in view of what has passed, for either Mr. Tyler or Mr. Bullock to participate as judges in that trial. Indeed it seems hardly possible that they will attempt to do so.

"If they feel that their cause is just, one would think they would be more than willing to submit the controversy to the determination of the nine remaining members of the Council. In that case there would be no occasion for delay caused by a contest over their right to sit. If, however, they insist upon acting as judges, it seems to me clearly my duty to use every legal means to prevent it and if delay results therefrom, let the blame rest where it belongs.

"The proceeding is judicial in its nature. The Councilmen are the judges. In every court where any judge is interested in the result of the trial, or has expressed an opinion against the innocence of the accused, or it prejudiced, or is a witness, or for any person not clearly impartial, such judge always leaves the bench during the trial and never takes part in making up the decision.

"That a man cannot act as judge or juror in his own quarrel, is a maxim as old as the law itself. Our highest courts have so held time and time again. And it has been held that not even the legislature has power to over ride this rule. In the case of Winans vs. Crane, 7 Vroom, 394, our Supreme Court declared: 'The maxim is inherent in and a part of the nature of judicial action, and although in many matters the legislature may provide for the exercise of judicial functions, and designate the persons who shall exercise them, yet it cannot, in so doing, lose sight of the essential character of judicial action, and authorize or sanction a judgment through instrumentalities contrary to the innate and universally recognized sense of natural justice. In such a case the power conferred would not be judicial. It would be tyrannical.' "

As stated in The Daily Press yesterday: "According to law, the Common Council must sit as a body in hearing the charges. But it can, if it so desires, delegate the power to any committee, provided it does so by a four-fifths vote."

A section of the Act of 1902 contains the following specific direction:

"And it shall be lawful for and authority is hereby vested in the Common Council or other governing body of any city by the affirmative vote of not less than four-fifths of the entire membership thereof to designate and appoint by ordinance the board, officer or authority by whom such charge or charges shall be heard, tried and determined; and when so designated and appointed, such board, officer or authority shall have the sole and exclusive power to hear, try and determine such charge or charges; and upon such charge or charges being by said board, officer or authority sustained to suspend for a defined period or dismiss the person so charged from office."

In his opinion filed with the Common Council, Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh refers to this section of the Act of 1902 in the following manner: "The effect of this legislation and the Supreme Court's decision on the police commission act of 1905 is that the only body in this city having authority to try the charges against a police officer of the character described in the committee's report is the Common Council. It would, of course, be competent for the Common Council to pass an ordinance by an affirmative vote of not less than four-fifths of its entire membership and thereby to designate and apoint the board of police or other board, officer or authority by whom such charges shall be heard, tried and determined; but until such an ordinance shall have been passed the Common Council is the only body having authority in the premises."

MRS. A.K. SMITH, MISSING, IS NOT MOURNED BY HUBBY

DUNELLEN ENGINEER SATISFIED TO FIND WIFE GONE AND HOUSE STRIPPED

Arthur K. Smith, the Dunellen Central Railroad engineer, whose wife decamped last week, is taking her disappearance calmly. He came home last Friday morning to find not only his wife missing, but the house stripped of everything excepting a cook stove, some old bedding and the family dog, but the neighbors have looked in vain for some evidence of Smith's regret over the breaking up of his home. The only thing he has said is "he hoped she would not come back."

Smith learned from a neighbor that his wife went to her mother's home at Bridgeton. The household goods were taken away by a furniture dealer of this city, to whom they had been sold by Mrs. Smith.

Smith and his wife are said to have been on bad terms for some time. Neighbors say sounds of a lively scrap came from the house the Sunday before the wife decamped. When Smith left for his work Monday that was the last he saw of her. His run is a long one and he didn't get back until the day after the wife cleaned out the house and disappeared.

Smith says he doesn't intend to try to get his wife back, and is willing to let the furniture man keep his goods. He seems to be satisfied with things as they are.

DR. SCHENCK TALKS AT SPECIAL SERVICE

TONIGHT NEWARK DIVINE SPEAKS AT MONROE AVENUE M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, gave an earnest spiritual talk at the special service held in Monroe Avenue M. E. church last night. These services have been well attended and the results are encouraging.

Tonight Rev. Dr. W. H. Morgan, pastor of the Central M. E. church, Newark, considered by some to be the most popular preacher in Newark, will speak.

Two years ago, when the building trades' strike was on in Newark, the bosses and employes each selected a committee, and when the selection was finally made, Dr. Morgan's name was the only one left on it. He settled the strike in a manner entirely satisfactory to both sides. Dr. Martine is a forcible speaker and no doubt a large audience will attend tonight.

M. E. SONG RECITAL.

Musical at the First Church Last Night.

First M. E. church music-lovers enjoyed a delightful song recital, last night. The edifice was thronged with a large and appreciative audience.

Miss Dolores Reedy, mezzo-soprano, of New York, and Mrs. Caia Aarup Greene, pianist, also of New York, took the principal parts.

The programme was opened with two selections by Mr. Skiff, tenor. The first number was song cycle, "Eliland," by Von Fielitz, and "Ah! Moon of My Delight," from "In a Persian Garden."

"Autumnal Gale" was Miss Reedy's first selection, and she was given a flattering reception. Her voice was pleasing to all and she was obliged to respond to an encore.

The organist sang four numbers as follows: "Orpheus With His Lute," Busch; "Murmuring Zephyrs," Jensen; "Love Song," Brahms! "Dream in Twilight," Strauss, and he received hearty applause throughout. Two of his best selections were "Israfel," by King, and "Serenade," by Aldrich.

Miss Reedy again favored the audience by singing "Were I a Star," by Hawley; "A Roundelay," by Lidgey, and "O Come With Me in the Summer Night," by Van der Stucken. Generous applause was given each number, showing true appreciation.

The programme was concluded with four numbers by Mr. Skiff, "Lady Picking Mulberries," by Kelly; "Kitty Clover," by Kean; "Darkey Lullaby," Short, and "Pretty Creature," by Wilson.

The work of Mrs. Greene as accompanist was delightful and assisted largely in the success of the recital.

Rev. Thomas R. Slicer Next.

The next speaker in the New York ministers' course of sermons at All Souls' church will be the Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, D. D., author and preacher to a large and influential congregation at Fourth avenue and Twentieth street, New York. Mr. Slicer will preach on "Some Fundamental Questions in Religion."

YOUNG SCOTCHMAN FATALLY STRICKEN IN FRONT OF GOFF'S HOTEL.

John Murdoch, a young Scotchman who has been in this country but six months, dropped dead at 10:30 last night in front of John Goff's hotel on West Front street, where he had been boarding. He retired early, but feeling ill had risen from bed and gone downstairs in the hope that a little fresh air might revive him. He had evidently stood in the doorway when he succumbed to an attack of apoplexy.

Roomers in the hotel, who had spoken to him before he went out and who noted that he did not return, went to look for him. The body was found lying on the sidewalk at the main entrance. It was removed to Cole's undertaking rooms and County Physician Westcott granted a burial permit.

Murdoch was twenty-eight years old and was a mason bytrade. During his residence in Plainfield he was employed by Tallamy Brothers. He was a member of the local Masons' Union and the Grand Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons of Scotland, but so far as known he had no relatives in this country.

MANAGER COUNIHAN'S GUESTS.

Entertains Perth Amboy Men Who Will Build Theatre.

Included in the audience that witnessed "Simple Simon Simple" at the New Plainfield theatre last night was a party of ten Perth Amboy business men who are to build a playhouse in that city and who have secured Manager Counihan to conduct it for them. They came as his guests and were brought both ways in automobiles provided by him. The men were shown all through the house with Architect Clafin, of New York, who drew the plans, and expressed themselves as being greatly pleased with it. The theatre they have decided to build will be constructed on similar lines and will be handsomely furnished. A plot 55 by 135 feet has been purchased on one of the main streets and the building will be ready for next season. It will be known as the New Empire.

Mr. Counihan will have no money invested in the construction but will assume full charge once the house is ready. The capitalists have been watching his management of the Plainfield theatre and they became convinced that he could prove as equally successful in Perth Amboy. They occupied boxes last night and were in a position to note the large gathering and the splendid production.

BANQUETTED TEAM.

Borough High School Football Players Entertained by Cooking Class.

The cooking school of the North Plainfield High School gave a banquet in the manual training building, last night, in honor of the football eleven. The entire high school faculty attended, the guests numbering about sixty.

The menu, a fine one, was prepared by the cooking class in the manual training building, and everyone thoroughly enjoyed the feast. Afterwards a dance was held and continued until 11 o'clock.

This committee was in charge: Miss Myra Emmons, Miss Maude Emmons, Miss Florence Fowler, Miss Helen Fowler, Miss Grace Woolston, Miss Ida Englehart, Miss Catherine Peacock and Miss Hallock. The young women were assisted by Prof. Heicher.

KNIGHTS BROUGHT A CROWD.

Last Night's Attendance at St. Joseph's Fair the Largest Yet.

The banner crowd of the week attended St. Joseph's fair in Saengerbund Hall last night, when the Knights of Columbus of this city had charge. The council brought a large number of visitors and all the attractions were liberally patronized. The entertainment was provided by Albert Matthews, of St. Mary's choir, and City Judge William N. Runyon, who sang several selections.

Tonight the Holy Name Society will have charge and another big crowd is expected. The organization has engaged T. A. Baker, the monologue artist and vocalist, of New York, to furnish the entertainment.

Dr. and Mrs. Browning Entertain.

Dr. and Mrs. W. K. Browning, of Park avenue, entertained the card club of which they are members at their home last night. Mrs. Voorhees, who substituted for a regular member, received the prize for the women and Hiram Woodruff the men's prize. Refreshments were served after the play and a social time enjoyed. Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Woodruff, of Westervelt avenue, will entertain the club in two weeks.

The Daily Press of today consists of twelve pages.

AN "EVERYDAY AF-FAIR"

Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Church, Again Show Originality.

THE WEEK OUTLINED

Prettily Decorated Booths Display Articles Appropriate For Each of the Seven Days—The Attendance Large.

Always original in their methods of entertainment and means for securing funds to carry on their work, the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church, even outdid itself in the "Every Day Af-fair," which began last night and is to be resumed this evening. The large crowd which came in anticipation of "something new" was not disappointed and no one went away sorry for the visit.

In one sense of the word, the "Every Day Af-fair" is a bazaar, but the band has provided so many unique features this fact is lost sight of. For each day in the week they have placed in the Sunday school room of the church, a prettily decorated booth and from them are sold articles appropriate to the day after which it is named. For example, Monday is supposed to be set aside for washing by the busy housewife, and the Monday booth contains necessary aids to this operation. A feature is the presence of two tubs, supposed to hold clean and dirty suds, but which are in reality delicious white and brown pop corn, sold at five cents per bag. Tuesday is ironing day, and at the Tuesday booth young women sell ironing stands, boards, wax and other things useful and ornamental. Wednesday is baking day, and the Wednesday booth displays as fine a collection of cakes, pies and pastry as ever left an oven. The supply was all but exhausted and though today is Friday, baking will be in order to make ready for tonight's demand.

Thursday is supposed to be an "off" day, when folks go visiting, and naturally the hostess wants to treat her guests to candy. The Thursday booth has a large display of confections that bears out the idea. When Friday comes, sweeping must be done, and the Friday booth shows brooms, dust caps, dust bags, aprons and dusters, all for sale at a nominal price. Shopping is done on Saturday, and the center of the room is given up to a large booth that contains almost everything that one could think of in the way of fancy articles. Great ingenuity has been expended in having on hand "just what the people want," and the business section on a Saturday night was miniatured in the crowd about the Saturday booth. The Sunday booth presents a pretty assortment of sacred books, calendars with Biblical inscriptions, postal cards and ferns that entice the coins from the visitors' pockets.

In addition to all these attractions the platform and small class rooms have been set with tables and those who crave a delicious repast on any day in the week are served with their preference from a neat bill of fare. Featured on it are Hecker's buckwheat cakes, wholesome and appetizing, and W. L. Smalley's incomparable sausage. There is also to be had coffee, ice cream, cake and pie, all supplied at a moment's notice by obliging young waitresses.

The different booths were in charge of the following members of the band: Monday, Miss Cora Miller, Mrs. Clarence Thorne, Miss Edna Dilts, Miss Edith Leek, Miss Helen Smith; Tuesday, Miss Hazel Martin, Miss May Randolph, Miss Nettie Robinson and Miss Margaret Leggett; Wednesday, Miss Anna Searing, Mrs. William Olmsted, Miss Metta Rose, Miss Cora Laire, Miss Emma Line and Miss Jessie Hockridge; Thursday, Mrs. Theodore Mantz, Miss May Van Fleet, Mrs. H. C. Van Emburgh and Mrs. Gilbert Fletcher; Friday, Mrs. W. C. Startup, Mrs. Arthur Smith, Mrs. Howard Allegar, Miss Eva Dunavan, Mrs. George Reynolds, Miss Helen Bogert and Mrs. Corra Ryno; Saturday, Mrs. F. S. Cutter, Mrs. E. Zeisz, Mrs. Frank Pearson, Mrs. William Hubbard and Miss M. Schnellendruesler; Sunday, Mrs. H. F. Crawford, Miss Kate Bodine, Mrs. Alfred Baker, Mrs. W. F. Oliver and Miss Wilhelmina Vroom. Mrs. L. S. Smith acts as chairman of the whole "Af-fair" and the Misses Mabel Wilson and Achsah Holmes are cashiers. Fred E. Smith, Jr., has charge of the tickets and the Misses Anna and Laura Bodine take care of the checking room.

The accompanying programme is not elaborate, but last night pianola selections by Morgan Townsend added not a little to the enjoyment. The instrument was furnished by William E. MacClymont and tonight he will perform upon it, with a choice selection of appropriate music.

The proceeds from the enterprise are to be used by the band in furthering its support of foreign missions.

IMPORTANT STATE PAPER

Forthcoming Message of the President Will be of Extraordinary Interest.

Washington, Nov. 17.—From all that can be learned, the forthcoming annual message of President Roosevelt will be the most important ever written by him. The document is now in the printer's hands, and the President is going over the proofs. By the latter part of next week it will be in shape for final print, and then will be distributed in advance to the daily papers of the country, through the medium of the press associations, under pledge that it will not be published until sent to Congress.

So freely has the President discussed his various policies with the members of his Cabinet, Senators and Representatives and other callers, as well as in his recent public speeches, that it is possible to present at this time a fairly-accurate forecast of the leading features of the message.

Railroad Legislation.

Some time ago the President declared to one of his Senatorial callers that he considered the matter of railroad rate legislation to be the most important of all subjects for discussion at the coming session. And he will not be satisfied with mere discussion. He will insist upon legislation. He will ask in his message that Congress provide for an administrative body of men—either the Interstate Commerce Commission or some other—which shall have the power to fix a reasonable rate in place of one found to be unreasonable and discriminating, such new rate to go into effect within a reasonable time, subject, of course, to review in the proper courts.

This is the substance of his railroad policy, as outlined in his Raleigh speech last month.

No Revolutionary Purpose.

It is far from the President's intention to overturn the railroad business of the country. He does not ask for a general revision of rates. All he demands at this time is the legal substitution of a reasonable rate for one found to be unreasonable, in any particular instance. He will also repeat his declarations made in his last message against rebating, and the abuse of the private car and terminal track system.

No Tariff Modification.

So desirous is the President for adequate legislation on this subject that he will not, for the present at least, insist upon modification of the tariff. He will leave that subject for further presentation, after the railroad business is out of the way.

Insurance Supervision.

In the matter of insurance legislation the President is expected to go much further than he did in his last message, when he disposed of the question in a paragraph urging Congress to consider whether the power of the Bureau of Corporations could be extended to cover interstate transactions in insurance. It is known that the President has been deeply stirred over the revelations made by the New York Legislative Committee, and that he feels that the time has come for the Federal government to assume some sort of supervision over this branch of business. Incidentally, it is likely that he will have some interesting things to say on the general subject of graft and frenzied finance, concerning which the country has been so much agitated in the past year.

Santo Domingo Treaty.

He will urge the ratification of the Santo Domingo treaty, which provides for the temporary administration of the customs of that country by the United States for the benefit of American as well as foreign creditors. He will present the reports of Colonel Colton, the American receiver appointed by the Dominican government, showing how successfully the scheme has worked thus far.

Panama Canal.

The message will also recommend an immediate appropriation for the prosecution of work on the Panama Canal. The $10,000,000 provided by Congress three years ago is now practically exhausted, and it is emperative that more money be forthcoming if dirt is to be made to fly next summer, as has been predicted by Chairman Shonts, of the Commission.

Relations With China.

The anti-American boycott in China will furnish the text for an interesting chaper of the message. The President will ask for such modification of the Chinese exclusion laws and such provision for their administration as will insure to all Chinamen, excepting the coolie classes only, the same right of entry into this country and the same treatment as is guaranteed to the citizens of other countries.

Diplomatic Salaries.

One subject upon which the President has spent considerable thought is the improvement of our diplomatic and consular service. He will advocate higher salaries and better accommodations for the embassies and legations. At present the United States owns only one legation, the one recently built in Pekin. The others are all rented. There is at present scarcely a single American Ambassador or Minister whose salary is adequate to provide merely the entertaining that his official position requires of him.

Administrative Reforms.

There will be a chapter upon contemplated reforms in governmental administrative methods, the data being furnished by the Keep Commission, which has been investigating this subject for several months past. It is probable that the creation of a general purchasing office for supplies will be among the innovations recommended.

Preservation of Niagara Falls.

A few days ago the President promised to insert in his message a paragraph urging the preservation of Niagara Falls. A committee that waited upon him showed how the Falls were in danger of destruction on account of the constantly-increasing draft made upon the waters of the Niagara river by various power concerns. He will probably suggest the appointment of an international Canadian-American commission to cope with the problem.

The message will contain the usual recommendations for the betterment of our military strength, particularly on the seas. Our foreign relations will be thoroughly reviewed, especially those connected with the Central and South American republics.

The Watson Construction

The making of men's clothes ought to be regarded seriously if they are to have distinction and the qualities of styles, fit and durability which all men should demand. Now, at Watson's it's taken seriously. And the Watson tailors have been trained to show ability in making clothes as they should be made.

The Watson overcoats, for instance, follow the dictates of fashion, but they show originality and bear the custom-made appearance. Watson paddocks are coats of dignity; the 52 inch length overcoats are models of style and comfort, while the Watson three quarter length overcoats are equally stylish—a bit snappier, so to speak. In each and every garment exclusive ideas add charm and style—but add nothing to the price.

A Watson-made suit is made with the same care and attention to every detail. They will bear the closest comparison with the best grade of custom made suits. And they won't be surpassed—with their clinging collars, shapely shoulders, well setting lapels and general excellence.

$10 to $25.

In both suits and overcoats the wide assortment of materials permits a wide range of choices, tweeds, cheviots, worsteds, cassimeres, Thibets, vicunas and kerseys, in blacks, blues, popular grays and fancy mixtures.

Plainfield, N. J., November 17, 1905.

Prince Louis is certainly convinced by this time that the United States is "the pace that kills" country.

Sheriff Cooper has entered upon his second year and has amply demonstrated that the voters of Somerset county made no mistake in placing him in office.

The "In the Air" man in the Newark News was very ungallant to poke fun at the New Brunswick girls and his crime was none the less when a Middlesex county seat paper took him seriously.

"SIMON" MADE 'EM LAUGH.

The Man from Simpleville Turned Theatre Into a Fun Factory.

"Simple Simon Simple" and his companion in mischief, "Little Mose," aided by principals and a chorus of fifty, turned the New Plainfield theatre into a laugh factory, last night, and almost had a big audience in convulsions a dozen times. Nothing like it in the way of musical comedy or extravaganza has been seen in the city in many a day and the production was pronounced a winner straight through. Neil McNeil, as the tall, lanky "Simon," and diminutive Jerry Sullivan as "Mose," would have given the people their money's worth if all the rest of the company had been put aside—and it was a capable one from top to bottom.

The lily pond scene with pretty girls' faces in place of flowers, at the opening of the third act, was the most unique and effective setting yet seen on the stage of the local theatre. Manager Counihan is to be complimented on securing attractions of this kind for local playgoers.

FURNITURE CONTRACTS.

Contracts for the Equipment of the New High School Let.

Contracts for the furnishing of fixtures and furniture for the new High School were given out last night by the Board of Education, after receiving reports from the building committee. Part of the contract for the tables, chairs and general furniture went to the W. B. Wood Co., of Newark, in which T. F. Budlong and E. E. Runyon, of this city, are interested.

The lighting fixtures contract went to William Browe & Son Co., Newark, for $1,085.25. The contract for school desks and auditorium chairs went to the American School Furniture Company. The contract for tables, chairs, teachers' desks and general furniture was split up, part going to each of the bidders, Siegel, Cooper & Co., John Wanamaker, and the W. B. Wood Co., of Newark.

Elks' Memorial Service.

The first Sunday in December is observed by the order of Elks as memorial day and the local lodge is preparing to hold its service. It will be given in the New Plainfield theatre, but whether the afternoon or evening has not been decided upon as yet. Owing to the increased facilities, the service will be conducted on a more elaborate scale than was the one at the Casino last year.

Alis III vs. Westfield.

The Alis III football team, of this city, has made arrangements to play the Westfield A. A. on Hope Common this Saturday afternoon. As these two teams played a tie game several weeks ago, with the score of 5 to 5, Plainfield football enthusiasts will have the opportunity of seeing an interesting struggle.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS CONCLUDE CONFERENCE

ONLY ROUTINE BUSINESS TRANSACTED AT FINAL SESSION.

The half-yearly conference of Friends of the Plainfield and Shrewsbury meetings was concluded this morning with a business session. At this time the ministers and elders presented reports of their work during the past six months. These showed the society to be in a very satisfactory condition and the outlook is promising.

Following the business session there was a meeting for worship, when several Friends made a few remarks. At 12 o'clock the conference adjourned and after dinner was served in the upper room of the meeting house the delegates left for their homes.

While this meeting has been one of great interest, it was not as largely attended as those previously held. The Friends are now looking forward to the annual general conference of Young Friends' Associations to be held at the meeting house on Saturday, November 25, morning and afternoon.

HEAVENLY REST MUSICALE.

Under Auspices of Woman's Guild Last Night.

An appreciative audience attended a musicale given in the parish house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest last night. The entertainment was arranged by the Women's Guild, the committee being Mrs. Edward Brown and Miss Elizabeth Forster.

Part first consisted of a piano solo by Miss Daisy Houston, a quartette selection by Mrs. Edward Brown, Miss Elizabeth Forster, John Daub and J. A. Babcock, a mandolin solo by Chester Briggs, a contralto solo by Mrs. Bayard Hawthorne and a mandolin duet by Chester and William Briggs.

In part second there was a piano solo by Miss Houston, a quartette selection, "Tell Me, Flora," contralto solos, "Ah, 'Tis a Dream" and "The Grasshopper and the Bumble Bee," by Mrs. Hawthorne, a vocal duet by Mrs. Edward Brown and Miss Forster, a madolin selection by Messrs. Briggs, and a quartette selection, "Jack and Jill."

After the entertainment members of the Guild conducted a sale of ice cream and cake.

Brakeman's Leg Severed.

Stephen Schultz, a Lehigh Valley brakeman, whose home is at Freeland, Pa., fell beneath a train at South Plainfield yesterday and had his right leg severed just below the knee. He was hurried to the Perth Amboy Hospital, where it was said he would recover. Schultz had been working for the road but a short time.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY

James L. Martin, of New Durham road, near Stelton, appeared at police headquarters in New Brunswick Wednesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock and reported that his horse and carriage that he had left tied on Dennis street, had disappeared. Sergeant Clinton made some inquiry and soon learned that Jake Gilliland, a well-known farmer from Martin's dock, while in a somewhat irresponsible condition, had been seen to drive off with the rig from a post on Dennis street, while he had left his own rig tied to a post a few doors away. Detective Dunn was sent out to round up Gilliland. Gilliland was asked what he had done with the other team and denied all knowledge of it. He declared he had not driven off with it but had had his own horse and wagon and did not know what he had done with it. He was taken to police headquarters where he still persisted that he had not had Martin's team and became righly indignant when accused of taking it off. He was kept in the station for four hours but could tell no more than he had earlier in the evening. The search for the Martin horse was continued but it could not be found. Yesterday morning Sergeant Clinton learned that a horse and wagon had been left early Wednesday evening at Winder's stables on Pearce street. Detective Dunn went there and found that it was the missing horse and wagon. Martin, who had returned to town, claimed it. The foreman of the stables at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday night had found the horse and wagon under a shed. It is presumed that Gilliland entirely unconscious of what he was doing had left the rig in the stables within fifteen minutes of the time he left Dennis street.

Deputy County Clerk Matheson and Under Sheriff Holden yesterday afternoon at Trenton served a copy of the indictment and the list of jurors who will try Charles Long, Frank Van Nuis' old farmhand, murderer of Matthew Cunningham, on the defendant at the jailors' office, in the county jail. The prisoner when he was brought to the office looked much frightened, not knowing what was to happen. The smile which Long always wears disappeared when Deputy Clerk Matheson, Under Sheriff Holden, Prosecutor Crossley, County Detective Munro, Captain William Hartman, Constable Harry Potts and two reporters, walked into the office. The deputy clerk told Long what the papers were and instructed him to turn them over to his counsel, W. Holt Apgar. Monday is fixed for the trial.

In the District Court at New Brunswick yesterday morning a verdict of $10 and costs was given in the suit of Mary Benzer, the seven-year-old daughter of Ella Benzer, of Piscataway, against the Public Service Corporation. On the evening of August 26 the girl with her mother were getting aboard a car at Somerville. The car started and she was thrown down injuring her back and head. She sued for damages and the matter was adjusted today in a friendly way.

Local young people are commenting with unabated interest on the spirited denunciation of card playing delivered by Rev. W. W. Casselberry, of the Presbyterian church, at the revival meetng Monday night. His downright declaration that the "girls who went on their way to that party" (he had referred to one particular affair) "went on their way to hell," has created something of a sensational among the set who have been enjoying card parties.

Arrangements have been completed by several young people for a party and house dance to be held next week. It is understood that the affair will go on despite the extension of the revival.

The evangelistic services are to be continued all next week, an extension of six days beyond the original limit. The meetings will be held in the Methodist church.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Dennis Harlow on Front street, Wilhelm J. Mench and Miss Lillian Irene Pettit, both of East Mauch Chunk, Pa., were united in marriage by Rev. J. A. Cubberley.

A snow fence for the protection of the switches at the Lehigh Valley station is being erected.

Miss Mary Drake, of Dunellen, visited Mrs. O. E. Thorne yesterday.

Mrs. Julia Letson, of Stelton, visited Mrs. Lewis Randolph yesterday.

A Chimney Fire.

Royal Baking Powder
Absolutely Pure

The Government Tests

prove Royal Baking Powder pure and healthful, made from grape cream of tartar, absolutely free from alum or phosphatic acids and highest of all baking powders in leavening strength.

The Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price per pound, and is cheaper and better at its price than any baking powder in the world. It makes pure, clean and healthful food.

Avoid Alum Baking Powders

"I am very strongly of the opinion that the use of alum and salts of alumina in food should be prohibited. It is well understood that the constant use of alum compounds exerts both a deleterious effect upon the digestive organs and an irritation of the internal organs after absorption."

EDWARD S. WOOD, M.D., Professor of Chemistry, Harvard Medical School, Boston.

It must be remembered that when alum baking powders are used in making bread, biscuit or cake, a portion of the alum is carried unchanged into the stomach.

Ten-cent, twenty-five-cent, cent-an-ounce powders contain alum.

FREEHOLDERS IN A TILT OVER THE AMBOY BRIDGE

PERSONALITIES EXCHANGED OVER EFFORT TO AWARD CONTRACT.

New Brunswick, Nov. 17.—There was a lively tilt at the meeting of the Board of Freeholders yesterday over an effort of the Perth Amboy freeholders to push through the award of the contract for building the county's share of the Perth Amboy approach to the Amboy bridge. Under the agreement with Perth Amboy the city is to build about 400 feet of the approach, to join a 300-foot section to be built by the county. It resulted in the laying over of the award of the county's contract for two weeks. When the matter came up for consideration Solicitor Willis advised caution. The county has a bid from Sandford & Harris, the same contractors who built the main bridge structure, to build the approach on the side of Sheridan street and at a certain angle with the rest of the bridge.

Perth Amboy, Mr. Willis says, wishes to build its part of the approach on the opposite side of the street, and in such a way that a sharp turn will be needed to connect it with the county's section. The city plans to this do, it is said, so that these will be room enough to lay a sewer main in the roadway of Sheridan street, along which the approach is to be constructed.

Mr. Willis declared there is so much doubt about the matter that the county should not award any contract until it is definitely established what Perth Amboy means to do. Freeholders Glenn, Haney, Johansen and Kroeger, of Perth Amboy, all declared the county should go ahead with the award of its own contract. Mr. Haney declared that Perth Amboy could be depended upon to do the right thing. Mr. Willis still objected on the ground that there was no certainty that the Perth Amboy part and the county part would join when completed if a contract were awarded and a part of the approach built now.

Mr. Haney declared that there wer just as honorable men in Perth Amboy's Board of Aldermen as there were in the Board of Freeholders, and the county should trust them to do what is right. By this time every one was stirred up and half a dozen freeholders began indulging in personalities.

Freeholder O'Neill, of New Brunswick, declared that the bridge was no good.

"You never voted for that bridge or anything in connection with it," retorted Freeholder Glenn, of Perth Amboy.

"You're right, I didn't," replied O'Neill. "I'm proud of the fact. I think now that the cheapest way out for the county is to put a red flag on the bridge and sell it to the highest bidder. It isn't as solid as the temporary bridge they put up here when the Albany street bridge was built."

"I guess the people showed what they think of you, all right," replied Glenn. The allusion was to the fact that O'Neill was defeated at last election for recorder of New Brunswick.

Action on the contract was finally deferred until Wednesday, November 29.

DEAD IN A DRIFTING BOAT.

Two Egg Harbor Men Met Mysterious End on a Launch.

Egg Harbor City, Nov. 17.—Oystermen found the steam launch Jubilee drifting out to sea yesterday, and when they boarded her they discovered Capt. John Sauer, of this place, and his friend, Johann Dietrich, lying dead in the cabin. How the men were killed is a mystery, but there is nothing to indicate foul play.

Both men had been dead for some time. It is thought that they were asphyxiated by gases from the firebox. The cabin was slightly disarranged, but there were no signs of a scuffle.

likes to feel so far as "looks" are concerned that he is "It." The Iron Brigade

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," Etc.

Copyright, 1902, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

"Col. Hammond ordered his arrest, sir, because of papers in his possession, showing he was mixed up in the aiding of Confederates—officers—across the Potomac. They got one of 'em too weak to ride. He's in that ambulance yonder," and the dragoon pointed to the yellow-painted vehicle coming bouncing among the ruts and ridges of the frozen roadway. A faint moan issued from beneath the canvas cover as the driver reined up, and Benton, moved by compassion, urged his horse past the silent, passive column and peered in through the opening at the back. The next instant he was out of saddle, and the rear spring bent under his weight as he leaped upon the steps. Then they heard his voice in tones of mingled grief, joy and amaze: "Paul! Paul! Dear old boy, don't you know me?"

CHAPTER XXI.

LEARDING THE LION IN HIS DEN.

Over the useless slaughter of the field of Fredericksburg it were best to draw the veil. Far down at the left flank the old brigade groped its way through dripping fog and lay in line of battle, having little to do but wait orders, and catching only occasional shots from the southern guns along the heights. Old hands under fire, the veterans—officers and men—lay close and kept still. Their rifles could effect nothing against an enemy uphill and behind entrenchments. New hands, not yet used to battle, were not so quiet, and the gallant colonel of the great battalion of Wolverines, big almost as the rest of the brigade, thought it necessary to ride up and down his line, exhorting his men to steadiness in loud and powerful voice. "It lets 'em know I'm here," said he, to the expostulant commander of the next door regiment. "I see," said the latter, as a volley flashed down from Early's fellows along the crest, "and it also lets the enemy. Your men will be steadier without the telling," which reasoning the colonel pondered over and accepted. He and his thoroughbreds were spoiling for a chance to show their neighbors from the adjoining states that they were quite as valiant as the vaunted old brigade. "Give us half a chance," said he, "and then—you look out for the Wolverines."

But neither Fredericksburg nor Chancellorsville, nor Virginia, nor even Maryland afforded the longed-for opportunity. Not until the midsummer morning of the first day at Gettysburg did their time come, and it came it proved a test the like of which had never been met before, even in that hard-fighting, hard-hammered command.

Meanwhile, what had not befallen other actors in our story—notably the Damon and Pythias of the ante-bellum days, Benton and Paul Ladue.

"Seems to have 'bout as many friends among the rebs as he has on our side of the line," had the division commander remarked of Benton, though in a moment of exaggerated biliousness, the day after the retreat from the southern shore. Fred's new general had come in for a rasping from the corps commander, because the leading brigade took the wrong road in the rain and darkness, and so delayed matters over an hour. It happened that Benton had guided the division to its first position on the field; that he had been sent to find Gen. Franklin; that when he returned with a message from the latter officer, the division was in motion, and the commander had ridden off to speak with Gibbon or somebody else, and Benton followed, of course, in search of his chief, instead of staying with the head of column. Finding himself rebuked, the general reprimanded Benton in the presence and hearing of officers and men. Benton's heart and temper being both sore and tried, he had replied with much spirit, if not subordination, to the effect that the message he was charged to deliver admitted of no delay; that if the general had been where he belonged there would have been no delay; and that sooner than submit to such injustice he would ask to be relieved from staff duty forthwith, and wrote that very night to his old friend and general, then a member of an important military tribunal at Washington, begging his advice and intervention, and telling him, of course, the story of poor Ladue.

But, being coupled with another, that story was now almost an old one at the capital, for thither had the poor lad been sent and Jennings with him; Paul looking, indeed, "more dead than alive," for a strange, eventful history had been his ever since the dreadful morning north of Sharpsburg that stretched him senseless in front of Gibbon's furious guns. "Killed," said Lamar and other officers who saw him borne away in a blanket. "Mortally wounded," said the hospital attendants who first ministered to him, back of the Dunker church, where reigned confusion inexpressible owing to the appalling number of those needing surgical aid. How he got there or beyond, Paul never knew until long thereafter. Tender-hearted Virginians had concealed him until he was well enough to move about. Odd as it may seem, the most practicable way for southern soldier to go from the Potomac to his own people was by way of the north. Through the kind Virginians, civilian clothing was bought for their interesting captive, and by mid November Paul was safely under the roof of a well-to-do and most active southern sympathizer in Baltimore.

KING'S DAUGHTERS GIVE A SUCCESSFUL TEA

CHARITY CIRCLE CONDUCTS PLEASANT AFFAIR AT MRS. GARRIGUE'S HOME.

The Charity Circle, King's Daughters, gave a successful tea and sale of useful articles and candy yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. A. Garrigues, of Watchung avenue. The affair was held for the purpose of raising the amount of money pledged toward the support of the city nurse and it is believed that the net proceeds will be about $100.

Mrs. James R. Joy is president of the circle, and she with Mrs. A. T. Slausson, Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna, Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney, Mrs. D. N. VanVliet, assisted Mrs. Garrigues in receiving.

Tea was served in the dining room, the table decorations being chrysanthemums and roses. Those who poured were Mrs. F. G. Mead, Mrs. G. M. Furman, Miss Sadie Hayes and Mrs. Connor, assisted by Mrs. Halloway.

Mrs. George A. Chapman was in charge of the useful articles, and Mrs. Walter Gaston the candy table, and both were assisted by members of the circle. Among those who assisted in making the affair a success, in addition to those already mentioned, were Mrs. H. W. Beebe, Mrs. R. W. Ware, Mrs. J. Albert Laing, Mrs. Vail, Miss Vreeland, Miss Tompkins, Mrs. W. C. Kinney, Mrs. W. A. Pinto, Mrs. G. F. Odiorne, Miss Florence Marsh, Mrs. J. E. Erickson, Mrs. W. C. Hubbard, Mrs. William Hoyt, Mrs. Koom, Mrs. Ira Travell, Miss Anthony, Miss Bertha Whitney, Miss Yerkes, Mrs. Edward J. Patterson, Miss Emily Tracy, Mrs. Dale, Mrs. William M. Stillman and Mrs. Benjamin Drake.

There was a large attendance of members and friends during the hours of the tea from 3 to 6 o'clock, and the affair was a delightful one socially.

EVENING OF MUSIC.

Affair at Park Avenue Baptist Church.

An evening of music was enjoyed by a large audience at the Park Avenue Baptist church, last night. The programme was presented by the Plainfield Symphony Trio, comprising Arthur S. Mosher, violin; C. Kenneth Shupp, 'cello; Herbert J. Harold, piano and organ. They were assisted by Miss Aimee Louise Emmons, reader, and Elmer D. Cutting, tenor.

The first number was Op. 331, Andante and Allegro, by Carl Bohm, by the trio, followed with a solo, "For All Eternity," by Mr. Cutting. A reading, "A Matrimonial Controversy," by Miss Emmons, was followed with a piano solos, Nocturne, Op. 55, No. 1, by Mr. Harold.

The trio gave an excellent rendition of "Largo," by Handel. Mr. Cutting then sang "She Was the Fairest Flower." After a violin solo, "Rigletto," (Fantasie) Verdi, by Mr. Mosher, Miss Emmons gave a reading, "The Village Seamstress" from "Timothy's Quest." The programme closed with a selection, Allegro, Op. 127, Joseph Haydn, by the trio.

The work of the trio, especially that of Mr. Mosher, received hearty applause, while the selections by Mr. Cutting were greatly appreciated. Miss Emmons was, as usual, a favorite, her selections being very amusing.

The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church, and a substantial sum will be realized as profit.

Drove Out Chinese.

Reno, Nev., Nov. 17.—Olinghouse, a new mining camp east of Reno, has sent out an edict that Chinese are not wanted. Every Chinese in the district has left and one who failed to follow his countrymen this week received orders to depart immediately. It is understood he demurrer, and that night his cabin was burned. It is asserted that the Chinese are a menace to the high wage standard such as the 200 or more miners now in the district want. A miners' union is to be organized at once. The Chinese who lost his cabin and was forced to leave is now in San Francisco and writes that he is taking up the matter with the Chinese consul.

Mrs. William H. Abbott, of Grant avenue, still continues to improve from an attack of scarlet fever.

Basketball Games.

There will be two games of basketball Monday evening in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. The representative Y. M. C. A. team will play the Parthians, of New York. The Parthians have played here before and last year the game with them was one of the most interesting of the season, the local team winning by only a small margin. Although there are some new players on the Plainfield five this season, the team is now playing in good form, and Monday night's game will given them their first chance to play against a really strong aggregation. The second game will be betweeen Plainfield High School and the second Y. M. C. A. team. The latter team is a strong aggregation and will give the school team a hard game.

Will Be a Special Agent.

John DeMeza, who has held a clerical position in the local office of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company for some time, has resigned to take a needed vacation. Later he will re-enter the employ of the company as a special agent.

Backs Roosevelt.

Pittsburg, Nov. 17.—The American Federation of Labor has set its stamp of approval on the action of President Roosevelt in the matter of regulating freight rates. Delegate Brookshaw, of North Carolina, introduced a resolution Tuesday before the resolutions committee which called a halt on the President's aggressive measures and demanded that he leave the regulation of rates to the railroads. The resolution was vigorously attacked in committee by Jere L. Sullivan, of Cincinnati, and others, who alleged that Delegate Brookshaw was employed by the associated railroads to bring the resolution before the convention. In the convention yesterday the resolution was offered and a motion was made to have it referred to the executive council. A motion was made to lay the resolution on the table, which was passed with only one dissenting vote.

NEW JERSEY SUNDAY SCHOOLS PROSPEROUS

ALL DENOMINATIONS WELL REPRESENTED IN OPENING SESSION.

Prominent Sunday school workers from all sections of the State, and representing every Protestant denomination, were present for the opening session at Atlantic City, which is the largest convention in the history of the New Jersey Sunday School Association.

Th meetings will continue for three days, and will be held in St. Paul's M. E. church, of which the Rev. Wesley A. Hunsberger is pastor.

With a service of song and prayer the convention began its work yesterday afternoon. The first institute was devoted to Home Department work. This new field is one of the most promising, and also one that requires much studying. Its principal aim is to insititute Bible study in the homes of those unable to attend Bible schools. Means for pursuing the work with greater success were discussed.

James L. Griggs, of Somerville, president of the association, presided, with the Rev. Melville E. Snyder, of Bridgeton, chief of the Home Department. In an open parliament conducted by the Rev. W. T. Dorward, of Stelton, laymen told of the success that has greeted their efforts in different parts of the State during the year. Reports proved the field prospering in all but a few cases.

A conference on "How to Extend Our Home Department Work in New Jersey" was led by the Rev. E. Morris Ferguson, of Newark. The Rev. Joseph Lyons Ewing, of Bridgeton, delivered an address on "Making the Home Department Worth While." A round table on Home Department methods was conducted by the Rev. Dr. L. D. Stultz, of Bridgeton.

Miss Josephine L. Baldwin, of Newark, held an institute yesterday afternoon on "Elementary Fieldworkers."

A feature of last evening's session was the praise service led by the Rev. Dr. W. A. Hunsberger, pastor of the entertaining chruch. A cordial greeting was extended to the odelegates and visitors by the Rev. Newton W. Cadwell, chairman of the local committee. In responding the president of the association, James L. Griggs, of Somerville, chose the topic "Our Call to Higher Service."

POULTRY SHOW WINNERS.

New Jersey Birds Defeat W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr.'s Exhibits.

New York, Nov. 17.—Dr. Paul Kyle, of Flushing, the president of the Association of Poultry and Pet Stock Breeders, is one of the lucky exhibitors at the annual exhibition here, his ribbons numbering thirteen up to date.

Another surpise was the hard luck which W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., experienced with his white Leghorns, fresh from their triumphs at Mineola, Long Island. In the class for single comb whit Leghorn cocks Mr. Vanderbilt saw J. Courtney Punderford, of Freneau, N. J., take the third and fourth prizes, while he captured nothing. In the class for white Leghorn hens Mr. Vanderbilt took fourth and fifth to Mr. Punderford's first and second. With his white Plymouth Rock pullets Mr. Vanderbilt failed to win at all.

Miss Eliza C. Foot, of Lakewood, N. J., made a clean sweep with her pigeons in several classes, besides landing a number of first and second prizes for exhibition yards.

The cats are the feature of the show today. This afternoon the testing of the homing pigeons was begun. Louis Foster sent a batch to Providence. Carl Wind and Miss Eliza C. Foot will dispatch some to Philadelphia and Miss Foot will also fly some to their Lakewood home.

Fight for Street Commissioner.

Elizabeth, Nov. 17.—John Berger missioner N. K. Thompson, who was formerly sheriff of Union county, will have an opponent to contend with at the first of the year when the appointment is made for street commissioner of this city, in the person of Dennis F. Hennessy, a member of the T. A. B. S. and a prominent young milk dealer in Elizabethport. Colonel Dennis F. Collins, from the Sixth ward, will succeed George A. Ford, of the Fourth ward, as president of City Council. Dr. Alvin R. Eaton, city physician for the uptown wards, will be the only candidate for reappointment.

Sanitarium Suit Comes to End.

Trenton, Nov. 17.—In the United States Circuit Court Tuesday, before Judge Cross, the Columbia Avenue Trust Company, of Philadelphia, sued Dr. Frank H. Williams, of Como, formerly of this city, and John B. Hulse, of New Egypt, to recover on contract the sum of $7,000, and was awarded a verdict by the jury amounting to $5,426.68. The suit involved an attempt of Dr. Williams to start a sanitarium at Lake Como.

Consul Gummere Honored.

Washington, Nov. 17.—Samuel R. Gummere, American consul at Morocco, will represent America at the International Moroccan Congress to settle the extent of international control over Moroccan internal affairs.

ONLY REPUBLICAN TO CARRY ELIZABETH

EVERARD K. TUCKER, EMPLOYED B MR. COLBY'S FIRM.

Elizabeth, Nov. 17.—Everard K. Tucker, Assemblyman-elect, was the only Republican who carried Elizabeth at the recent election. On all other candidates, county or city, the city went Democratic by big majorities. Tucker, who was high man on the county ticket, is an anti-machine man and is employed by the banking firm of which Everett Colby, the Essex county Senator-elect, is a member.

In Elizabeth Tucker's majority was eight. The fact that he carried this city was due to the work of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. This society has over a thousand members here who can vote, and every one of their number voted for Tucker, who is a past councilor of William A. Mack Council, No. 276, and one of the Juniors' most enthusiastic workers in the city.

MAKING IMPROVEMENTS IN NEW JERSEY MUSEUM

S. R. Morse, curator of the State museum, is making a number of improvements in his departments at the State House. One of the chief changes is the substitution of modern cases for the old ones containing the mineral and other specimens.

The new cases are solid oak and plate glass and were made by the New Jersey School and Church Furniture company, of Trenton. Though occupying less space on the floors than the old ones they have much more displaying capacity. This will permit of a needed increase in the number of specimens on exhibition. Each case has two horizontal compartments and between them a vertical one containing shelves. The base of each case is enclosed and arranged for storage.

Curator Morse has added to the museum's collection of specimens of the celebrated gypsy and brown tail moths, which have done untold damage to crops, particularly in New England. Originally these moths, unknown in this country, were imported at Harvard University. They escaped and have increased by the millions. Many thousands of dollars have been spent in an attempt to exterminate them. Each collection at the State House shows the moth in all stages of its development.

Professor Morse is at work on his annual report, which this year will be more complete than ever before. He has engaged Miss C. M. Kulp, of Trenton, to assist in this work.

Roundsman to Seek a Writ.

New Brunswick, Nov. 17.—George S. Silzer, counsel for former Roundsman Randall McCann, will apply to the Supreme Court for a mandamus compelling the Mayor and Common Council of the city of New Brunswick to reinstate McCann as a member of the police force. McCann was a roundsman, but was dropped on March 6. The Republican City Council repealed the roundsman ordinance and held that this dropped McCann from the force. McCann contends that he is still a patrolman, and this contention has been sustained by the Supreme Court. City Attorney Theodore Booraem states that it will depend upon the Council whether the case is carried to the Court of Errors.

Bullet Victim Dead.

Summit, Nov. 17.—Word reached here today of the death of Antonio Gonnette, the Italian who was shot by his cousin, Samuel Riola, accidentally, it is believed, on election day. He died Wednesday in the Orange Memorial Hospital, to which institution he was taken on Wednesday. His case had been considered hopeless from the start, and he was not expected to live as long as he did. The surgeons at the hospital operated on Gonnette the night he was brought there, but were unable to locate the bullet. The authorities have been notified of the man's death.

Grandmother a Heroine.

St. Louis, Nov. 17.—Under the impression that her grandchildren were in danger, Mrs. Catherine Haverlick, sixty-six years old, re-entered the burning home of her daughter last night and was incinerated before assistance could reach her. Mrs. Haverlick's daughter and grandchildren had escaped by another entrance and were searching for her when she braved the flames to rescue them.

Fatally Injured by a Train.

Elizabeth, Nov. 17.—Street Com- was struck by a train of the Central Railroad of New Jersey Tuesday and was fatally injured. He died in the General Hospital. The man was picking coal near the main passenger depot here when the westbound flier struck him. The body has been removed to Martin's morgue.

Gas Light Directors.

At a meeting of the Elizabethtown Gas Light Company Wednesday the following were elected directors: John Kean, Julian H. Kean, James Maguire, Hamilton F. Kean, Alexander L. Kean.

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

THE ROOSEVELT GIRL.

She's Atlanta's blue-eyed beauty,
Gowned in spotless virgin white,
Crowned with waving golden tresses
Like a sheen at evening light.

On her head the shadows resting,
As the twilight glimmers hold—
The sun at evening setting
In a mass of shining gold.

Like the lily in its virgin white,
With golden stamen head,
Laughing in the sunshine
At the roses blushing red.

While lavish nature's pretty charms
So graced her silken tresses.
The dimples in her rosy cheeks
Made laughter at her blushes.

And here's her charms in pretty muses,
Ideals wrought from gems so rare,
And the whole is faultless beauty,
With her crown of golden hair.

N. W. PIKE.

Plainfield, November, 1905.

FOR THE WOMEN.

A pretty girl does not attract any more attention in a grocery store than an old girl at a ball. It is the stout, elderly women with an absent-minded, what-shall-I-get-to-eat look that the clerks try to be nice to.—Atchinson Globe.

The man who has married a woman for her looks alone lives to regret it; he fell in love with beauty, and when it fades he has nothing. For middle age has a levelling tendency; some women may be homlier than others, but at 50 she must have other resources if she is not to sink to a commonplace level. The pretty woman too often lets everything else go by the board as she studies dress, millinery, hairdressing and complexion science, and, coming to the end of her tether, finding life wearisome, sinks into a state of complaint, querulousness and discontent. Often the very pretty woman wants no children, fearing to spoil her beauty; so when middle age comes she has nothing at all to hold her interest.—Philadelphia Telegraph

Men are hard to suit. There is one in Ottawa who had corresponded with a woman in Syracuse "with a view to matrimony." Letters were exchanged and photographs, and the course of mail-order affection ran so smoothly that the knight at length journeyed to Syracuse to claim the lady. Then, also, finding her deaf and weighing 250 pounds, he fled secretly back to Ottawa, and thus ended three years of epistolary love-making.—Boston Transcript.

Mother of nine, grandmother of twenty-nine, great-grandmother of sixty-five and great-great-grandmother of one, is the proud record of Mrs. Maria Catherine Schemm, of Warren township, who is within six months of being a centenarian. At her advanced age she is yet enjoying good health, which she attributes to years of toil on a farm. Her sight is still very good, although she is deaf and it is with considerable difficulty that she can be made to understand. However, this does not discourage an inclination to talk to others, and even now she amuses her grandchildren and great-grandchildren with stories of bygone days.—Detroit Free Press.

HINTS IN NEEDLEWORK.

As the Yuletide approaches—though it is still many weeks ahead—the wise woman looks about her for pretty trifles in needlework, with which she may favor her friends.

A novelty that all women will appreciate is a rack of fancy wood containing hat boxes, each fitted with an inner hat stand. The top of the stand forms a table, and that hat boxes are covered with cretonne, which may be chosen to order to match the decorations of the room.

A particularly pretty corset cover is finished at top in scalloped points, buttonholed and with an open eyelet in the centre of each point. Three rows of embroidery eyelets are set around the waist below the point and baby ribbon is run through these and tied in little bows in front. Similar bows are set all the way down the front, and ribbon is run through the beading belt and tied in front. A frill of lace softens the buttonholed points.

A brocade handkerchief case is of white brocade, with a decoration of ribbon work. The case is straight on the lower edge. The sides slope outward toward the top, which is slightly rounded. The back of the case is extended in a flap about six inches deep, which folds over the front of the case and buttons down. This flap is wider at the top, narrowing toward its extreme edge. The case is padded and scented, and has a lining of pink taffeta. It is edged all around, including the flap, with two-inche wide lace. The seams at the edges are hidden by a narrow gold cord. The front of the case and the flap are decorated with wreaths of ribbon work in all the pompadour shades; lavender, pink and green, made of narrow ribbon. Even the little button to which the flap is fastened is covered with narrow ribbon.

NATURE SPARES

The Stricken Rose From Grief.

What a fortunate provision of nature it is, that deprives the rose of mental suffering; for how poignant would be its grief to discover, in the height of its blooming glory, that a canker fed at its heart, and that its beauty and fragrance were doomed forever. Nature always spares the suffering; she is a veritable store-house of pleasing rewards, for those who seek her aid. In the years gone by falling hair and grayness have cast a gloom over the lives of thousands of young women, but thanks to the investigations of scientists the true cause of hair destruction is now known to be a germ or parasite that burrows into the hair follicles. Newbro's Herpicide absolutely destroys this germ, thus permitting the hair to grow as nature intended. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

LITERARY.

In getting out this specially attractive number to mark the beginning of its seventh year, the publishers of The American Boy are certainly to be congratulated. The artistic, vigorous cover page picture has "Thanksgiving" written all over it, and the contents of the paper almost marks the limit of what boys enjoy. "The Tripod Fox," a continued story, by Clarence Hawkes, is the top-notch in animal stories; "A Conquering Hero," by the editor, shows how "pride goeth before a fall;" "The Joy Claim," a continued story, by Will Lisenbee, is a stirring story of the neutral lands in Kansas; "My Four Years at West Point" and "A French Frog and an American Eagle," are each continued two chapters; "Under Nelson's Flag" is a splendid story of the days of the great English admiral, and "The Stuff of Captains," by Will Levington Comfort, is a football story which will be hard to beat. "The Boy from Poplar Cove" tells how a boy with few advantages "made good" in school; "A Long Fight with Wolves" describes the perils of winter traveling in the great Northwest, and "A Modern Knight" show that self-sacrifice for friendship's sake is never lost.

One of the most attractive magazines on the news stands is the November Sunset. The cover, Sunset on Monterey Bay, was designed by Lucia Mathews. The leading article, "Redeeming the West," by E. T. Perkins, is a detailed description of the work which this Government is doing to reclaim the arid west by irrigation. This is the greatest work ever undertaken by any government and will make fruitful millions of acres of hitherto barren land. The text is beautifully illustrated by half tones from photographs by Walter J. Lubken, of the Government reclamation service. Other features of this number are: "In the Shadow of Mesquit," a fiction story by Arthur W. North; "How We Climbed Rainier," by Raglan Glascock; "California's Venice," by John B. Dame; "The Rights of Animals," an essay by Gelett Burgess; "The Author and the Publisher," by Warren Cheney; and the last chapter of a serial story by Bailey Millard.

CLOSE TO THE PEOPLE.

Mrs. Dye's Experience with the Real Thing.—Mrs. Dye has written the following: "Mrs. Dye wants to say to the readers of the Republican that her experience Thursday night was no ghost, nor was she clad in white with a train eight (8) feet long. She was a woman near her own size with all the advantage on her side. Mrs. Dye does not know why she was attacked in this way, but she does know this, although she does not go so heavily armed as patrolman No. 8, she will challenge her would-be slayer with another round. Had she been in the habit of carrying a No. 48 and the billy club carried by patrolman No. 8 she probably would have stood her ground, and should this occurrence be repeated she has no need of the assistance of patrolman No. 8. The ghost vision probably was a vision from the Ninth avenue junction, where a vision can be counted consisting of eight policemen carrying No. 8's eight billy clubs, eight bright stars and eight blooming noses. If No. 8 has any charges for the assistance rendered Thursday night it can be assessed with the property and will be paid with the taxes in the spring. Mrs. Martin Dye."—Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Republican.

The Clark-Turner Fracas.—Mabel Clark, Suter avenue, met Cora Turner, both colored, and complained of her going with her man. "Go with him as much as I feel like," said Cora, and they clinched. Mabel will get a warrant. Cora came in and said she was a Christian and did not do or say anything. Mabel slapped her one real hard. When her hat flew off, Cheap John's wife tore it up. Finale of the First Act of "Bankers and Brokers," the Big Musical Comedy, at New Plainfield Theatre Tonight.

AMUSEMENTS.

This is the fourth week of "Monna Vanna" at the Manhattan theatre, New York, with Madame Kalich in the title role, and the consensus of opinion is that it is the most artistic and impressive offering of the season in the metropolis. Maeterlinck's beautiful and poetic drama, assumed to be a work rather for reading than for the stage, has proved itself to be one of the most absorbingly interesting and thrillingly dramatic of modern plays as it is developed at the Manhattan, with a magnetic and unusually talented actress in the chief part and the remarkable pictorial aids for which this theatre, under the management of Mr. Harrison Grey Fiske, has become noted. Artistic and attractive as have been other productions at the Manhattan, there is no doubt that the representation of "Monna Vanna" surpasses all that have gone before. The fascinating and unusual story of "Monna Vanna" is developed not only by adequate acting, but with the aid of those strikingly veritable stage pictures which are so effective even in the greater plays that in theory do not need elaborte dressing. The scenes presented in and about mediaeval Pisa, with the throngs of people who are variously moved by the developmen of the story, embody stage pictures that seldom or never have been surpassed on the American stage. But one matinee a week is given at the Manhattan—on Saturday—and those who are not able to visit this theatre on an evening should plan to see "Monna Vanna" at a matinee.

Klaw & Erlanger's great Drury Lane production, "The White Cat," now the attraction at the New Amsterdam theatre, is proving the greatest success of the long list of massive entertainments this firm has presented. "The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast," which created such a sensation at the Broadway theatre four years ago, with its wonderfully beautiful ballet of "The Four Seasons," is completely eclipsed by this spectacle with its three marvelous ballets, "The Enchanted Orchard," "The Palace of Hymen" and "The Christmas of All Nations." Nothing like these in gorgeousness of scenery and costumes hase ever before been staged. But scenery and costumes do not make up an entertainment and "The White Cat" in the merit of its book and musical features alone, would prove a big hit. It is really three great entertainments in one. Seats may be secured four weeks in advance.

George Edwardes' company in "Veronique" at the Broadway theatre has created a sensation in musical circles and is playing to audiences which test the capacity of this spacious playhouse. Nothing so artistically refined and beautiful, both in story, lyrics and music, has been seen in New York in years. The piece is staged exactly as it was presented at the Apollo theatre in London for 500 nights, with the original cast intact, including Ruth Vincent in the title role.

Marie Cahill has made the hit of her career in "Moonshine" at the Liberty theatre, where, owing to a contract which calls for the appearance of Thomas W. Ross in "A Fair Echange" at this house, she cannot remain longer than Saturday, December 2. "Moonshine" has proved the greatest musical novelty of the season and gives Miss Cahill opportunities for the display of that dry humor so peculiar to her and which has made her so popular in New York. During the action of the piece Miss Cahill renders several musical numbers which have at once become deservedly great favorites among those who delight in catchy lyrics and brilliant airs. Miss Cahill is supported by a large company headed by well known players. Her chorus is made up of a number of very attractive young women, who excel as singers and dancers. Seats may be ordered by mail or telegraph.

An announcement of more than ordinary interest to the patrons of the New Plainfield theatre is made by Manager Counihan. He has secured the season's sensational hit, "When the World Sleeps," for Friday night, November 25. It is a four-act melodrama by Langdon McCormick and Lawrence Marston, the scenes being laid in New York State, and telling an interesting and exciting tale of love, murder, passion and revenge. The play abounds in exciting situations, including the midnight murder, the sleep walking incident, the great rescue from the burning mill and the destruction of the mill itself. A very capable company of twenty people present the piece, and the Mittenthal Brothers have provided a beautiful production.

"Bankers and Brokers," the new musical comedy in which B. E. Forrester will present the well known comedians, Yorke and Adams, and their company of fifty fun makers at the New Plainfield theatre tonight, bears the distinction of containing in its roster the names of many of the best known stellar lights of the operatic stage. Rita Redmond, Anna Wilkes, Mamie Lafferty, Eddie Barto, Floyd Buckley, Bert Thayer and James J. Collins are names to conjure with and coupled with the inimitable stars a program par excellence is assured. The book and lyrics of the piece are by George Totten Smith and Aaron Hoffman and the music by Gus. Salzer. Particular attention has been paid to the costuming and mounting. The costumes were designed by Archie Gunn and executed by Mme. Freisinger. The scenery is from the studio of John Young, and the electrical effects were produced by Bissing & Co., of New York.

George Klimt scores in every part he undertakes, but he never had a better character to offer than he has in his new play, "Bib Hearted Jim," which appears at the New Plainfield theatre Thanksgiving afternoon and night. He plays a Montana sheriff, and makes the most of the many strong situations. Comedy, sentiment, manly resentmentfi pathos, all fall to the star in this remarkable role and show Mr. Klimt's versatility, leaving his title to prominence as an actor unquestioned.

Charles E. Blaney's sensational melodrama, "The Curse of Drink," will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night. The play has been one of the most successful on the road this season, and is said to have been improved and remounted for its trip. The story deals with life among railroad men in the East, and carries heart interest and comedy. A locomotive and several other novel effects are promised.

Gus Yorke, of Yorke and Adams, in "Bankers and Brokers," at New Plainfield Theatre Tonight.

In its bright and humorus book the famous comic opera, "Robin

Scene from "When the World Sleeps."

Hood," demonstrates that modern "graft" existed in the early days of England just as it does in the United States today. For in the opera "Robin Hood" during the absence of the good King Richard of the Lion's Heart, Robert, Earl of Huntington, afterward Robin Hood, becomes of age and the sheriff of Nottingham endeavors to defraud him of his rightful estates and install Guy of Gisborne in his place, for which the sheriff was to get one-half of all the spoils. The characters of the Sheriff of Nottingham and Guy of Gisborne will be played here by F. Stanton Heck, and Campbell Donald, respectively. The other principals are Harold Blake, Karl Stall, Ethel Houston Dufre, Edward Metcalfe, Vivia Brewster, Agnes Stone and Meta Carson. A large and splendidly drilled chorus of trained voices complete a singing organization of 50 people, and the appearance of "Robin Hood" in this city on Monday night at the New Plainfield theatre will prove an event worthy of the careful consideration of all local music lovers.

It is doubtful if any single exhibition in this country or abroad has created a more lasting impression than that of Lyman H. Howe's new Liforama. It is an exhibition in every sense so distinctly superior and apart from all others that the new programme has created a furore wherever it has been seen. The most conservative critics have become jubilantly eloquent in praise of the great exhibition which will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre on Wednesday night, November 22. In mere technical skill it seems practically impossible to exceed the limits of his present remarkably fine programme, for it fully realizes the true possibilities of moving pictures.

FARMERS SCORE AUTOISTS

An Address Against Reckless Chauffeurs at Atlantic City Applauded.

Atlantic City, Nov. 17—Five thousand progressive farmers, members of the National Grange Patrons of Husbandry, listened to Aaron Jones, for eight years master of the big organization, outline the policy of the most powerful agricultural organization in the country, in his opening address before the convention on the Steel Pier. Taking as his text the necessity of advancing the material interests of the tillers of the soil, the national master impressed on his hearers the necessity of close co-operations in their dealings in business, and detailed the proposed work of the organization, which will include a dig at present insurance methods, with recommendations for mutual companies officered by the farmers; the support of President Roosevelt in his attempt to secure equal rating of railroad charges, and State and national laws allowing control of automobiles. Support of the farmers will also be asked for enlarging of tne rural mail systems, and for the securing of parcel post for the benefit of dwellings in rural communities.

Mayor Stoy is confined to his bed by illness, and was unable to welcome the Grangers at their first business meeting. The session was taken up with the appointment of important committees, which will have charge of the work of the present meeting, scheduled to continue for ten days.

The address of Master Jones, who has attained a powerful influence among the 800,000 members of the order during his incumbency in office as head of the order, included a summing up of the present state of the order, which he claims has grown 60,000 in membership during the last year. In five years the organization has gained seventy-eight per cent. in membership, and almost as much in funds, while, according to the report, its influence on State and national legislation and issues has increased even more.

Applause followed the condemnation by the grange master of the reckless use of automobiles on country roads and his demand for legislation to curb drivers of high speed cars.

"Accidents of the most shocking character have been of common occurrence since the introduction of the automobiles," he said, "and in some sections of the country, travel upon county roads has been reduced to the driving absolutely necessary for carrying on of business, while driving for pleasure has been entirely cut out for fear of accidents. Use of the highways by automobiles should be regulated by wise laws vigorously enforced with penalties heavy enough to be effectual warning to others. Uniformity should be sought after in the laws of the several states with adoption of a more vigorous policy of enforcement, for the lives of our people are of more consequence than the pleasure of the few."

Officials who accept bribes even in the form of free passes from transportation companies, were scored in a section of the address devoted to the evils of railway rebates which the national master insisted were being handled by a few railroad managers who "by raising or lowering any section from their markets and raise or lower the value of any farm in the country or even pauperize the farmers who are under the ban of high freight tariffs."

Some of the movements for which Mr. Jones gave credit to the National Grange were securing of continuous existence of rural free delivery, the enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust law, the law creating the department of commerce, and giving it the right of investigating the organization and operation of corporations. He asked for support of the organization for the forming of postal savings banks, the election of United States senators by the people, enaction of pure food laws, the provision of parcels post and of telephone and telegraph lines in connection with the national postal service and national revision of the tax laws of the country.

New York and New England members of the grange came in today on special trains, and were met by delegations from the Hotel Men's Association of the resort, who are acting as hosts during the stay of the grangers. Governor Stokes, with Governor C. J. Bell, of Vermont, a prominent member of the order, were guests of honor at a meeting on the Steel Pier last evening.

Didn't Use Any Swear Word.

A boy of straight Puritan extraction was called one day by his mother from the yard where he was playing with some other boys. In a tone of mingled sadness and severity she said: "Noble, my son, I never thought to hear you use a swear word." "Why, mother," said the boy, "I didn't use any swear word. I only said the devil. Nobody thinks that's swearing." "I don't care," cried the mother quickly; "it's making light of sacred things."—Hartford Times.

SIX-DAY RACE.

Foreigners Are Eager to Take the Honors in Coming Long Grind.

New York, Nov. 17.—There is going to be a great international battle for the honors in this year's annual six-day cycle race in Madison Square Garden, which is now less than three weeks off. The foreign riders are going to make an effort such as they never made before in the history of this greatest of New York sporting events to carry the prize across the water. Bicycle racing in Europe and Australia has had a tremendous boom during the last year, and the result has been the turning out of some of the greatest riders the world has ever known. With the season on the wane over there, the European stars are banding together for an invasion of Uncle Sam's shores and Madison Square Garden.

Headed by Vanderstyft and Stoll, the plucky Belgian-Holland team that finished second last year, after giving Root and Dorlon a heart-breaking fight for first honors, a collection of French, Swiss, Italian, German, Dutch, Belgian and English ridders will sail from Havre and Southampton next Saturday such as has never been seen before in the history of six-day cycling.

Frank Kramer, the short-distance champion, has received word that the foreigners are determined to carry back the six-day honors this year, and they have not only prepared to put up a desperate battle but have formed a big pool which they are willing to bet against the Americans. In fact, Kramer has been commissioned to try and place this money if possible. He stands ready to post a forfeit immediately of $1,000 for a side bet or any amount from $1,000 to $5,000. He says the foreigners are so determined to win the prize that they are bringing with them several of the trainers from abroad who are famous for conditioning men for the celebrated long-distance road races which are held throughout Europe.

The date for the six-day race has been set for the week of December 4, the usual concert being started Sunday night, December 3, at 9 o'clock. On the night previous, Saturday, December 2, a big card of championship races will be run off, including a ten-mile motor-paced international championship match race, a ten-mile world's championship and a race for the amateur championship of America.

What Five Cents Will Do.

The purchasing power of money was never so great as it is today, despite the cries of carpers. For instance, consider what a nickel will buy for you in the way of reading matter. Take next Sunday's New York World as an example. The story of a Girl Who Has Sold Her Pictured Self, and cannot be photographed for ever so many years. The marvellous Travels of President Roosevelt. The Bigness of Big New York. The Newest Ailment—The Telephone Heart. Strange Doubles on the Stage—Girls Who Look Like Famous Actresses. The Falls from Horseback Which Jockeys Have. An O. Henry Story. Petrosino, the Detective Whose Name is a Terror to the "Black Hand." A School for Mothers. A Comic Section that is Really Funny. And this is only a small part of the paper. Buy it and see.

LIBRARY IS GROWING

Constant Accessions Are Being Made to Its Building.

SOME RECENT GIFTS

Plainfielders Donate Rare and Attractive Volumes and Keep the Periodical Table Up to Date.

Although the Plainfield Public Library is the third largest in New Jersey, it has not stopped growing, but, on the other hand, is constantly becoming larger by the addition of volumes presented by local people. Among recent gifts is a bound volume given by Principal I. W. Travell, of the High School, a handbook of subjects and methods of the Public Schools of the city of Plainfield, 1888, prepared by the former superintendent of schools, Miss Julia E. Bulkley.

Louis F. Wadsworth has presented two volumes of the Oeuvres diversees of Jean Baptiste Rosseau. These are two fine quarto volumes in old calf binding, and though their title pages bear the date 1723, the beautiful type is as clear as the day when printed. These volumes with their broad margins and linen paper, their artistic initials and fine bold type, are beautiful examples of the bookmaking of nearly two centuries ago. Mrs. M. S. Mulligan has given the neat Routledge edition of Boswell's Johnson in three volumes. F. R. Stevens has donated several volumes in the German language, among which are the translation of Lewes' Life of Goethe into German, and a German life of Schiller. These make welcome additions to the German department.

O. T. Waring has presented to the Library two very beautiful window transparencies of scenes in the Yellowstone. The place for them has not yet been finally determined, but when placed they will add much to the beauty of the room. J. Paul Nolting is giving the Craftsman to the Library, and has also given several complete volumes of this valuable arts and crafts periodical. E. C. Pearson is giving the Nation, as it appears, and also a considerable number of back volumes.

Mrs. DeGraff gives regularly the periodical, Country Life, with its beautiful illustrations of country places A fine carbon portrait of Shakespeare, from the old painting supposed to be the one from which Droeshout engraved his portrait in 1623, is the gift of the president of the New York Shakespeare Society, Appleton Morgan, who also gives the New Shakespeareana, the official organ of that society.

The Ancestor is an illustrated review of county and family history, heraldry, costume, armor and antiquities. This periodical is an authority on the subject with which it deals. These volumes are the gift of George H. Frost, as are also the extremely valuable Records of the Governor and Company of Massachusetts Bay, 1628-1686, in six volumes, covering a most important period in colonial history. These are what are commonly called the Colony Records. Among other historical documents of great value contained in them are the Records of the Company previous to the removal of the letters patent and the government to America, 1630, the Records of the Council of Safety, Memoranda relating to the early outfitting of vessels destined for this country, etc. Also interesting to the genealogist will be the vital records of eight Massachusetts towns, and the Abstracts of wills in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 1620, containing many references to well known New England families. For these also the Library is indebted to George H. Frost.

To the Library's photographic literature is added the Photo Era, the gift of Miss R. Lawrence, while to the popular magazines is added, through the courtesy of Mrs. G. S. Passmore, Ainslee's Magazine.

The Library receives from time to time many volumes of periodicals, bound and unbound, and old books which their owners do not care to keep. Many of these are duplicates, novels or children's stories which can be used to advantage.

In addition the Library has received a very valuable gift from the library of the late Charles Potter, given by Mrs. David E. Titsworth, Mrs. Albert R. Sheppard and Mrs. William C. Hubbard, bound volumes of sets of periodicals. The gift comprises the Atlantic Monthly, volumes 15-24, 26, 29-30; Carpentry and Building, volumes 1-12; Decorator and Furnisher, volumes 7-22; Good Housekeeping, volumes 4-24; Littell's Living Age, volumes 112-115; Scribner's Magazine, volumes 1-4; Scribner's Monthly, volumes 7-22, and the Scientific American, Building edition, volumes 1-18, the latter completing the Library's file of that periodical.

EXPECT NEW POLICE COMMISSION MEASURE

POLITICIANS LOOKING TO NEXT LEGISLATURE.

Formal surrender of office was decided upon last night by the Elizabeth police commission, which was swept out of existence, along with the Plainfield and Bayonne commissions, by the recent decision of the Supreme Court on the law under which the three commissions were created. The Elizabethans believe that their retirement is only temporary. Their regime was generally popular in Elizabeth, and it is believed that steps will be taken at once to have the next Legislature pass a law, free of the defects that led to the overruling of the original law, making the commission legal.

Should a law of this character be passed, it is generally believed among those in a position to know, that Mayor Buckle will promptly follow the lead of Mayor Berry, of Elizabeth, and reappoint the deposed board. The law was originally introduced into the assembly for Elizabeth's benefit, by the late Edward Coyne, assemblyman from this county. An effort is being made to have the new law introduced from this county.

COMMISSIONERS MAY NOT REPORT THIS YEAR

WIDENING OF LOCAL STREETS REQUIRES CAREFUL ATTENTION.

There is an erroneous impression that Elliot T. Barrows, Lewis G. Timpson and Evarts Tracy, commissioners appointed by the Common Council to treat with property owners in the matter of widening Park avenue, Sycamore street and the opening of Stebbins place, will report soon. The task of treating with the property owners and fixing an equitable adjustment of the expense for this work is a tedious one and it is just possible that the report may reach the Common Council this year.

The commissioners held one public session, at which several interested property owners were present. No difficulty was met at that time, the property owners being willing to do their share in making the improvements.

Since that time the commissioners have held several private meetings and have spent some time in going over the streets in question. Probably in the case of widening Park avenue between Second street and the railroad, the greatest care is necessary. While the Plainfield Trust Company, C. W. McCutchen and Boice, Runyon & Co. petitioned for the widening, and will have to stand their proportionate share of the expense, every property owner who is to be benefited by the improvement will also be called upon to pay something. This will mean that property in the immediate vicinity and that opposite the side to be widened will be assessed for the improvement. When the widening is completed Park avenue will present a much more attractive appearance.

EPWORTH LEAGUE SALE.

First M. E. Society Has Pleasant Entertainment.

In connection with the monthly social and entertainment, the Epworth League of the First M. E. church held a sale of candy and cake in Vincent chapel, yesterday, afternoon and evening. During the afternoon there was a good attendance and liberal patronage. In the evening ice cream and cake were sold also, the proceeds to be used for the flower fund.

The chapel decorations were the same as used at the silver anniversary of the missionary society on Tuesday night. During the evening there was an informal programme consisting of piano solos by Miss Frances Rittenhouse and recitations by Miss Helena Huber and Miss Helen Woolley. In addition three papers were read, one on the first Thanksgiving by Miss Mildred Spicer, another on the modern Thanksgiving by Miss Mattie Humble and the third on the model Thanksgiving by Miss Stephanie Clark.

Miss Edna French was chairman of the committee, and she was assisted by Miss Helena Huber, Miss Bertha Whitney and several others.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS WED

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Armstrong Surrounded by Host of Friends on Anniversary.

NUMEROUS PRESENTS

Druggists' Association Make a Suitable Gift—Home Handsomely Decorated—Many Guests From Far and Near.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Armstrong celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding at their home in Duer street last night. The happy occasion was attended with all details that go to make such celebrations memorable. Surrounded by a large number of relatives and friends from Philadelphia, Camden, Moorestown, Merchantville, Rahway, Elizabeth, Westfield, New York, Brooklyn and this city, the celebrants were showered with congratulations upon the completion of a quarter of a century of happy married life.

The home was lavishly decorated with palms, chrysanthemums, ferns and smilax. In the dining room the table was garnished with cut flowers, and a pleasing arrangement was streamers of pink ribbons leading from the chandelier to various points in the room, entwined with a green vine. In the center of the table was a handsome candelabra. In the parlor the decorations consisted of palms, ferns and white chrysanthemums, the prevailing colors being green and white. In the library the colors were red and green.

The front and side porch was enclosed, and made an ideal place for those wishing to enjoy their cigars. Comfortable seats and attractive decorations added to the pleasure of the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong were assisted in receiving by their daughter, Miss Helen Marguerite Armstrong, and their son, Frederick Armstrong. Mrs. Armstrong was gowned in black spangled net, while her daughter wore pink crepe de chine.

The couple received a wealth of presents both handsome and costly. They included a solid silver tea service from the Plainfield Retail Druggists' Association, on a tray, the center of which was suitably engraved and the names of the following members of the association: R. J. Shaw, A. D. Mallinson, L. W. Randolph, Peter B. Hodge, Dudley S. Miller, B. J. Schreiner, John P. Powers, Charles H. Hall, Frank Rowley, Clayton M. Nagle and J. C. Cadmus, were inscribed on a certificate signifying the purpose of the gift. Other gifts comprised cut glass, needlework, pictures, banquet lamp, French clock, silver candelabra and six $10 gold pieces. One room was devoted to the display of the presents.

The social features of the occasion predominated, while refreshments were served as the guests arrived and departed. Nearly 400 guests called during the appointed hours from 8 to 10.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Armstrong were married November 17, 1880, on Craig place, in the borough, and they have continued to live in the borough ever since. Mr. Armstrong came to Plainfield in 1878 from Philadelphia, his early home being in Camden. He engaged in the drug business on Somerset street, about opposite Lincoln place. He afterward associated himself with H. P. Reynolds, and a few years ago bought out this business at the corner of Park and North avenues, which is one of the oldest and best known pharmacies in this section. Mr. Armstrong has conducted a prosperous business and his friends are legion. He traces his ancestry back a good many years, many of them being prominently identified with tSate affairs. His brother, E. Ambler Armstrong, of Camden, a former judge, was for two terms speaker of the lower house of the New Jersey Legislature.

Mrs. Armstrong was Miss Katherine Frances Kline before her marriage. Her home was in this city, where she has made many friends. Both Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong are prominent in the First Baptist church, where the former has been a trustee for several years. He is also a member of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M.

Troupe Got Route Mixed.

By a mistake on the part of the management, the entire troupe, bag and baggage, producing the "Si Stebbins" show, landed in this city from Oneonta, N. Y., yesterday, under the impression that they were to play at the New Plainfield theatre. They were straightened out by Manager Counihan who happened to know that the company was billed for Elizabeth last night. They wended their way to the depot just as the "Bankers and Brokers" comedians and chorus girls were coming in and for the time being North avenue closely rivalled the Rialto.

MARRIED SIXTY YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Smalley, Sr., Celebrate Event Informally Tomorrow.

THE MAYOR'S PARENTS

Wedded at Liberty Corner in 1845—Twelve Children, Seven of Whom Are Living—D. C. and W. L. Jr., Among Sons.

In celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Smalley, Sr., of Craig place, parents of Mayor Newton B. Smalley, will hold an informal reception at their home tomorrow and also Monday. Friends are expected from all over the State and from distant points, while many congratulatory telegrams have already been received. Both celebrants are in excellent spirits in anticipation of the event and will personally receive all the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Smalley were married at the home of the latter's parents in Liberty Corner in 1845, the bride being Miss Phoebe Irving. Of those who witnessed the ceremony but two are now living, Mrs. Smalley's two brothers, J. S. Irving, of Westfield, and Alfred Irving, of Roseville, Ill. Mr. Smalley was born at Martinsville in 1817, his father being a wholesale butcher at that place. Mrs. Smalley was born at Liberty Corner in 1827.

Mr. Smalley learned the butcher trade and soon after his marriage moved to North Plainfield and has resided in that vicinity ever since. He kept markets on Somerset street and Front street, besides being known as a wholesale dealer all over this section of the State. He was one of the pioneer local merchants and likes nothing better than to have the chance to tell of the times when the city was a hamlet and the streets were but cow paths. He was at one time owner of the plot of ground at Second street and Park avenue, on which the Marsh building now stands and sold it for $1,500, making a profit of $600. He retired from business twenty years ago and has since lived quietly in the house on Craig place, which he built in 1875.

The union of William Smalley and Phoebe Irving was blessed by twelve children, of whom seven are now living. They are, according to age, Mrs. Anna Cadmus, David C., Albert I., Newton B., Mrs. David King, Mrs. H. N. Dunbar, William L., Jr. All reside either in the city or the borough with the exception of Albert, who recently removed to Lake Waccamaw, N. C.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Smalley are still "hale and hearty" and take an active interest in borough affairs. The former is a stanch Republican and is ready for argument on any occasion. When Mayor Smalley's victory over the Citizens in the last campaign was made known, no one was more happier than the aged parent. In warm weather he takes long walks about North Plainfield, but in winter months remains at home.

STILL LARGER CROWD AT "EVERY DAY AF-FAIR"

YOUNG WOMEN'S MISSION BAND WILL CLEAR A SUBSTANTIAL SUM.

With a much larged crowd in attendance than was noted at the opening, the "Every Day Af-fair" of the Trinity Reformed church's Young Mission Band closed last night. Practically all the contents of the booths were disposed of and the organization will clear a substantial sum to be used for mission work. The affair was probably one of the most successful the Band has yet conducted and the young women feel grateful for the patronage accorded them.

For the entertainment part of the programme, William MacClymont rendered a number of selections on the Pianola. Being an expert in the use of this instrument they were greatly enjoyed by the audience.

The young women who acted as waitresses on both evenings were the Misses Edna Cole, Cora Gano, Bertha Hoagland, Margaret VanDeventer, Edna Oliver, Ethel Smith, Jeanette Neal, Lidia Wyman, Ida Tier, Anna Boss, Edna Debele, Edna Force, Amy Todd, Viola Hill and Mamie Davenport.

VETERAN DENTIST DIES

Dr. M. A. Carman Succumbs Suddenly to an Attack of Heart Failure.

DEATH UNEXPECTED

Family Did Not Know His Heart Was Weak—Had Completed Arrangements to Spend Winter in Florida.

Dr. Myron Albert Carman, dental surgeon, died suddenly at his home, 317 Franklin place, at 12:30 o'clock this morning. Angina pectoris was the cause of death. Dr. Carman was sixty-four years old.

The death was toally unexpected by the family. Dr. Carman had had spells of nervousness recently, but these were regarded as natural effects of his age and no hint of the presence of heart trouble was given the family until he lay dying last night.

Dr. Carman was in his usual health during the day. He went to New York in the morning, on business, returning apparently unfatigued at noon. In the afternoon he went to the Laing garage to see about repairs to his automobile, and returned from there in time to eat a hearty dinner at the usual time. He went to bed early, to all appearances in normal health. At 11 o'clock he was taken ill. Dr. Ellis Hedges, and later Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, were summoned, but their efforts to save him were fruitless. He sank steadily and died in an hour and a half.

Dr. Carman his survived by a widow and five children. The latter are Miss Julia M. Carman, who lives at home; Mrs. A. W. Browne, of Pleasant Plains, S. I.; Dr. R. S. Carman, of Yonkers, N. Y.; Mrs. C. A. Fulcher, of Newark, and Miss Margaret Carman, at home.

Dr. Carman practiced dentistry for forty years. He came here ten years ago, from New York City, where he had practiced for a quarter of a century. He retired on November 1, and had completed all arrangements to spend the winter in Florida. Dr. Carman's birthplace was Newark, N. Y. He was a mason, affiliated with Kane Lodge, New York. He was an enthusiastic automobilist.

Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made. They will be delayed until word is received by the family from friends in the South.

MURDOCH'S FUNERAL.

Local Masonic Order Arranges for Burial of Young Scotchman.

The funeral of John Murdoch, the young Scotchman who dropped dead in front of Goff's Hotel Thursday night, will be held from Cole's undertaking rooms tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Members of the local Masonic lodges and the Masons' Union have made the arrangements and will be in attendance. The body will be buried in the Masonic Hall plot in North Plainfield cemetery.

Murdoch's home was in Falkirk, Scotland, where he is survived by his parents, a sister and a brother. The father is a business man and a cablegram was sent him yesterday apprising him of the son's death. The latter came to Plainfield six months ago with Alexander Potter, a companion, who also boarded at Goff's, and the two were employed by Tallamy Brothers. Murdoch had been doing well since residing here and had formed quite a circle of acquaintances, especially among the Scotch people. He was a member of the Scotch Grand Lodge of Masons, and when the Plainfield Masons were apprised of this City Judge William N. Runyon and W. W. Warnock at once took steps to hold the full service of the order.

Reports from the session of the Past Grand Masters' Association held at Camden were received at the meeting of Columbia Lodge, No. 58, A. O. U. W., last night. It was announced that at the first meeting of Columbia Lodge in December officers for the ensuing year would be nominated.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel P. Case, who were recently married at Far Hills, have returned from their wedding trip and are residing on Plainfield avenue.

Dr. Slicer's Topic.

Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, of New York, will preach in All Souls' church tomorrow evening at 7:45. His subject will be "Some Fundamental Questions in Religion."

IF YOU BEAT HIM, YOU'LL GET NO COAL

COAL DEALERS PREPARED TO INAUGURATE PROTECTIVE MEASURES.

For the purpose to better control the local trade the members of the Plainfield Retail Coal Dealers' Association are effecting a reorganization. A meeting will be held tonight, when it is expected that definite plans will be adopted. The idea is to decide upon some plan whereby they will not be compelled to lose so much money in the shape of bad debts. A meeting was called for Thursday night, but lack of a quorum prevented it being held.

When organized the dealers will have a system which will acquaint them with the names of persons who purposely refuse to pay their coal bills. It is not proposed to work any hardships, but simply to seek to prevent the running of bills by persons well able to pay. This work will require a list of names and all dealers will have a copy. Certain rules will govern the sale of coal to such persons. It is expected that the new rules will be put in operation within a short time, so as to cover the heavy business at this season of the year.

MEEKER'S SLOWNESS MAY PROVE EXPENSIVE

FAILURE TO DO MACADAM WORK TO BE CONSIDERED BY COUNCIL.

C. M. Meeker, who has the city contract to macadamize several streets, including Monroe avenue, Randolph road and Spooner avenue, failed to complete the same within the time limit, November 15. In consequence it will be up to the Common Council to deduct $10 for each day after the time limit, and this will no doubt be done, according to Chairman Wilson, of the street committee.

Recently taxpayers complained about the condition of Monroe avenue. Mr. Wilson declared that he was helpless in the matter, and that Contractor Meeker was indifferent to his appeals to finish up the work. It was then announced that $10 would be deducted for each day after the time limit expired.

This announcement had a tendency to hurry Mr. Meeker, and while it was impossible for him to complete his work on time, the Monroe avenue job will be finished very soon. Mr. Meeker but recently started the work on Randolph road, while up to a few days ago Spooner avenue had not been touched. Under these conditions he may apply to the Common Council for another extension of time, for at the present rate the amount he would have to forfeit would considerably reduce his profits on the job.

This is the first time in a long while that the street committee has been forced to apply the penalty, and no doubt different arrangements will be made in the future. It is now almost a certainty that next year there will be two or three other contractors who will make a bid for city work on the streets.

MR. ACKERMAN'S LECTURE.

Senator-Elect Edifies Large Audience at Cranford Church.

Senator-elect Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, gave a delightful illustrated lecture of his travels, in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church, Cranford, Thursday evening, for the benefit of the Garwood chapel building fund.

Mr. Ackerman's lecture was illustrated with many beautiful views taken from photographs made by himself. The voyages, circling the globe; the many foreign countries and their characteristics and notable persons, many of whom the speaker met and had the pleasure of receiving special favors at their hands, were told about, as were also his travels last April when he passed the Russian fleet in the Straits of Malacca, and the celebration at Tokio and Yokohama, in honor of Admiral Togo's victory.

The lecture was largely attended and was followed by an informal reception to Mr. Ackerman, when the citizens of Cranford had the pleasure of meeting personally their next representative in the Senate.

NOVEL POINT WON CASE

Widow's Estate Not Liable for Security She Gave for Money Loaned Husband.

PRECEDENT IS MADE

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh's Contention of Evasion of Married Women's Act is Sustained by Court.

Can a married woman be held liable on her promissory notes discounted by a bank, the proceeds of which discount are placed to her husband's credit by virtue of a check which the wife gave to her husband, and which the husband presented to the bank at the same time that the notes were discounted? Or is such a transaction in conflict with the law of this State which declares a married woman's contract of suretyship invalid unless on the faith of such contract she obtains money, property or other thing of value for her own use, or for the use, benefit or advantage of her separate estate?

Such is a new question of law which has just been decided by the Supreme Court in the case of the People's National Bank, of New Brunswick, against Louisa Schepflin, of this city.

Craig A. Marsh, Esq., counsel for Mrs. Schepflin, contended before the trial court, that Mrs. Schepflin could not be held liable under such circumstances, on the ground that while the bank's books showed that the proceeds of the note were placed to her credit, and that she afterwards checked out the money in favor of her husband, yet the real transaction was in the eye of the law a mere loan to the husband, with the wife as surety, inasmuch as before the notes were discounted, the bank had already obtained the check whereby it was enabled to put the money to the husband's credit. The wife, he contended, never had any control whatever over the proceeds of the discount of the notes. In fact the whole transaction was for the husband's benefit, and was an attempt to evade the Married Women's Act.

The lower court conceded that the point was new and not without force, but added that the court would in this case direct the jury to find a verdict against Mrs. Schepflin for the full amount claimed, for the reason, to quote the language of the charge: "I propose in disposing of this case, to treat the transaction as it appears upon the fact of the papers; that is to say, that the notes were made by the defendant (Mrs. Schepflin) as maker; that they were discounted for her, and that the proceeds were placed to her credit on the books of the bank under 'Sundry Discounts' or were placed somewhere on the books of the bank subject to her order, and that she made such order by signing a check, and hence, received the money, or was entitled to receive it; and when she elected to make a check, which she was not required to do, she transferred the fund and thus disposed of it as her own property."

The Judge also referred to the policy of upholding commercial instruments until some principle of law is settled which requires the court to disavow them, and finally told the jury that he would direct, in this case, that there be a verdict for the amount which the plaintiff claimed, and then if counsel so desired he would grant a rule to show cause that a review might be had.

Mr. Marsh promptly took the case to the Supreme Court to be reviewed, with the result that his position was fully sustained, the opinion being read by Judge Pitney, and concurred in by Chief Justice Gummere, and Justices Fort and Reed, at the present term. The court reverses the judgment of the lower court, and in the last paragraph of the opinion says: "It follows that the learned trial justice erred in refusing defendant's motions for non-suit and direction of a verdict, and the rule to show cause should be made absolute."

AMERICAN EAGLE KILLED.

King of Birds Measured More Than Seven Feet.

An American gray eagle which measured over seven feet from tip to tip of outstretched wings was caught yesterday on Newark Bay shore, near the foot of West Fifty-first street, Bayonne. Its capturer is Harry Mainhard, Jr. He was painting a building when his attention was attracted by peculiar cries and a great flapping of wings.

The next moment the big bird flew close to him and lit on the bottom limb of a tree. It was exhausted and cling to the limb with one foot, the other hanging down as though helpless. Mainhard got an axe and knocked it from the limb. As the eagle landed on the ground it hopped along forty feet, flapping its wings and gasping. Mainhard broke its neck. It will be stuffed by a Manhattan taxidermist.

BIG STATE REVIVAL.

Plainfield Included in Plans of Dr. Chapman.

Paterson, Nov. 18.—Much has been published about the big revival in this State, which will be begun next Sunday by Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman and his corps of evangelists, who have just closed a successful revival in St. Paul and Minneapolis. The newspapers have told of the speakers and plans for Newark, Bloomfield and Orange and also for Elizabeth. What follows deals with other parts of the State. As told, it is planned to conduct meetings in every large city of the State, any in many of the smaller places also.

In Paterson, the first district will be in charge of Dr. Chapman, who will be accompanied by his chorus-leader, Charles F. Allen, and Fred Butler, basso soloist. Prominent evangelists who will assist in Paterson are Revs. A. W. Spooner, D. D.; John H. Elliott, D. D.; Daniel S. Toy, W. A. Bodell, R. A. Walton, O. G. McDowell. Among the singers will be Charles E. Rykert, Frank Dickson, A. M. Roberts, O. F. Pugh, Mr. Voerland.

In Jersey City the speakers will be: Revs. J. Wilber Chapman, D. D.; R. A. Walton, J. R. Pratt, H. W. Stough, Dr. John H. Earle, D. D.; John Robertson, Lester Leggett, Thomas Houston, Tilman Hobson. The singers are: Ralph T. Fulton, W. H. Collisson, Professor W. S. Weeden, John W. Long.

VARIOUS ITEMS.

Said George Wylie, of the State Live Stock Sanitary Board, at the St. Charles: "Tuberculin tests cannot be successfully made in city stock yards, for the animals are excited and the the temperature of their blood prevents the revelation of actual conditions. The ordinary temperature of a cow is 102 degrees. Tuberculin for testing purposes looks much like extract of beef. A certain amount of this is drawn up into a hypodermic syringe and is injected under the skin, just behind the shoulder blade. In about six hours the temperature is taken again and if the animal has tuberculosis the thermometer will show 103 or 104 degrees. If the disease is in an incipient stage, and is located in a part of the body where it will not contaminate the flesh, the State law permits the slaughter of the animal for food.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

Consul General Halloway, of Halifax, reports that an Ottawa special says that one of the experts of the Canadian Fisheries Department has returned from British Columbia, after successfully planting, at different points in the waters of that province, a large number of good sized lobsters. Attempts have been made by the Fisheries Department in other years to transfer lobesters from the waters of the Atlantic to the Pacific, but without success, the long railway journey being too much for the crustaceans. Profiting by the experience gained in the past, extra precautions were taken this year, with the results that of the original consignment of several thousand lobsters shipped from the maritime provinces, 40 per cent. reached Vancouver in good condition and were speedily transferred to the sea at various points, both on the mainland coast and Vancouver Island, upon which a strict closed season will be observed for two or three years.—Forest and Stream.

That exhibition of pet animals in Ocala furnishes a good suggestion to her sisters. But Floridians might easily get some Florida pets and so escape competition with New York and London along ordinary lines. Some Florida birds are easily domesticated and many Florida animals are both cute and beautiful—a raccoon is much more interesting than a monkey. And why not take official notice of the mental accomplishments of these pets? It has always seemed to us that the official shows ignored the province most important to the animals and their owners.—Florida Times-Union.

George W. Kaufmann, grand esteemed loyal knight of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, is dead, in his fifty-sixth year, at the Post-Graduate Hospital, in New York, following an operation for hernia. He was elected to his high office at the last national convention of Elks in Buffalo. Mr. Kaufmann lived at 820 Washington street, Hoboken. He was a charter member and a past exalted ruler of Hoboken Lodge of Elks, No. 74. He served two terms as a member of the local police board in the eighties. He was once assistant water registrar of the city. Mr. Kaufmann leaves a widow and one married daughter.

GOV. STOKES TALKS ON GRAFT EXPOSURE

SAYS DISCLOSURES IN POLITICAL AND COMMERCIAL LIFE STIR CONSOLENCE.

Atlantic City, Nov. 18.—Governor Stokes, of New Jersey, made two speeches here last night. One was before the State Sunday-school convention, the other before a mass meeting of citizens in the interest of the Jews in Russia.

The Governor touched upon the advantages of education before the Sunday-school Association. He said: "No man can lay claim to culture without a knowledge of the contents of the Bible that contains God's messages." He hoped to see Sunday-school teaching raised to the point of a profession.

"Recently," he continued, "we have had disclosures in commercial and political life that have stirred the consciences of our people. All sorts of legislative remedies are now being suggested for the correction of abuses. They will be welcomed by every good citizen, but the way to purify a stream is to begin at the source rather than establish a filtration at its mouth."

MAY INVESTIGATE FAIR.

State Military Board Interested in Jersey City Charge.

Trenton, Nov. 18.—The State military board and the school authorities are likely to investigate complaints that gambling was permitted and encouraged among school children who last week patronized the National Guard bazar in Jersey City, and that many boys were made intoxicated by liquor secured there.

The reports have caused considerable discussion about the State House. Joseph H. Brensinger, colonel of the regiment, is also principal of one of the public schools of the city. He declares that if there was gambling or intoxication at the fair, it was against his orders.

Patrons, however, assert that members of the colonel's family assisted with some of the gambling decises which were run to increase the revenue of the entertainment. Captain George T. Vickers, who is assistant prosecutor of the county, is also accused of having closed his eyes to the gross violations of the laws.

POINTS ABOUT PEOPLE.

Sir Henry Irving's family name of Broadribb is of pure Saxon derivation, originally signfying "broadrib," as applied to a stalwart persons with a capacious chest measurement.

General Frederick D. Grant was elected president of the Grant Family Association, which just held a reunion at Windsor, Conn. There were about 300 members of the family present.

Professor Goldwin Smith, the venerable Canadian publicist, is fond of children, and believes that as an encouragement to matrimony two votes should be given to every married man.

The late Sig. Tamango, in spite of his lavish generosity, managed to amass a larger fortune than any singer of his time, with perhaps the exception of Jean de Reszke. His only daughter inherited more than $1,000,000.

Lord Kingsale, who has the curious privilege of remaining covered in the presence of the sovereign, started from London for India recently with one of his twin daughters. They are to visit Kingsale's son in the army.

Paul V. Keyser, of Atlantic, Ia., who has been made Second Assistant Attorney General for the Post Office Department, has won swift promotion, as he entered the service four years ago as a clerk. He is only twenty-four years of age and is the youngest man that has ever held the position.

Lord Inverclyde's will was holographic and brief. It read: "30 Jamaica street, Glasgow, March 30, 1901—I leave everything I possess of every description to my wife, the Right Honorable Mary Baroness Inverclyde, and I appoint her my executrix. Inverclyde."

The name of Haakon, which Prince Charles of Denmark will assume, if he ascends the Norwegian throne, recalls the remote past in which Norway was an independent kingdom. Haakon VI., who died in 1830, was the last King whom Norway had of its own. His widow, Margaret, a Danish princess, came to rule over Norway, Denmark and Sweden, and strove to make the arrangement lasting by the union of 1397. Sweden revolted under Gustavus Vasa, the contemporary of King Henry VIII. of England, but Norway remained a Danish dependency until 1814.

Burchell a Local Visitor.

Fred Burchell, one of the star twirlers of the Baltimore, Eastern League Club, was the guest of Plainfield friends on Thursday night and attended the performance of "Simple Simon Simple," at the New Plainfield theatre.

May Not Play With York.

Although "Lou" Wiltse has been reserved for next season by the York, Pa., Tri-State League Club, this does not mean that the Plainfielder will play there. He has other plans which he hopes will materialize.

AMUSEMENTS

It is a most agreeable and acceptable performance of "Twelfth Night" which E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe invite favor at the Knickerbocker theatre, and it is a notable one. Miss Marlowe's Viola, already familiar, takes on new beauty with the passing of the years, and Mr. Sothern's Malvolio, revealed for the first time, provides a new and surprisingly competent addition to his gallery of Shakespearean portraits. It has been a long time since one of the poet's comedies has been more sympathetically and adequately staged. The play is one that lends itself capitally to the kind of adornment in scene, costume and accessory of which the modern stage manager is so fond, but the temptation to overdo these features has been resisted, and as a result the pictures, while rich and effective, are never obtrusively so, providing, as they should, merely an effective framing for the characters. Miss Marlowe's playing of Viola being already familiar to the public, interest in the performance to an extent centers in Mr. Sothern, who as Malvolio takes up a character differing in most respects from any he has attempted since he became a familiar figure in the public eye. His Malvolio is a distinctly human personage—the word is used advisedly—and while discosing him all his absurd and fantastical pomposity, he happily never once makes the very common mistake of bringing him down to the level of his fellows at Olivia's house, but skilfully cmopasses the temptation to play him in the too obvious low comedy vein. The steward's quixotic follies are sufficiently emphasized, but not so much so that one fails to see in him an underlying dignity, which might have been a virtue but for the monumental conceit with which nature has coupled it. Mr. Sothern's comedy method is most fluent, and it is probable that few actors have given a better quality of unctuous humor to the famous scene in which, cross-gartered and smiling, he makes his peacock-like passage before his mistress.

David Belasco and Blanche Bates came to the Belasco theatre Tuesday night with the former's newest play—his annual production. To say that they were successful, to intimate that the piece is a hit, is to stoop to absurdities; the same thing has been said of a dozen other plays this year. "The Girl of the Golden West" is not like these others. As a melodrama or a heart painting of men and women, or whatever it is, it stands as much alone as does David Warfield in "The Music Master." The man who can produce two such plays and can find two such players to play them is a genius. New York and the theatregoing public should doff their hats to him. While this tremendously artistic production was having its metropolitan premiere last night the packed theatre sat part of the time breathless, part of the time laughing, part of the time crying. The fundamental something in every line, in every turn of the action, in every scene, was perfectly apparent to every one, although nine out of ten of those who watched know as little of California in the days of '49 as they do of domestic life in Timbuctoo. Half a dozen times when the play was intense the audience, unable to restrain itself, broke out into spontaneous applause in a dozen spots simultaneously. This nervous display of appreciation invariably came at the most inopportune moment, and seemed to be made without the will or knowledge of its makers. It was the best possible tribute to the genius of the playwright and the ability of the players. Throughout the entire production the applause was great, but when the curtain dropped on the second act and on the Girl sobbing at the table, where, in a game of "show down," she had risked herself and saved the life of her unconscious lover, a mighty wave of enthusiasm spread through the entire house. Shouts of "Bravo!" and calls of "Belasco!" were as frequent as the more conventional handclapping. Ten times the curtain was raised, and finally the author-manager was led upon the stage by Miss Bates and the door of the cabin was closed behind him.

In a dramatic season bereft of successes, the limited co-star engagement of James K. Hackett and Mary Mannering in Alfred Sutro's great play, "The Walls of Jericho," at the Savoy theatre stands pre-eminently alone as being the best drawing card of the present New York season. No better evidence of this success is needed than the reminder that this play is now in its fourth month in New York, playing to crowded houses at every performance and with every sign of prosperity that bespeaks for it a full continuance of that patronage long after the winter months have passed behind. Seats are now selling four weeks in advance including the special Thanksgiving Day matinee. It is well to note that Mr. Hackett's midweek matinees occur on Thursday, and the regular matinee on Saturday.

Every act of "Big Hearted Jim," Klimt and Gazzalo's latest success, in which George Klimt is starring this season, has an interesting setting and the play is full of good characters, besides the big, bluff sheriff of Medicine Lodge, Montana, which Mr. Klimt plays. Two acts show a stockade yard with an Indian outbreak threatened. The romance of the brave and fearless sheriff and the pretty school teacher of his town is beautifully told and Jim's victory over the Easterner who deceived the school teacher in early life with a mock marriage is accomplished in many clever and stirring scenes. Incidentally the stealing of Triska, the heiress, known as "White Witch," from her Indian guardians is prevented. The play is as full of real humor as it is of genuine heart interest. It will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre Thanksgiving afternoon and night.

Among the big cast of artists who compose the Aborn Production Company's revival of the famous comic opera, "Robin Hood," is Maurice Hageman, who will sing the comedy role of Friar Tuck. Nature has peculiarly fitted Mr. Hageman for the role of the Friar. Outside of his appearance he has a highly cultured voice, and for the past ten years has been associated with the finest singing organizations en tour. "Robin Hood" with a company of fifty, which includes a strong male chorus and scores of pretty girls, all having finely trained voices, comes to this city on Monday night at the New Plainfield theatre.

One of the melodramatic successes of the season will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night, November 25. "When the World Sleeps," a four act play by Langdon McCormick and Lawrence Marston, has created a sensation from the first performance and continues to play to the S. R. O. sign everywhere. It tells an exciting and interesting story of New York people and centers around the murder of one of two brothers who love the same girl. The other brother takes upon himself the stigma of being his brother's murderer to shield his sweetheart, who, he thinks, killed the man in her sleep. There are several thrilling scenes, the murder at midnight, the escape from jail and the rescue from the burning mill. Messrs. Mittenthal Brothers have provided an especialy strong cast and an elaborate mounting, making the play worthy the attention of the theatregoing public.

Charles E. Blaney's big production of the "Curse of Drink," with its thrilling locomotive scene and other startling features, is the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight.

The extraordinary reputation achieved by Lyman H. Howe as a master in the production of moving pictures is an indubitable proof that the programme to be given at the New Plainfield theatre on Wednesday night is one of the highest order. Mr. Howe's exhibitions have now been before the American public for ten years, and during all that time public interest in them has never lagged. On the contrary, the press and public have lauded and admired each reappearance with a greater cordiality and a lustier ring in the applause. The programme Mr. Howe will present on this occasion will far surpass all his previous achievements and stimulate even more intense interest in his perennially popular production.

At the Majestic theatre, New York, "Wonderland" has solidly established itself as "another Julian Mitchell success." It is a natural product of the genius that produced "The Wizard of Oz" and "Babes in Toyland," and, of course, the public has taken to it greedily, never tired of the marvelous stage devices of the inexhaustible Mitchell. A fair estimate of the charms and the peculiar qualities of "Wonderland" is given in this quotation from the laudatory notice in the New York Herald: "Wonderland" is a delightful place. Julian Mitchell's play at the Majestic theatre scored a marked success. For the blues go to "Wonderland," the brightest, jolliest, most tuneful play since "Toyland." Though the piece puts forward several comedians, the first place in public favor surely goes to the laughing horse. This is pronounced to be the funniest animal of all since on the stage in recent years, and it certainly has the cowardly lion of previous fame at this playhouse beaten at all points. Sam Chip enters mounted on the grotesque Rollo and that is a signal for roars of laughter continuing as long as the horse is in sight. Miss Lotta Faust, whose "Sammy" song was one of the hits of "The Wizard," has an equally delightful part in "Wonderland." Bessie Wynn is there too with another inimitable boy role. Aimee Angeles is pert and comical, and Eva Davenport furnishes the heaviest humor of the dialogue. Several new songs are now in rehearsal. The most notable event of the past week at the Majestic was the visit of Prince Louis of Battenberg and nearly three hundred officers of the American and British fleets then anchored in the Hudson.

David Sharp, of the borough, has returned from a visit with Charles Huff, of Somerville.

Frank Moore, of this city, has been visiting his parents, Justice and Mrs. J. H. Moore, of Middle Valley.

Mrs. J. S. Harden, of South Branch, who has been quite ill here at the home of relatives, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Morton, of Titusville, Pa., formerly of New York, and well-known here, will soon move to Mountain avenue, the borough.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Dufford, of West Front street, returned home yesterday from Middle Valley, where they have been visiting Mr. and Mrs Elijah Dufford.

A Meteor

is a heavenly phenomenom that struck fear to the hearts of our ancestors. They would have received the Gas Heater in the same spirit of wonder. A stove, easily carried from room to room, turned on and off at will, and ready at a minute's notice would have savored to them of witchcraft. Today it is a necessity. We sell Gas Heaters at $1.50. CURED TO STAY CURED.

How a Plainfield Citizen Found Complete Freedom from Kidney Troubles.

If you suffer from backache—
From any disease of the kidneys,
Be cured to stay cured.
Doan's Kidney Pills make lasting cures.
Plainfield people testify.
Here's one case of it:

Mrs. Anna Holmes, of New Market, N. J., three or four miles from Plainfield, N. J., says: "Some years ago I gave a statement for publication, telling what Doan's Kidney Pills had done for me, and I am now glad to confirm what I said then. I used several boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills for sharp pains in my head and dull beating pains in my back and sides. When I attempted to rise quickly after sitting or lying for any length of time, sharp acute pains would always follow. My kidneys seemed to be weakened in every way, and I became in such a condition that work was impossible. I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills curing others of kidney and bladder troubles so I procured a box at L. W. Randolph's drug store. They helped me from the first, and I continued to improve steadily. I am glad to repeat what I said in my former statement for my good opinion of this remedy has in no wise changed."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

PERKINS FOR SPEAKER?

A mention made not long since of Randolph Perkins, of this county, for the leadership of the Republican party in the House of Assembly of the coming New Jersey Legislature, has gained strength, until he is now looked upon as a logical candidate for the honor.

It is pretty generally conceded that the leadership of the Assembly will go to one of the southern counties, and as a balance to this the leadership will be given to one of the northern counties. There are two likely men spoken of to replace John Boyd Avis in the speaker's chair. They are Samuel K. Robbins, of Burlington, and John M. Mills, of Morris county. Is it said that Senator Thomas J. Hillery has an eye on the leadership in the Senate. In that case, since he comes from the same county as Mills, if he be successful, then Mills will be out of the running for the speakership of the Assembly, and Robbins will be left pretty much a sure thing in the quest for the speakership.

Whichever way the speakership of the Lower House goes, whether to Robbins or Mills or to any other assemblyman, it is fairly well settled that the position should go to some southern man, and therefore, in the evening up of things in the Legislature, the leadership will go north.

A consideration of conditions in the northern counties marks Union county as the county to furnish the man, and a view of things in Union county shows Perkins to be the likely selection. Edward D. Duffield, of Essex county, was the leader last year. He is now assistant State attorney-general. The Essex men who will come into the 1906 Legislature, are all new men. So are those from Hudson county. Three of the Passaic assemblymen this year are new men. Morris county is remote from the leadership for reasons named.

It would seem, therefore, that the county from which the leader is to be chosen is Union. Mr. Perkins came into the Legislature last year much in the capacity of a filler-in, to take the place left vacant by the death of George H. Embree. But he surprised the Legislature by his readiness and aptness for the position to which he was chosen. Mr. Perkins won for himself many friends and admirers before the Legislature closed last year. He is a practising lawyer in Jersey City, where he is well known and popular. In his aspiration for the leadership, he will undoubtedly have the support of the Hudson county assemblymen.

William J. Bradley, who took the place last year of the retiring president of the Senate, Joseph Cross, will succeed himself this year as president of the Senate.—Elizabeth Daily Journal.

DEAD IN MOLTEN STEEL.

8,000-Pound Mass of Metal That Fell on Two Men to Be Buried.

Philadelphia, Nov. 18. — John Forkin, of 2010 Stella street, and Joseph Warde, of 3041 Newcomb street, were working in a crucible pit at the Midvale Steel Works two weeks ago when 80,000 pounds of molten steel was released and fell upon them.

The men must have been converted into ashes and gas in the fraction of a second. Not even a button was found.

The Midvale company has caused to be cut away from the mass in the crucible the bottom of the casting, which fell directly on the men, and which is supposed to contain fragments of their bodies. This weighs 8,000 pounds and will be buried in the yard of the steel plant as a token of respect to the dead workmen. The families of both wanted it done, and regular funeral services will be held over the steel.

STATE ARBITRATION IS NOT SUCCESSFUL

GOVERNMENT REPORT CLASSES NEW JERSEY AMONG THE INACTIVE ONES.

Washington, Nov. 18.—The practical working of government industrial arbitration here and in other countries is the subject of an exhaustive investigation reported in the Bureau of Labor official bulletin, which has just been issued.

The paper is a statistical account of laws and results of their operation, the record being brought as closely to date as the necessary reports and documents permitted. It includes all laws in any land which have been enacted for the purpose of providing means for the settlement of collective industrial disputes.

For the United States it shows that at the beginning of the year 1905 twenty-four States had passed laws for industrial arbitration or conciliation, and one other State by its constitution directed such legislation. The earliest law upon the subject was passed in Maryland in 1878. The State laws have marked similarities in many cases and are grouped in four classes as follows:

Local arbitration, with no permanent agency therefor—Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Texas.

Permanent district or county boards established by private parties—Pennsylvania, Ohio, Iowa and Kansas.

Arbitration or conciliation through State commissioners of labor—Colorado, Missouri, North Dakota, Washington, Maryland.

Special State board or commission for the settlement of industrial disputes—New York, Massachusetts, Montana, Michigan, California, New Jersey, Ohio, Louisiana, Connecticut, Illinois, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Utah, Colorado, Idaho, Indiana and Missouri.

The report says that the laws in the first group "have all turned out to be practically dead letters." Much the same verdict of failure must be pronounced upon the second group of laws.

In Pennsylvania alone was anything accomplished under this system.

Of the ten States with laws for State boards which provide also for local arbitration, in none of the reports of such boards is any trace to be found that the latter provision was ever made use of except in Massachusetts and Ohio.

As to State boards of conciliation and arbitration involving seventeen States, those which have been active relatively little or not at all are the following nine States: California, Colorado, Connecticut, Idaho, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana and Utah.

The remaining eight States boards not only have been more active ever since their establishment than the nine mentioned, but also have all published regular reports, as required by their laws. They are New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Ohio, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana and Missouri.

Of the five states which provide intervention by State labor commissioners the law was in force in North Dakota but a year. In Colorado this was superseded by a State board of arbitration, the records, however, showing that during ten years ending 1897, with 71 strikes in the State, in only three of them is intervention by the commissioner reported, and in none of the three did he effect a settlement. In Missouri considerably more appears to have been accomplished. In Washington State during two years' records, there were 12 cases of intervention by the commissioner, resulting in six settlements, two disputes without strike or lockouts, and six failures. In Maryland the provision is so recent that the arbitration law "had not been tested."

CARRIED CONCEALED WEAPON.

Was In His Suit Case But Court Convicted Him.

New Brunswick, Nov. 18.—Harrison Wilson, of Perth Amboy, was convicted yesterday of carrying concealed weapons, although the revolver which figured in the complaint was in a suit case, and his lawyer insisted that he was not "carrying concealed weapons" any more than if he had the revolver in his trunk. Wilson was also convicted of having burglar's tools in his possession. Chief of Police Burke and Detective Huff, of the Perth Amboy police force, testified to finding Wilson in Perth Amboy, sitting on a suit case in which were found a bunch of skeleton keys, a blackjack, a loaded revolver, a blue handkerchief and a pair of goggles. He wore a pair of rugger-heeled shoes.

Wilson declared he found all the incriminating articles. Mr. Stricker, his counsel, based his argument as to the impropriety of a conviction for carrying concealed weapons on the language of the statute, which reads concealed "in or about his clothes or person." Prosecutor Berdine held that the word "about" referred to "person" not to "clothes," and that this counted in personal baggage as a place for concealing the weapon. The man was remanded for sentence.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Geary, of Woodland avenue, are the parents of a young son who came to their home Thursday afternoon.

Plainfield, N. J., November 18, 1905.

Chauncey Depew's reputation as a wit is now being eclipsed by his reputation as a man with a convenient memory.

United States Senator Boise Penrose has sounded a trumpet blast for reform. A pair of brass wings are being made for the sole survivor of the Quay machine.

Captain Martin, of Co. K, and Captain McCullough, of Company A, have made a wager over the superiority of two companies for drill efficiency next year. The Trenton officer must have money to waste.

William Randolph Hearst says that his election expenses amounted to exactly $80,206.83. If one had all above that amount that the campaign cost the municipal ownership candidate he would'nt feel envious of McCurdy or McCall.

SEED DISTRIBUTION.

Government Will Send 38,000,000 Free Packages.

The annual distribution of vegetable and flower seeds by the Department of Agriculture will begin December 11, and before planting time it is expected the entire amount, aggregating 38,000,000 packages, will be in the hands of the people in all sections of the country. Congress for the past several years has appropriated $290,000 for this purpose, but a portion of the amount is used for foreign experiment work and other kindred matters.

The bulk of the 38,000,000 packages is subject to the order of Senators and Representatives for distribution among their constituents, the Secretary of Agriculture reserving one-fifth of the entire amount to supply the statistical crops correspondents, the weather bureau and for other purposes. The country has been divided into six sections, with especial regard to climate and soils, and the seeds will be sent only to those localities in which their propagation and growth is believed to be especially adapted.

In addition to those of the vegetable and flower variety, the department sends out quantities of cotton, forage and field seeds to localities to which they are best suited, and from which it is thought good results may be obtained.

Strolls Through Sub-Hudson Tunnel.

Jersey City, Nov. 18.—Secretary Kenyon B. Conger, of the Hudson Street Railroad Company, is planning a series of afternoon walks for Jerseymen through the twin tunnels under the Hudson between Fifteenth street, this city, and Morton street, New York. The first of the strolls will take place next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The company seeks to construct and operate a system of trolley lines throughout Hudson county. The purpose of the walks is to show the people on the west side of the Hudson what the company has already accomplished.

Touring Auto Goes Into Fence.

New Brunswick, Nov. 18.—A touring car, owned by Albert C. Busch, of 536 Water street, New York, while passing through this city from Long Branch to New York yesterday skidded in George street and, making a complete curve, dashed into the iron railing which guards a deep area. Had it not been for this railing Mr. Busch and his chauffeur probably would have been killed. The headlight and front of the car were wrecked.

Age 92, Vote 92, and Hymn 92.

Delaware, Nov. 18.—Few men can have the expericence of Henry Thomas, of Flicksville, on the Pennsylvania side of the Delaware River, near here. Mr. Thomas voted on his ninety-second birthday. The aged man's vote was the ninety-second one recorded. When he left the polling place he sang hymn 92 from an old hymnal. Mr. Thomas is hale and hearty and says he expects to live to vote on his 100th birthday.

BURGLARS IN ELIZABETH.

Stationery Store is Ransacked During Night.

Thieves entered the stationery store of Morris Koestler, at 140 First street, Elizabeth, some time during Thursday night, and removed goods valued at $500. The matter was reported to Captain O'Leary this morning and in less than two hours he succeeded in recovering one-third of the goods from a box-car near Broadway.

The goods stolen included revolvers, knives, razors, fountain pens, stationery and $40 in cash. Entrance was effected to the store through iron bars in a rear window, and it is the opinion that the work was that of boys. Captain O'Leary got trace of some of the goods through a crowd of boys who found a package in the box car, and he believes that during the day he will capture the thieves.

HIS ESTATE A MYTH.

"Millionaire Bartender" Is Being Called Fabricator.

James R. Floyd, who for several months held the title of "millionaire bartender," after producing supposed proof that he had fallen heir to a fortune of $90,000, is now regarded as a fabricator by several of his intimate acquaintances in Hackensack, where he dispensed drinks at the National Hotel.

Shortly after announcing the receipt of the $90,000, Floyd left the hotel and was married to a young widow, Mrs. Grace W. Rieles, of East Onondaga, N. Y. The two weeks' honeymoon was spent at the Normandie Hotel, New York, where several Hackensack young men were entertained at dinner.

A letter from Mrs. Floyd to a friend in Hackensack, received yesterday, says she has been granted separation papers from the would-be millionaire "after a bitter experience."

Floyd told his Hackensack friends that he had purchased a hotel near Syracuse, his old home. As a matter of fact, the hotel was owned by his wife before he married her.

Another letter recently received in Hackensack from the Chief of Police in East Onondaga says Floyd was under arrest there a few weeks ago for failing to pay a board bill.

There are several checks floating around Hackensack and New York signed by Floyd that were returned to those who cashed them marked "no good."

Floyd's whereabouts are unknown.

TO REVIEW WAR TAX.

Suits, Involving $127,000, Sent to Upper U. S. Courts.

Judge Joseph Cross, in the United States District Court, at Newark, granted yesterday two writs of certiorari to Dr. Herman C. H. Herold, Collector of Internal Revenue, in suits brought by the estate of Bernard M. Shanley, of Newark, and Abraham Wolff, of Morristown, through their executors.

The writ in the Wolff case removes that suit to the United States Circuit Court and the Shanley writ takes that case up to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

The Shanley heirs secured a verdict recovering more than $90,000 levied as a war tax on inheritance, while the executors of Mr. Wolff, who was a member of the banking house of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., recovered, in a similar manner, a levy of $37,000 under the same war revenue act of 1898.

The writs were applied for by Assistant United States District-Attorney Harry P. Lindabury, with the consent of opposing counsel.

CAR STRUCK BY LUMBER.

Contact Breaks Windows and Hurls Passengers to Floor.

Trenton, Nov. 18.—John I. Holt, of Paterson, Deputy Commissioner of the Department of Labor of New Jersey, narrowly escaped serious injury when on his way yesterday from Paterson to Trenton. He was knocked from his seat in a train on the Pennsylvania Railroad by contact with a piece of lumber, which struck the car in which he was seated.

When near the Interstate Fair Grounds the stick of lumber which was on a passing freight train struck the side of the car. Three windows were shattered and Mr. Holt was sent sprawling to the floor. Except for a few scratches from flying glass he was uninjured.

PATERSON STORE BURNED.

Firemen Saved Silk Mills, Opposite, Which Were Threatened.

Fire destroyed last night the department store of John Charney at River and Bridge streets, Paterson.

The building, a brick structure, was reduced to ashes in less than thirty minutes. Three alarms were turned in and the whole fire department was on the scene. The firemen, by great efforts, saved the silk mills of A. & M. Levy, which are situated across the street.

The building burned was originally the First Holland Reformed church, and many panes of stained glass still remained. The loss is estimated at $30,000.

P. O. ORDER WAS RAISED.

Officials Believe Boy Who Passed It to Be Agent of Expert.

United States Postal Inspectors are in New Brunswick looking for an eighteen-year-old boy who swindled E. H. Jacobs, a New Brunswick clothier, with a postoffice money order which had been raised from $1 to $25. The boy secured a $4.25 coat and $20.75 in change.

The raising was so cleverly done that there is a suspicion the boy was only the agent of an expert, and the postoffice authorities are sparing no effort to discover him.

William Crawford Injured.

William Crawford, aged thirty-five years, a resident of Dunellen and employed at the Levering & Garrigues Works, received a lacerated wound of the first finger of the right hand, while at work yesterday. The injured finger was dressed at the hospital and the man returned home.

THE EDITOR'S WAGER

"Let's come to the point," said Gregson. "Newspapers will publish any secret if they can obtain it; talk about their 'honor' and 'patriotism' is all rubbish! Why, you'd publish what happened at the Cabinet meetings if you could get the news."

"We could, perhaps, if we wanted," replied Newby, the editor of the Daily Magnet. "But we might not publish it for all that."

"Rubbish!" retorted Gregson. "I'll lay you £50 to £5 that you can't. There is a Cabinet meeting on Tuesday morning and I'll lay you that bet that you can't, in Wednesday's paper, give a full account of what was done." "Agreed,' said Newby—though somewhat rashly as he afterward thought.

On the morning of Wednesday there appeared in the Daily Magnet an account that astonished all the country, seeing that it was no less than the full details of the Cabinet meeting which had taken place on the previous afternoon, with statements as to what this minister and that had said at the meeting upon the important matters debated there.

The Daily Magnet had set everybody talking that day as to how it had secured the report and as to which minister had betrayed his colleagues. The monarch and the Prime Minister were both extremely angry at the divulgence of the views that had been put forward in Downing street, but the various ministers each pleaded ignorance of how the report had been obtained. Dire excommunication and vengeance were threatened to the culprit when he should be discovered, and many were the attempts to bring about that discovery.

Gregson had opened his paper that morning with eager and impatient hands. He had felt sure that Newby was only boasting and that the £5 was as good as won. When he saw that the great coup had been successful he was dumfounded with astonishment and chagrin. A telephone message asking him to look in at Fleet street at noon did not soothe him, especially as a satirical voice bade him "bring along the £50."

Gregson arrived punctually, however, at Newby's office. He found the whole place in great excitement, what with this person and that wanting to hear or learn something about the now famous report. When he at last got into Newby's private room he found the editor awaiting him, together with a clean-shaven, young-looking man, whose smile was not easily to be forgotten. He was soon introduced.

"Mr. Shooter—Mr. Gregson."

The editor rubbed his hands in glee.

"Well, what do you think of it, Mr. Gregson?" he asked.

"I have to admit I'm beaten, Newby," said the other. "There's your money. But may I ask how you did it?"

"Mr. Shooter will tell you, old man," replied the editor. "He will only want your word of honor as to secrecy. It is not a thing for us to be proud of, beyond establishing what you controverted, namely, that we could often get and use important news if we would do so irrespective of the ways and means by which it was obtained and without regard to the harm it might do our country."

Gregson, of course, readily gave his word, and then the private detective began his story.

"It is well known," said he, "that after each Cabinet meeting the Prime Minister writes out a full report of what has occurred for the sole use of the sovereign. This report is at once dispatched by special messenger to the king, wherever he may be. His majesty is at present in Edinburgh, and so it was clear to me that the trusty messenger carrying this report would go by the Great Northern Railway from King's Cross as soon as possible after the cabinet had broken up its meeting.

"I laid all my plans beforehand, of course. All was in readiness. I had the door of Downing street's chief house watched closely, and when at 7:30 p. m. a cab drew up there and one of the king's couriers came out of the house—the courier I knew by the silver greyhound that is his special badge—I guessed my ideas were correct, and that he was bound to catch the 8:15 to Edinburgh—first stop, Grantham.

"I followed him in another cab. At King's Cross, just outside the station, I was joined by a smart, gentlemanly young fellow who was awaiting me there. But I myself had meantime become a lady. I had changed my male attire for female clothes that I had within my portmanteau, and a long gentleman's ulster down to the very heels served well to conceal the disguise.

"We watched the royal courier take his place in a first-class compartment all to himself, as is the rule on such occasions. We also took first-class tickets, but did not offer to get into the train until almost the last minute ere it set off. We knew what would inevitably happen if we did, so it was only when the whistle went that, with a sudden movement, as if afraid of being left behind at last, my companion hurried me, the lady, forward and opened the door of this carriage as if by mere chance. We had hardly got in ere the train was off.

"I remember the look of annoyance on the face of the passenger whom we had disturbed by our unceremonious entrance. But at length he seemed more at ease as he heard my companion address me as 'Baroness,' and after a time he even spoke a word or two here and there on topical subjects.

"This suited our purposes to a nicety. But one thing that he had suited us more. He put his pocket handkerchief down by his side on the seat. I saw my companion look at my sharply, unnoticed by the courier whose dispatch box was close by his side. A little farther on I called the attention of my vis-a-vis friend to some distant object in a field and got him to lean over and look at it as I wanted his opinion of what it really was.

"Like a flash, while he was doing this, my companion had dropped upon the handkerchief several drops of a liquid whose name I had perhaps better keep to myself, as its chemical preparation is one of the few secrets I ever found out. It has no smell; it is almost invisible in color, but it acts at once and most effectively, for its influence will often last a couple of hours.

"The courier took up his handkerchief in a minute or so, and, as we anticipated blew his nose vigorously. He had hardly done so before he seemed somnolent, yet quite naturally, as it appeared to us who were with him. Within five minutes he was as unconscious as you need wish any one to be.

"We quickly seized the dispatch box, opened it with keys that every private detective knows full well, and then took out the document we wanted. My companion made a full copy of it, accurately and quickly. The work was all done within fifteen minutes from its commencement, and our fellow traveler woke up naturally and gradually long ere we had got to Grantham.

"He glanced round in some confusion, but saw his box exactly as he had left it—his belongings apparently untouched. We watched his fingers carelessly—as he tried to make it appear—feel the lock of the box. It was secure, and a satisfied smile passed over his face. He apologized for having fallen asleep and hoped he had not troubled us.

"We assured him that he had not, and we had a pleasant talk till we steamed into Grantham station. Then by companion gallantly handed me out and we bade the courier good night with some warmth, which he reciprocated. We had a good supper, changed our clothes again in a private hotel so that I became the real gentleman and my companion the lady, separated to go to the station once more, and as utter strangers managed to catch the train just after midnight to King's Cross, arriving before 3 a. m. Then I took a cab to the office here, my comrade going home. That is all."

"Except that a vacant column had been kept waiting till 3 a. m. ready for you, according to wire from Grantham," put in Newby.

"Just so," added the detective laconically.

Gregson looked first at one, then at the other. His smile came again as he held out his hand to Newby.

"Done!" he exclaimed.—George A. Wade, in the Tatler.

MORE ROOM NEEDED.

School for Deaf at Trenton Crowded to Capacity.

Trenton, Nov. 18.—Two committees of the State Board of Education, those on the School for the Deaf and appropriations and apportionments, met at the School for the Deaf, Hamilton and Chestnut avenue, yesterday. The chief business taken up was the necessity for increasing the accommodations at the school.

Professor John P. Walker, principal, presented this matter to the committee on the school. He stated that more applications for admittance had already been received than the school could accommodate, and additional room would have to be provided in the near future if the institution was to meet the needs of the State. The committee took the matter under advisement, but no decision was rendered. The other business transacted was of a routine nature.

Following the meetings, Professor Walker entertained those present at luncheon at the school. The guests were Dr. James M. Green, principal of the State schools; J. Brognard Betts, assistant State superintendent of public instruction, who acts as secretary of the committee; Silas R. Morse, Atlantic City; Ulamer Allen, Jersey City; Charles S. Surdam, Morristown; James B Woodward, Bordentown; W. Edwin Florence, New Brunswick ,and Mr. Sloan, Newark.

THE POWER OF STEAM.

Many May See But It Takes Genius to Realize.

When James Watt saw the steam causing the kettle lid to jump up and down he said "There must be power in that steam that it can lift such a weight."

There was.

Millions prior to him had seen the same phenomenon and regarded it as an unexplained mystery.

Recent scientific research has put its finger on the "cause" of Dandruff, Falling Hair, and consequent Baldness, and has unearthed a tiny germ which eats the life from the roots of human hair.

Newbro's Herpicide destroys this germ and consequently restores the hair to its natural state.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," Etc.

Copyright, 1902, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

These were details which Ladue could not reveal at the time. He had revived sufficiently to recognize Benton and to speak feebly a few moments; but that very night, in the fog and darkness, was begun the building of the bridges, the crossing of the left grand division, and Fred could only leave his poor friend with the surgeons and hasten back to his duty. Four days later, when he would have ridden to the hospital camp in search of him, it was too late. Urgent orders had come from Stanton himself, the great and growing war secretary, to send the prisoner patient thither as soon as he could be moved. Jennings had already gone under strong guard, and all Benton could learn at the moment was that there had been a break from prison camp; that, aided by residents of Baltimore and of Charles county, some confederate officers had escaped to the Potomac; and, while some of the party had succeeded in crossing, one boat had been fired on and swamped. Two of the officers had been captured, one being poor Paul, who had been nearly drowned, and was found in a fisherman's hut not far from Matthias Point. Two of the party were still at large. Arrests of suspected civilians had been made, both in Washington and Baltimore, and certain secret service officials had been summarily discharged by order of the secretary, as being unworthy to hold positions of such trust and responsibility.

"Stanton is a terror," said Fred's informant, a staff officer just from Washington. "God help the man that has to bump up against Stanton just now!"

It was now some 36 hours after Fred's serious difference with his division commander. He had sent an urgent appeal to his old general to be set free from further contact with these things he almost loathed. He looked for answer within the week, and, taking advantage of the permission, coldly accorded him by the chief of staff, to be absent over night, he had gone, heavy-hearted, to his old friends of the Iron Brigade, and sought at their hands the sympathy and consolation to be expected of men who had themselves felt that the official atmosphere was frigid where once it had been so fair. And it was here, on Thursday morning, while breakfasting with the genial commander of the Black Hats and listening to his philosophic advice to "take things coolly" and that "all would come right," he was surprised by the coming of a cavalry orderly, splashed with mud, who bore a missive addressed by the adjutant-general of the division and marked "Immediate." With a word of apology to Col. Fairchild and his officers, Benton tore it open, and two papers fell out. One read:

"Capt. Benton: Enclosed just received. The general says you better come this way where the necessary orders will meet you, and you can get what luggage you need. There will be steamers going all the evening.

"(Signed) BREWSTER, A. A. G."

The second was a telegram to the commanding general, —th division, —th corps, and bore the singular resemblance to one received on almost the same ground some seven months previous:

"Secretary of War desires to see Capt. Benton of your staff at once. Take first boat. Intermediate commanders notified. No delay.

"Well, well," said the colonel, "they have been prompt! You can get to Acquia by noon, can't you?"

"Not if he goes back by way of Old Scoffer's," remarked a field officer, thoughtfully. "Fred, don't you imagine the chief wants to smooth things a bit before you tell Stanton all about it?"

"Don't go back, Benton. Just let him sweat. It'll make him more civil another time," began an impetuous comrade, but stopped short at sight of the cloud in Benton's eyes, the anxious look in the colonel's fine, clearcut, soldierly face. It was the latter who spoke again, and without interruption, for already he had won the faith of even such martial iconoclasts as the Black Hats. "This means something more than a mere difference due to ill temper," said he. "You are wanted for a purpose, Benton. It is—about Ladue, do you think?"

Fred had already risen. "I shouldn't be surprised," he answered, thinking uncontrollably of the words of his Washington informant, "God help the man that has to bump up against Stanton just now!"

Yet he rode back to headquarters and, surely enough, found his chief there, chafing and suspicious. "What's Stanton want of you?" he blurted out. "You haven't—You didn't—make a row about what I said Monday night, did you? We were all cross-grained then, and I didn't happen to think you had to look me up and so—got lost."

"I have certainly written to a friend at Washington asking for other duty, sir," said Benton firmly, though his anger had vanished and given place to sadness and anxiety. "I did not get lost, however. I obeyed orders, and under similar circumstances should do so again."

"I've told you I didn't understand the matter at the time or I shouldn't have said, perhaps, what I did," broke in Old Scoffer, both hurt and troubled. "If you're going to start in on your army career with the idea that you're never going to get hauled over the coals, you've mistaken your profession." Scoffer knew he had been in the wrong. He wanted to undo the wrong. He simply didn't know how, and Benton wouldn't help him. And so they parted enemies, if anything, and, preceded by the story of Old Scoffer's vehement assertion, enlarged, of course, in transit, that he "had more friends in the south than in the army," Benton reported the following day at the war department, and was shown into the presence of the angering secretary.

It was a dull December morning. It followed close on the heels of dire disaster; and, with the stories rushing in upon him of contention, disloyalty, and disruption at the front, the Iron Secretary was stung and goaded by the evidences of triumphant plot and treason all about him and among the cities safeguarded at the rear. Two prominent households within easy rifle-shot of his desk were now shown to have been in constant correspondence with leaders of the rebel cause at Richmond. The heart of the secretary was hot within him and hardened against this young staff officer of a fighting corps, who, ushered into the severe and repellent presence, stood silently at guard.

For a moment each studied the other, and the menace in Stanton's frown roused the spirit of fight in Benton's not too pacific temperament. "What business has a man to look at me as though he thought I ought to be hanged, no matter if he is war secretary?" was the question uppermost in the Badger's mind. His father, the squire, had once trounced a brother-in-law for less. The bump of insubordination was rising even before the secretary's first question.

"How came you so late, sir?"

And the bump was in his throat, as, flushing to the brows, the Badger answered:

"Possibly because I was kept waiting an hour outside, sir."

Stanton's veins seemed to swell to thrice their natural size, and his strong face, fringed by the iron-gray beard, turned almost purple.

"You will be wise to keep your temper, young sir, if you wish to keep your commission. You owe your escape from rebel hands, I am told, to certain members of Dr. Chilton's family, of Charlottesville."

No answer.

"It is so, is it not?"

"One member only, sir."

"Lieut. Ladue was your intimate friend at home, I believe." Stanton was tapping the desk with a long ruler—an ominous sign, said they who knew him.

"He was, sir."

"Was it to square accounts with the Chiltons you sought to shield him?"

"I have had to shield him in no way, sir. He had been brought here before I could see him again."

Stanton actually smiled, but the smile was grim as any scowl.

"Then it was by helping young Chilton, was it?" And the professional cross-examiner tapped more swiftly on the table, and his eyes fairly blazed through the spectacles.

Benton was boiling over now.

"I never heard until an hour ago that he had got away, sir." I'm g——"

"Glad, I dare say," said the secretary, with sarcastic force. "We heard as much of you—and more." Then, sudden as a steel trap, "What did you do with the papers you received from Ladue?"

This time there was no mistaking Benton's start of amaze. He was kneeling by poor Paul's side in the hospital tent, when with feeble, nerveless hand the boy had passed a little packet to him and faintly whispered his request.

"What did you do with them?" demanded Stanton, and now the officers standing at the side of the room seemed to hold their breath.

"Nothing, as yet," was the unlooked for reply.

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

GOOD RECIPES.

Indian Curry.

Take one onion, one ounce of butter, six or eight sweet almonds, two eggs, one slice of bread, half a pound of cooked meat, one tablespoonful of curry powder. Slice the onion, fry it a nice brown in butter. Put the slice of bread in milk, and grate the almonds into it. Beat the eggs in half a cup of milk, and mix all together with the meat minced fine, and a small lump of butter and the curry powder. Grease a pie-dish well, and rub it with a little lemon juice. Put in the mixture, and bake in a slow oven. When done turn out and pour some good gravy round, and serve with boiled rice. This is an excellent dish and one highly to be recommended for a cold winter's day.

Steak and Macaroni.

Take one pound of good tender steak, one egg, a little finely chopped parsley, some fine bread crumbs, pepper and salt. Cut the steak into neat fingers or about three inches long and one inch broad, beat the egg on a plate and mix with it the parsley, pepper and salt enough to season the steak. Roll the steak in this, then in the bread crumbs, and put the crumbs in smoothly. Have sufficient fat in a pan to cover the steak, when it is smoking hot put in a few pieces of steak and fry till brown, then fry the remainder. It is best just to put a few pieces of steak into the fat at a time, so as not to cool it too much. Dish in the centre of a big plate with a border of savory macaroni round.

Mince Pudding.

Half pound of cold meat (any kind) finely minced, two ounces bread crumbs, pepper and salt to taste, two ounces of cooked rice or macaroni cut small, beat up an egg, and add with a teacupful of stock. Thicken with half ounce of flour, and flavor with minced herbs if liked. Line a thickly buttered basin with bread crumbs, fill with mince, and strew over more bread crumbs. Bake for an hour, or steam if liked better. Turn out and serve with good gravy.

Cream Pie.

To make the crust of this confection, take three eggs, one cupful of sugar, one cupful of flour, one-third of a teaspoonful of soda, and one teaspoonful of cream tartar. Beat the whites and yolks well separately; stir all together quickly as possible, and bake in two pans (if rather small—if large use only one) the batter three-quarters of an inch thick. For the cream, take two and a half cupfuls of sweet milk, four even tablespoonsfuls of sugar, two tablespoonsfuls of flour and one egg. Boil this a few moments until it has thickened, and flavor with vanilla or lemon. When the crust is cold, split it and put the custard between. This cake is much improved with a boiled icing.

Oyster Rarebit.

Clean and remove the hard muscle from half a pint of oysters, scald them in their own liquor until their gills curl. Then turn into a hot bowl. Put a tablespoonful of butter and a half a pound of cheese broken into small bits into a dish with a saltspoonful each of salt and mustard and a few grains of cayenne. While the butter melts, beat two eggs slightly and add them to the oyster liquor. Mix this gradually into the melted cheese, add the oysters and at once turn over hot toast.

COLOR LINE DRAWN.

Action Raises a Howl of Protest in East Orange.

The attempt of the East Orange Board of Education to segregate negro children who attend the public schools has caused much trouble in that city. A number of colored parents called yesterday at the Ashland School and took their children out of the school.

According to James N. Vandervall, who had children in the ungraded class, thirty-two children were taken, leaving only eight. There is reason to believe that the remaining eight will not attend school today. A similar class has been formed in the Eastern School, but there are only about a dozen in it.

The matter will be discussed at a mass meeting tonight in the Mount Olive Baptist church, on Ashland avenue. Protest will be made against this race discrimination and demand made that the children be taken back into the regular classes. If the Board of Education refuses to accede to these demands an appeal will be made to the courts to enjoin the Board from continuing the ungraded classes.

MRS. FISK'S ESTATE GOES TO CHILDREN

FORMER MAYOR CHARLES J. FISK ONE OF THE BENEFICIARIES.

Trenton, Nov. 18.—An account of the will of Mrs. Harvey Fisk was filed yesterday in the office of the surrogate of Mercer county, and passed as correct by Judge John Relstab. The cash of the estate is placed at $606,000, and besides this there is real estate valued at about $300,000.

The estate is devised to the sons and daughters, among whom is former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, president of the Board of Health and Plainfield's first citizen.

This is the second largest estate recorded in Mercer county in twenty years. The largest was that of Samuel K. Wilson, amounting to $2,000,000.

Mrs. Harvey Fisk lived at Wilburtha, a magnificent estate near Trenton. She was a philanthropic woman.

STRICKEN BLIND ON STREET.

Woman Who Acted Part of Sightless Woman Saturday Sightless Now.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 18.—Mrs. Elizabeth Conger Heaton, a niece of former Minister to China Edwin H. Conger, played the part of blind Bertha last Saturday night in a dramatization of Dickens' "Cricket on the Hearth," presented by a Unitarian society club. Yesterday while walking the streets her sight vanished and she was obliged to call for help and be taken home.

Physicians say the retina of each eye has been divided, and that there is but a remote possibility of saving one eye. Mrs. Heaton is twenty-three years old and is the wife of a dentist.

Mrs. Rogers to Hang.

Rutland, Vt., Nov. 18.—Deputy Sheriff L. D. Hazen, of South Royalton, has received official notice from Governor Bell to prepare at once for the execution of Mrs. Mary Rogers on December 8, and work will begin at once erecting at Windsor prison the gallows which have twice been erected in sight of the woman's cell, only to be taken down as reprieves gave a lease of life. Governor Bell's order to Deputy Hazen is taken by some to mean that the State officials have little hope of the United States Supreme Court alllowing the petition for a writ of habeas corpus, for which Mrs. Rogers is now before it.

Reed Bondsmen May Contest.

Rahway, Nov. 18.—The bondsmen of Charles E. Reed, former tax receiver for Rahway, have been notified that they must make good the alleged deficiency in the receiver's books. No formal steps have been taken by the bondsmen thus far. Some of them claim that no absolute proof has been brought yet that there is an actual deficit, and intimations are made that they will contest the right to force a payment unless another investigation is made of the accounts with Mr. Reed present to see and explain whatever might be misunderstood. Mr. Reed is assisting the present tax receiver, John Bernhard, and many things are being cleared up. Suit can be brought against the bondsmen at any time for the full amount, whenever the city attorney sees best or when ordered to do so by the finance committee of the City Council.

P. H. S. DEFEATS LEAL'S

First Time in Ten Years That This Has Been Accomplished.

SCORE WAS 11 TO 0

Game on the Hope Common Gridiron Witnessed by a Large Crowd —The Opposing Lineups.

For the first time in ten years the Plainfield High School won the city championship in football by defeating Leal's School eleven yesterday afternoon on Hope Common by a score of 11 to 0. The victory not only means much to the P. H. S., but it marks the close of the most successful season in its history, completing the same without a defeat. The only team to cross its goal line was that of the Rutgers Prep. School.

As in the first game between these teams a large crowd of the fair sex and school boys turned out and the cheering corps of both sides urged their teams on to victory by their enthusiastic support.

Leal's won the toss and Freeman, of P. H. S. started the game by kicking to Howard, of Leal's. The latter ran the ball back nicely for ten yards. After three attempts against the P. H. S. line Leal's was forced to kick and their ends were down on the ball fast and fell on the pigskin after a fumble by P. H. S. Finding it impossible to gain through the P. H. S. line, Glenney, of Leal's, dropped back for a drop kick, but the attempt was blocked, a High School player falling on it.

P. H. S. then started in to rush the ball, and by steady mass and trick plays they carried the ball to Leal's five yard line. Here on a play through tackle Douglass was pushed through for a touchdown. Flanders missed a difficult goal.

Glenney than kicked to P. H. S., Douglass receiving the ball and running it back for twenty yards. Time was called with the ball in P. H. S.'s possession on Leal's forty yard line, the score being P. H. S., 5; Leal's, 0.

After five minutes' intermission, Glenney kicked off to Freeman, who ran the ball back for fifteen yards. By steady rushes the ball was carried to Leal's forty yard line, mass plays figuring prominently. Then Mahaffey on a thirty yard double pass carried the ball to the five yard line, where Rittenhouse was shoved over the line on a cross tackle play. Douglass kicked a neat goal.

P. H. S. then kicked off to Leal's. The private school boys braced here and showed good playing around the ends, Browne making the longest run for thirty yards before he was brought down by Rittenhouse on a beautiful tackle, when the latter player was the only one between the runner and a touchdown. Time was called with the ball in possession of P. H. S. on Leal's thirty yard line. Final score, P. H. S., 11; Leal's, 0.

During the first half the best playing for P. H. S. was done by Freeman, Douglass and Loizeaux, while Rittenhouse, Mahaffey and Lyness excelled in the second period of play. For Leal's the best playing was done by Howard, Dallas and Browne. Leal's showed much improvement as a whole upon their last game with P. H. S., since their line was strengthened considerably by the reappearance of tackles Brokaw and Guttierriez. The summary follows:

P. H. S.	Leal's.
Leggett	Haughey, Rhodes center.
Gideon Fountain	Eoff right guard.
Todd	Brokaw right tackle.
Loizeaux	Alpaugh, Rushmore right end.
Rittenhouse
Flanders, H. Freeman	Howard quarterback.
Lyness	Glenney right half.
S. Freeman	Dallas fullback.

Umpire — Phillips. Referee — Leary, of Leal's. Timers—Devinger and Reed. Linesmen—Robins and Painter. Time of halves—15 minutes. Touchdowns—Douglass and Rittenhouse. Goals from touchdowns—Douglass. Score—First half—P. H. S., 5; Leal's 0; second half, P. H. S., 6; Leal's, 0. Final score—P. H. S., 11; Leal's, 0.

A QUESTION OF SPEED.

Freeholder Doubts Car Was Running Legally When Jolted.

New Brunswick, Nov. 18.—The question of whether the auto was running at a rate of speed above the legal limit was raised by the Middlesex County Board of Freeholders yesterday, when a communication was read from Willard P. Voorhees, counsel for Charles Gillbard, of Keyport, who stated that his client had been injured while traveling between Keyport and Old Bridge in his auto on October 27. The accident happened at a line bridge between Middlesex and Monmouth counties. Gillbard claims his auto struck a plank, which was two inches higher than the rest of the bridge, was thrown from its course and collided with a telegraph pole, smashing the machine and hurting him.

Freeholder Fountain said that hundreds of autos had crossed the bridge without accident, and he intimated that Gillbard was going too fact to be cautious. The plank, he said, had been nailed on the bridge by a Monmouth freeholder. The matter was referred to the solicitor, with instructions to communicate with the Monmouth County board, as claims for damages may have been filed with that board.

Inspecting Jersey Prisons.

Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, of the State Charities Aid Society, is this week finishing, with several other members of the organization, the annual inspection of the different prisons in this State. The inspection was begun about two weeks ago, and all the institutions in Essex, Mercer, Morris, Union and Monmouth counties have been visited. Particular attention has been paid to the environment of boys in the different prisons and wherever they have been found confined in the company of prisoners of mature years steps were taken for their immediate removal to a separte department. The tour of the State is made in an automobile and will be finished by today.

York and Adams to Return.

York and Adams, the widely known Hebrew impersonators, surrounded by a big company of singers, dancers and comedians, delighted a big audience at the New Plainfield theatre last night. They had with them many old time Plainfield favorites including Eddie Barto and Mamie Lafferty and all were accorded an enthusiastic reception. The show took so well, Manager Counihan arranged for a return date and it will again apear here the latter part of December.

J. R. Blair, the Park avenue men's furnisher, is detained at home with an attack of tonsilitis.

Charles W. Eoff and son, Charles W. Eoff, Jr., of Crescent avenue, are witnessing the football game at New Haven today between Princeton and Yale.

AFTER PRIVATE BANKS.

Co-operate With Italy In Stamping Out Swindlers.

Trenton, Nov. 18.—Many prominent Italians have appealed to Governor Stokes and Commissioner David O. Watkins, of the Department of Banking and Insurance, to assist in the passage of more stringent laws to regulate private banking concerns among the foreign population of the State. The Italian government, because of the wholesale manner in which Italians were being robbed, passed a law to regulate the transmission of moneys, and has instructed the execution of the law to the Bank of Naples, under government control.

Cesare Consiglio has come here from Italy to solicit the co-operation of the American States. With Professor Alexander Oldrini, of the Corbin Banking Company, and Cesare Conti, the Italian banker of New York and Philadelphia, Mr. Consiglio presented the matter to Commissioner Watkins and Gov. Stokes. As a result of their visit the Legislature will be urged to pass a law supplementing the Private Bankers' act of 1895, under which all private banking institutions are subject to the supervision of the department.

HE PICKED UP $10,000

Conductor Buckley's Honesty is Rewarded by a Grateful Passenger.

MILLIONAIRE, OWNER

F. C. Pardee Dropped Packet of Wealth in Pullman Car and Scotch Plains Man Turned It Over to Company.

If "findings" were really and truly "keepings," and not a schoolboy idea of the ownership of lost property, James H. Buckley, former delivery clerk at the local freight-house, would have riches enough to retire from the world's busy humdrum and live comfortably for many years.

Mr. Buckley is now a Pullman conductor, and going through his car after discharging passengers at Jersey City Friday afternoon, picked up a bulky looking package that had fallen from a seat to the floor. It was loosely held together, and as he took it in his hands a rubber band slipped off, revealing a bundle of bank notes and securities that dazzled his eyes. Hastily wrapping the wealth he carried it to the company's office and reported the find. Sometime afterward F. C. Pardee, the millionaire iron man and mill owner, reached the place and asked if $10,000 and two tickets to Europe had been found in the Pullman car that he had ridden in from Philadelphia to Jersey City. The package brought in by Mr. Buckley was hurriedly counted and the bills and securities reached just that amount. Mr. Pardee proved otherwise that the package belonged to him and it was handed over.

He asked that the finder be brought to him, and when he was introduced the Plainfielder was presented with a substantial reward and warmly thanked. The Pullman company also remembered him in a substantial way. Mr. Pardee also remarked "that it was very careless on his part" and that he would "really have to try and not be so forgetful."

REV. ROBERSON AT Y. M. C. A.

Bound Brook Man Addresses Men's Meeting.

Rev. E. E. Roberson, of Bound Brook, conducted the first of a series of special meetings for men only, at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon. The attendance was good. Miss Myra Emmons presided at the piano and William C. Leek led the singing. A feature of the service was hand-bell selections by George E. Garretson, formerly of Somerville.

Mr. Roberson's remarks were introductory to the series of services to follow on succeeding Sunday afternoons. His subject was "What is the Soul?" He referred to the philosophical and theological theories advanced and said that in his opinion the study of psychology was the only means of defining the human soul, its origin, functions and mortality or immortality.

Next Sunday Mr. Roberson will still further explain his subject, and on the following Sunday he will treat with an entirely new subject.

FESTIVAL GUN LED TO PANIC AT WEDDING

SIGORSKI'S REVOLVER AND HIS IGNORANCE OF PROPRIETIES MADE TROUBLE

In an innocent attempt to lend a proper air of festivity to the occasion, Joseph Sigorski, a Pole, started a panic at the wedding of a fellow-countryman in Exchange alley yesterday afternoon. Joseph landed in the station house, but explanations secured his honorable discharge this morning.

Joseph was an honored and popular guest at the wedding, and a leader in the merrymaking. Because he was earnestly in the spirit of the occasion, Joseph drew a .32 calibre revolver just as the bride and groom closed in their first nuptial embrace and emptied it out of the window. This is the proper thing at weddings in Poland, and the Poles in the house beamed on Joseph. But there were others among the guests who had had no Slav training and they didn't beam. They thought Joseph was running amuck and yelled for help. The shots and the yells upset the neighborhood and stories of riot and bloodshed grew so fast and thick that police headquarters was thrown into excitement when the alarm reached there.

The patrol wagon was rushed to the scene and Cop Kelly plunged into the center of the excitement. Joseph, wide-eyed with amazement and earnestly seeking explanations, was pointed out as the author of the trouble. Kelly bundled Joseph and his gun into the hurry-up wagon and took him to the station house. Joseph couldn't understand it. Why a festal salute should awaken panic and why a happy and harmless wedding guest should be pinched for manifesting his joy he couldn't make out.

Joseph was still perplexed and much aggrieved when arraigned before Judge Runyon this morning. Explanations were made to the judge, and he forgave Joseph for his breach of the law. He tried to explain things to the disheveled wedding guest, but Joseph doesn't know much English and the explanation didn't explain. Joseph left the court still looking amazed and aggrieved.

JOHN MURDOCH'S FUNERAL.

Attended by Large Gathering of Masonic Brethren and Others.

Before a gathering of over a hundred members of the local Masonic fraternity and the Masons' Union, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, conducted funeral services yesterday afternoon over the body of John Murdoch, the young Scot who died suddenly Thursday night. They were held in George Cole's undertaking parlors, and the gathering was one of the largest ever in the place. Both organizations contributed floral emblems.

Interment was made in the Masonic plot in the North Plainfield cemetery, where the Masonic service was conducted by Worshipful Master William N. Runyon, of Anchor Lodge. Murdoch's father is a senior deacon in his home lodge at Scotland. The pall bearers were W. W. Warnock, Charles Zimmer and Theodore Randall, from the Masonic lodges, and Jacob Higgins, John Mitchell and George Summers, from the Masons' Union.

Mr. Willis placed at the disposal of his guests one of the best guides and hunters in seven states, Adam Smith by name, the result being that shooting coats were filled every night with rabbits, partridges, woodcock and squirrels. Those who enjoyed Mr. and Mrs. Willis' hospitality were Dr. D. C. Adams, R. F. R. Huntsman, Dr. C. R. Thiers, Ralph Willis and J. F. Huntsman, Jr. In three days' shooting nearly fifty head of game of various kinds were secured by the Plainfield sportsmen. One of the party got the best part of a raccoon, but he is not saying much about it.

SERMON BY DR. SLICER

Eminent Unitarian Divine Preaches From All Souls' Church Pulpit.

FUNDAMENTAL WORDS

"God" and "Soul" the Basis of All Religion—The Doctrine of Diabolism Freefully Denied.

Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, of New York, occupied the pulpit of All Souls' Unitarian church last night. Dr. Slicer's standing in the world of theological thought and his rank as a pulpit orator attracted a congregation that filled the pews.

The sermon was a scholarly one, delivered with force and eloquence of unusual degree. It produced a very marked impression.

Dr. Slicer's theme was the certainty of the existence of God and the soul. That neither God nor the soul could be accurately defined or absolutely proved was not, he held, a great stumbling block to the acceptance of their existense. All the things that were greatest in human life, he said, were realized without being explained. Many knew, for instance, that such and such a natural law was operative, but why it was operative he did now know, perhaps would never know.

God and soul, Dr. Slicer said, were the two fundamental words of religion. They were the two piers that rested on the opposite sides of the chasm that theologians were eternally trying to bridge. Doctrines were merely the cables thrown out by theologians in the hope that on them might rest the bridge across which the soul might go to God and God might come to the soul. Doctrine was nothing more than the explanation of faith; it was no more faith itself than the explanation of a thing was that thing.

Dr. Slicer denied that sin had any source outside of the soul itself. The doctrine that included a devil, he declared, had no foundation in any word or teaching of Christ. Sin was real—it was something undoubted in the experience of men—but it was not part of the administration of God. It was a part of the history of man. It was simply man's exercise of free-will—"his assertion," said Dr. Sliver, "of his right to disobey."

Dr. Slicer's abhorrence of the doctrine of the devil and his fatherhood of sin was expressed with much force.

"Do you know," he said in concluding his denial of Satan's existence, "I once heard a man who denied that there was a devil called an athiest. Think of that!—an athiest! Well, there may be those who can accept the existence of a devil; my belief does not run that way."

POLICE COURT JUSTICE.

Forgiveness for Some Erring Ones, the Axe for Others.

Six victims of the week-end sousing were brought before Judge Runyon in the city court this morning. Some of them had to pay to get away.

Bartholomew Taylor, William Sheller and John Tomoso, all charged with plain drunkenness, didn't. Thomas Stout, Royal Peterson and Arthur Chandler had frills on their jags and paid for them. It cost Stout, who had a revolver in his pocket, $3 to get away. Peterson was not nice in his bearing when Cop Martin nabbed him, and paid $5 to get loose. Chandler was poorer by the same sum when he left.

John Harrison was expected in court, but he didn't appear. Officer Vanderweg caught Harrison, it is alleged, taking a bottle of beer from one of the Eastern Bottling Company's wagons on Grant avenue Saturday night. Harrison will be arrested on sight.

Dangerous Wood Fire.

The deep woods in and about Berkeley avenue and Ravine road caught fire yesterday and before noticed by nearby residents had gained great headway and were raging over a mile in area. The fire department was summoned, and Chief Doane and No. 2 hose wagon responded, taking a lot of brooms with them. They were unable to lay in hose because of the distance from hydrants, and the firemen spent an hour beating the flames out. It was one of the worst wood fires the local department has had to contend with this season.

New Engine to Be Tested.

The new combination chemical engine recently received by the borough fire department will be given a thorough test this afternoon in charge of an expert from the La France Company, of Elmira, N. Y. Members of the Common Council will be in attendance and they will pass upon it at the next meeting of that body.

HORSE THIEF MARRED JAHN'S SUNDAY VISIT

HIRED RIG IN WHICH HE DROVE TO BERNARDSVILLE STOLEN.

Philip Jahn, of Scotch Plains, well known in this city as the head of the tinning firm of Robert Jahn's Sons, was the victim of horse thieves in Bernardsville last night.

Jahn drove a rig hired of the Central livery stable to Bernardsville early yesterday afternoon. He spent the rest of the afternoon and evening at the home of a friend, leaving the horse tied outside. At midnight, when he looked for the rig, it had disappeared. He had a faint hope that the missing horse broke loose and wandered back home, but there was no trace of it along the road or at the stable.

The police here were notified by Jahn at 4:30 a. m., and Sergeant Frederickson telephoned a description of the rig to the police of Summit, East Orange and Newark, to where it was thought the thieves might go.

COUNCIL TONIGHT.

City Fathers Have Sereval Matters of Importance to Consider.

An adjourned meeting of the Common Council will be held tonight, when the members will undoubtedly pass the police bills for October which it is claimed by some have been paid. The bills have never been presented to the Common Council in the customary way and the members refused to pass them at the regular meeting when the former police commission presented the bill in a bulk. In order to make the matter legal, the bills will be presented in the usual way, approved and ordered paid.

It is intimated that Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh will also have another communication for the Common Council along police department lines, and while it is not definitely stated, Mr. Tyler, chairman of the police committee, may take some action relative to the investigation into police department matters.

It is known that the police committee or Common Council does not propose to allow the investigation to hang fire too long, that it is their intention to take it up in a legal and business-like manner at the earliest date. If Charles A. Reed, counsel for Chief Kiely, seeks to restrain Messrs. Bullock and Tyler from sitting with the Common Council at the hearings, it may tend to delay the investigation, but it is said that it is not the object or purpose of the members to hold it up any longer than is possible.

MRS. HENRY KAUFMAN DEAD.

Mother of William T. Kaufman Passes Away in New York.

Mrs. Maria Kaufman, aged seventy-three years, mother of William T. Kaufman, of this city, and widow of the late Rev. Henry Kaufman, for many years a well known minister of the Presbyterian church, died at her home in New York on Friday from pneumonia.

Mrs. Kaufman was a resident of this city for a number of years, her home being on Arlington avenue, where W. C. Kinney now resides. During the past few years she lived in New York with her daughters, the Misses Kate and Louise Kaufman.

The funeral services were held in New York yesterday, and other services will be held today in the Presbyterian church at Matawan, where Mr. Kaufman was a pastor. The interment will be at Matawan.

Where Is the Woodpile?

William Jaeger, driver of the chemical engine, is not happy. Jaeger cut down the ancient apple tree back of fire headquarters last week and sawed it up into firewood, the which he piled with exceeding neatness in fire headquarters' yard. Last night the pile reared its majestic height in the dim moonlight; this morning the bright sunlight disclosed a yawning void where the pile once reared. Nobody knows where the wood went. It made a big pile and whoever took it needed a wagon. Jaeger regards the disappearance as a personal loss, because he did all the work on the tree. And his mates aggravate William by laughing at him.

St. John a Good Preacher.

Continuing his series of special discourses on prominent men of the Bible, Rev. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, spoke last night on John the Baptist. Mr. Herring, in referring to the efforts made in the present day to have the finest churches and the most elaborate music to attract people to church, said that John the Baptist addressed an audience of 3,000 people, without the aid of music, or even an edifice.

Mrs. Alexander Grant, of West Front street, is detained at home by illness.

LONG PLACED ON TRIAL

Murderer's Fight For Life Began In Trenton This Morning.

KIELY IS A WITNESS

Police Chief and Two of His Subordinates Have Important Testimony to Offer—In Court Today.

Charles Long, the negro murderer captured by Chief Kiely, Detective McCarthy and Patrolman Higgins in New Market last August, after a two weeks' chase through Dismal Swamp and the surrounding country, was put on trial for his life in Trenton this morning.

The trial is before Judge Reed, of the Supreme Court, and Judge Relstab, of the Court of Common Pleas of Mercer county. The jury was drawn at 11:20 o'clock, and the prosecution opened its case a few minutes later.

Chief Kiely and the two officers who assisted him in making the capture are among the witnesses called for this morning. Their testimony is of the highest importance. To Chief Kiely Long made a full confession of his guilt, and the detective and the patrolman have evidence of corroborative character that will figure prominently in the case for the prosecution.

The progress of the case will be watched with interest in this city on account of the close connection of the local officers with it. In New Market and the rest of Piscataway the interest in the trial is very high, because Long worked there for years and is as well known in the township as any of the old residents. To the Piscatawayites Long is not a desperate murderer, but an unfortunate black man. He was always liked in the township, and the general impression there is that he must have been violently aggravated to take Matthew Cunningham's life. Expressions of sympathy with him are heard, and many of his farmer friends have a sneaking hope that he will escape the full penalty of his crime.

Piscataway has another interest in the case aside from its knowledge of and friendliness toward Long. The reward for his capture, amounting to $500, is in dispute before the Court of Chancery between Franklin Van Nuis, of New Market, the farmer with whom Long last worked, and the Plainfield officers who placed him under arrest. Van Nuis claims that he apprehended Long and simply held him for the Plainfield police as the representative of the Mercer county authorities. Long was undoubtedly taken on the Van Nuis farm, but Chief Kiely contends that he was under no restraint when he and his officers surrounded him, and the only actual capturing in the case was accomplished by him and his men. Both parties to the chancery action will fight it out stubbornly. The Trenton officers don't expect either side to get much. They are a cynical set and look to see the lawyers get most of the $500.

There will be a sale of useful articles, candy, cake, pies, preserves, silhouettes, fortune telling, and the popular grab bag. In addition there will be a children's entertainment at 4:30 o'clock, which is sure to delight all the little ones as well as the grown-ups. The proceeds from the affair will go toward the pledge for the support of the city nurse.

The Rasores Club will meet tomorrow morning with Mrs. W. S. Hubbell, of 945 Central avenue.

VENERABLE WOMAN SUCCUMBS TO PARALYSIS

MRS. MARY L. FORCE, MOTHER OF A. L. FORCE, DEAD AT NINETY YEARS.

Peacefully, and evidently without suffering pain, Mrs. Mary Laing Force, mother of A. L. Force, editor and proprietor of The Daily Press, passed away yesterday afternoon at 5:15 o'clock at her home, 203 Watchung avenue. She was nearly ninety-one years of age. Ten days ago she was stricken with paralysis, and it was realized then that owing to her advanced age the end was but a matter of a short time.

Mrs. Force was born February 1, 1815, on her father's farm, on what is now known as Woodland avenue, just east of Hillside cemetery, the property now being owned by the heirs of her deceased brother, Isaac W. Laing. Her early life was spent on the farm, where she was born. She lived in Plainfield all her life.

Mrs. Force was a member of the Hicksite Society of Friends since childhood and regularly attended meetings in the Watchung avenue meeting-house, until infirmities of age prevented. Her father, James Laing, for many years and until his death, was a preacher in the Watchung avenue meeting-house and was well known by members of that society at the beginning af the last century. Two children, Mrs. L. K. Prescott, of Brooklyn, and A. L. Force, of Duer street, the borough, the oldest and youngest members of a large family, survive her.

Her two children and her daughters-in-law were at her bedside when the end came as was also her faithful nurse, Mrs. A. E. Lorton.

The funeral services will be held from the late home, Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The interment will be in the North Plainfield cemetery.

R. M. STELLE BURIED.

Funeral Services Conducted by Dr. Chambliss.

The funeral services of Randolph M. Stelle were held at the late home on Central avenue Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, of which Mr Stelle was a member, conducted the services. There was a large attendance of friends and neighbors, most of whom had known Mr. Stelle for many years.

Dr. Chambliss read a Scripture selection and made a few remarks. The service closed with a fervent prayer. The interment was in the Baptist cemetery in Plainfield avenue, and the pall bearers were L. W. Randolph, Charles C. Burnet, Peter B. Hodge, T. S. Armstrong, James E. Martine and Prof. Thomas B. Stillman, the last named a former resident here, but now of Stevens Institute, Hoboken.

PARTHIANS' FIVE TONIGHT.

New York Team to Line Up Against Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. first basketball team has showed improvement in team work since their last game and are expected to give their opponents, the strong Parthians team from New York, a hard game at the local gymnasium tonight. For the preliminary game the Plainfield High School will play the Y. M. C. A. second team. The line-up:

P. H. S.		Y. M. C. A. II.
Doane	right forward.	Shepard
Freeman	left forward.	Sebring
Collier	centre.	Utzinger
Smith	right guard.	Collingworth

A bar bell drill will be presented by the Y. M. C. A. boys' class.

The Judge's Opera.

Those who have had the pleasure of listening to City Judge Runyon's thunderous solos at the social gatherings he attends will recognize some familiar lyrics if they attend the production of that classic of comic operas, "Robin Hood," at the New Plainfield theatre tonight. The Robin Hood songs and choruses are favorites of the Judge, and he has, so to say, sung them all around town. The lyrics are worthy of being favorites in any repertoire. De Koven will never compose any better; which is saying much. The production tonight will be brillinatly mounted, and the cast will leave nothing to be desired.

Benefit for Frank Haurand.

A benefit entertainment for Frank Haurand, who recently passed through a severe illness, will be given in Saengerbund Hall tonight. The best of local talent has volunteered for the programme.

Mrs. Roy Bolles and daughter Martha, of Naugatuck, Conn., are visiting her sister, Mrs. Corra Ryno, of Codington avenue.

GET MUCH WANTED THIEF

Crooked Alleged to Have Burglarized J. W. Jackson's House Captured.

MAKES CONFESSION

Alfred P. Smalley, of Clayton, N. J., In Jail—Supposed Respectable Man—Only Twenty-eight and Married.

Alfred Porch Smalley, a well-known young man of Clayton, N. J., is detained at the county jail, Elizabeth, with several charges of burglary against him. One of these is that committed at the home of James W. Jackson, of Crescent avenue, early in the fall, while the family was away. At that time $300 worth of silverware was taken, most of which has been recovered through the efforts of Chief Tenney, of Elizabeth, and Chief Kiely, of this city.

Smalley has confessed to five burglaries, including the one at Mr. Jackson's home. The other thefts acknowledged are at the homes of the following persons:

Edward D. Moore, Clayton; Dr. Dunahue, Bayonne; William Olmstead and A. F. Young, Elizabeth.

It was early in October that the homes of Mr. Olmstead and Mr. Young were robbed at Elizabeth, and a policeman nearly captured Smalley as he was leaving Young's home. Just as the officer was about to catch the burglar, the latter threw away his booty and made his escape. The officer had a good description of Smalley and through good detective work, he was traced to Milton, Pa., where he was arrested. Extradition papers were obtained and Smalley was taken to Elizabeth a week ago.

Since that time most of the stolen goods were recovered, Smalley telling the authorities of the disposition he made of them. In a few instances he melted down silverware and this cannot be secured.

After Smalley was taken to Elizabeth, Eugene Moore, of Clayton, whose home was robbed, identified Smalley. They were former schoolmates and good friends. Smalley was also a member of the Masonic lodge at Clayton and generally well-liked. He comes from a good family and is a gentlemanly looking fellow.

Smalley will be held at Elizabeth until he is arraigned for a hearing. The usual procedure of the law will then follow. He is only twenty-eight years old and he has a wife and two children living at Clayton. He was employed as a general salesman by Swift & Co., in Philadelphia, at a salary of $50 a week. Recently he had trouble with his employers and secured another position as salesman for a typewriter company.

When arrested the young man had in his possession a complete outfit of burglar tools. It is claimed that Smalley has been a burglar during the past six years, robbing houses at night and leading the life of a respectable business man during the day.

FAIR NETS OVER $1,600.

St. Joseph's Parish Undertaking a Success.

With a larger crowd in attendance than at any time during the week, the fair conducted by St. Joseph's parish in Sanegerbund Hall closed Saturday night. It was one of the most successful undertakings the parish has ever conducted and the net receipts will be about $1,650. It will be applied to the fund started for the erection of a new church building on Jackson avenue, the construction of which is to be started late next year.

No special organization had charge Saturday night and the crowd busied itself in buying up what remained on the various booths. Every attraction was liberally patronized and by midnight but little of anything remained. All the winners in the various contests were announced during the intermissions in dancing, and some handsome prizes were awarded.

Though the entire parish worked hard for the success of the fair, much credit is due the general committee which arranged and looked after the arduous details. It was composed of H. P. Greenwood, chairman; G. P. Kiely, secretary, and Arthur A. Cannon, treasurer.

Delightful Dance at Park Club.

The informal Saturday night dance at the Park Club was attended by over two hundred guests and proved to be a delightful affair. This was the first of a series of Saturday night dances to be held at stated periods during the winter and was greatly enjoyed. The music was furnished by an out-of-town orchestra and was very satisfactory.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY

Three farmers' institutes are to be held in this county this winter, two of them in Piscataway. The first will be at Stelton on December 4, the next at Jamesburg on January 20, and the third at New Market on February 5. The programmes to be given at all of the institutes will be somewhat similar, but of sufficient variety to attract people from all parts of the county to each institute. The programme announced for the Stelton Institute on Monday, December 4, by Franklin Dye, the secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, under whose auspices these institutes are given, is as follows: 10:30 a. m. sharp—Remarks and prayers by Rev. W. T. Dorward, pastor; "Means to Agricultural Betterment," Franklin Dye, secretary. 11:15 a. m.—"Enemies to Fruit Production and How to Overcome Them," Edward Van Alstyne. 2:00 p. m.—"Some Lessons From Our Experience in Dairying at the College Farm," George A. Billings, superintendent. Discussion by Mr. Van Alstyne. 3:00 p. m.—"Soil Humus a Necessity—Its Nature and Functions," Prof. J. G. Lipman. 3:45 p. m.—"The Pig, a Valuable Partner on the Farm—a Short Talk on Pork Production," Mr. Van Alstyne. 7:30 p. m.—Music by choir. "Why Present Conditions Necessitate a Knowledge of Foods' Dietetic Value," Mrs. Sarah Walrath Lyons, M. D. 8:30 p. m.—"Suggestions on the Renewal of the Peach Industry in Middlesex County," Prof. G. F. Warren. The evening lectures will both be fully illustrated with stereopticon views.

John Cathcart, who formerly lived on North avenue, was arraigned before Recorder Kuhn, of New Brunswick, Friday evening, charged by Overseer of the Poor Shultise with not supporting his family. The man's wife, who lives at the corner of Townsend street and Remsen avenue, New Brunswick, claims that he has not properly supported her and their six children, and she applied to the Overseer of the Poor for relief. When Cathcart was arraigned Friday night he promised to provide for his wife and made an agreement to pay her $7 every two weeks. He gave a bond to carry out this promise. Neilson T. Parker, for whom he has worked for two years as coachman, became his surety.

County Detective Totten, of Somerset county, and Railroad Detectives Gaffney and Holly, have recovered a large amount of the merchandise and clothing alleged to have been stolen from freight trains by the gang that was captured at Lincoln on Wednesday morning. The goods were found in the woods here. It was learned on Saturday that the man who gave his name as Thompson is Charles Rose, a notorious character of Elizabeth. He is wanted by the authorities of Union and Middlesex counties in connection with crimes committed in these counties last year.

The Board of Education is considering ways and means to keep the cigarette habit from getting a foothold among local schoolboys. Supt. Meseroll has two chronic cases of cigarette smoking under observation, and is working to free the boys from the habit.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The Harper Hollingsworth & Darby Fur Mill closed Saturday afternoon, after a business existence of forty years. The men were notified several weeks ago that the present firm would retire and the mill shut down indefinitely during the week ending November 18. The firm has been doing a good business and it is hardly likely that the mill will remain idle long, as it is reported that several people interested in the fur industry have been in town and looked over the plant with an idea of either buying the property or leasing it.

Charles H. French, assessor of Fanwood township, was thrown from one of the P. S. C. cars Saturday night about 11:30, as the car was turning the sharp curve beyond Galvin's Park. Mr. French had been standing on the rear platform when the motorman came to the curve. It is said he reduced speed but very little. The car was brought to a stop and the injured man taken on to Westfield. His injuries consist of a broken wrist and two fingers, as well as a number of bruises.

The song service held last night at the Baptist church was enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience. The choir, under the leadership of L. D. H. Gilmour, rendered several anthems besides the regular music. Rev. T. Moore-Smith gave a short but interesting address upon the history and origin of the old hymn, "Rock of Ages."

The Junior League of the Methodist church met for reorganization yesterday afternoon in the church. The meeting was well attended and the organization promises to again become one of the flourishing societies of the church.

The result of the Princeton-Yale football game at New Haven Saturday afternoon, was watched with interest by many from here, whose sympathies were with the orange and black.

DR. SAMUEL M'BRIDE ON HOME MISSION WORK

SHOWS THE NEED FOR GOSPEL SPREADING AMONG FOREIGNERS.

Rev. Dr. Samuel McBride, secretary of the Baptist Home Missionary Society, occupied the pulpit of the First Baptist church, yesterday morning. His discourse was intensely interesting tending to show the great needs for home mission effort.

He presented a somewhat new view of the work, showing that while it is right and proper to send missionaries to foreign countries, great good can be accomplished by working among the foreigners who come here every week. He argued that incalculable good would result if these foreigners could be converted so that when they return to their homes they can carry the Gospel to their people.

He cited an instance to show that certain things happening in this country, would not be allowed anywhere else on earth. In this particular case, a Protestant missionary was asked to speak recently in a Roman Catholic church in Scranton, Pa., and in that church he preached from the Word of God. He referred to another incident in a Massachusetts town where a congregation of French Canadian Catholics was converted through the conversion of one of their number.

Dr. McBride's work is chiefly in New York, yet he keeps in touch with conditions throughout the country. In speaking of affairs in New York he said that there never was a time when there were so few people attending church as today, and the pastors in New York and Brooklyn are greatly disturbed in consequence.

The Young Women's Missionary Society will meet at the First Baptist church Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, to complete arrangements for the illustrated lecture to be given at the church on Thursday night, December 7, by Charles W. McCutchen.

The official church business meeting of the First Baptist church will be held Wednesday night. It is expected that eight or ten new members will be received by letters from sister churches at the next communion service. The ordinance of baptism will be administered at the church Sunday morning.

Plainfield, N. J., November 20, 1905.

And the bulldog walloped the tiger. Bad year for tigers, anyway, judging by the district attorneyship fight in New York.

New Jersey's corporation mill ground out twenty-seven charters last week, representing an aggregate capitalization of over five millions. If put under pressure, what a flood the combined stock would cause.

The West Jersey Press says that the next Legislature will differ from its predecessors in that it will be industrious; amenable to public sentiment and not slight important matters. This same guess is made about every incoming Legislature, and the only noteworthy thing about it is that it never comes true.

"It is to be hoped," says the Philadelphia Record, "that an end will be put to Congressional seed sowing before the close of the next session." It certanly is. The evil is but one of the many forms of graft exercised by Congressmen, who do little but pave the way for re-election. Putting the Government to the expense of $5,000 in publishing copies of a bill, that will never become a law, for free circulation among an absentee Congressman's constituents is another form of the abuse of officeholding in the Federal Government.

Plans of the legislative commission to revise the judiciary of the State include the abolition of all courts except the justices', the district and the supreme. In place of the present system, which is both antiquated and cumbersome, one is devised which will be simple and at the same time the best guarantee that the trial of all causes will be expedited. It is proposed to have a Supreme Court consisting of a chief justice and eighteen associates. They will be appointed by the Governor by and with the consent of the Senate and will be divided into three divisions. The first division, made up of five of the total number, will consitute the Court of Errors and Appeals, a court of last resort. These judges, during the time they are in office, will sit only in that court, and the Legislature will have the power to increase their number to seven. The Appellate division will have the same jurisdiction now exercised by the present Court of Errors and Appeals. The second division will consist of seven judges and will be known as the law division. That division will have the jurisdiction now exercised by the Supreme Court. The third division will be known as the Chancery Court and will consist of the remaining seven judges. It will be vested with the powers now given the Court of Chancery. There will also be a county court in every county excepting those of the first class, which will have two. Their jurisdiction will be the same as that now exercised by the Orphans' Court, the Common Pleas, the Oyer and Terminer and the County Circuit Court. The judges are to be appointed by the Governor by and with the consent of the Senate. The plan provides for an absolutely independent Court of Errors and Appeals, which can sit so long as the business requires, whereby delay in the final decision of cases will be available. The judge appointed under the system will be prohibited from practicing law in any of the courts of this State. At present six of the judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals, and the judges of the county courts may and do practice law in the courts. The proposed system preserves both the law and equity jurisdiction to be exercised separately as it is now exercised, with the well understood procedure now used in the law courts and in the Chancery Court. There is no substantial change either in practice or procedure. The entire system promises to work a great improvement.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Smalley, Sr., Celebrate 60th Anniversary.

Though no formal celebration was held, the home of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Smalley, Sr., of Craig place, was thronged, yesterday, with relatives and friends who came to offer congratulations on the observance of the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding. In addition there were many telegram and telephone messages from far and near. The guests who called included friends from Newark, Elizabeth, Cranford, Westfield and Liberty Corner.

Both celebrants received many bouquets and baskets of fruit and none in the gathering were more happier than they. They received every caller themselves and last night were but little fatigued. Mr. Smalley was the centre of a group all day and while in a reminiscent mood mentioned the fact frequently that the weather the day he and Mrs. Smalley were married was just as beautiful as it was yesterday and also on their fiftieth anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Smalley will again receive guests today because of many being unable to call yesterday.

Is Your Bedding in Healthy Condition?

If not, see our mattress man and have him renovate and make over your old hair mattress, so that it will look like new. Many think it all right to have their mattresses cleaned at home, because they feel sure they'll get back their own hair. But a mattress cannot be made healthy by simply picking the hair apart and allowing the dust and dirt to remain. By our improved sanitary method it comes in contact with heavy blowers that force out every particle of dust and dirt.

ALIS III PLAYS A TIE AGAIN WITH WESTFIELD

THEIR SECOND GAME WITHOUT A DECISION IN THREE WEEKS.

Alis III. football team and the Westfield A. A. fought stubbornly but futilely for supremacy on Hope Common Saturday afternoon. Neither side scored. There weeks before Alis played this same team in Westfield, but, as was the case on Saturday, the game resulted in a tie, the score being 5 to 5.

On the whole Alis played a better game than Westfield. Though playing against a heavier team, Alis' work, both on the offensive and defensive, deserves special praise. Alis lost her best opportunity to score when a fumble late in the second half lost her the ball ten yards from their opponents' goal line. Alis soon regained it and a drop kick was tried. The ball sailed a foot below the crossbar, and time was called less than a minute later.

Ralph Taylor at fullback played a star game for Alis. In plunging and line ploughing his work was a feature. Joe Miller played a snappy game at left end.

The Alis lineup was as follows: J. Mannin, right end; Eckert, right tackle; H. Douglass, right guard; Bogart, center; T. Miller, left guard; Bentley, left tackle; J. Miller, left end; P. Phillips, quarterback; Mundy, left halfback; R. Taylor, fullback; Weir, right halfback. Time of halves twenty minutes.

If arrangements can be made these two teams will play a third game on Thanksgiving Day morning.

AMUSEMENTS

The attractions at the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night will be Chas. Barrell's sensational melodrama of London life in four acts, entitled "When London Sleeps," under the management of the Jas. H. Wallick Amusement Co. The play beyond a doubt is one of the best offerings of the season and has been highly commended by press and public wherever it has been produced.

"When the World Sleeps," the offering at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, is spoken of as one of the real successes of the current season and comes here with the hightest endorsement from capable judges in other cities. The play is said to contain all the sensational qualities necessary for success. The story is one of genuine heart interest and the sensational scenes and climaxes come well under the ban of things reasonable, and while it is spoken of as a magnificent production, it does not depend alone upon this for its accredited success.

In the famous comic opera success "Robin Hood," which with a grand singing organization of 50 people will appear at the New Plainfield theatre tonight under the direction of The Aborn Production Co., the following well known artists widely known in the operatic field as vocalists and comedians will appear: Harold Blake, Vivia Brewster, F. Stanton Heck, Karl Stall, Ethel Houston Dufre, Edward Metcalfe, Campbell Donald, Agnes Stone and Meta Carson, supported by a chorus of beautiful girls and lusty men numbering fifty.

A topic that is much discussed just now is the forthcoming visit of Lyman H. Howe's marvelous Lifeorama. The new programme far eclipses all this great craftsman's previous efforts, and can be relied upon to bring pleasure to all. It is remarkable as much for its versatility of subject matter as for its quality. It is resplendent with scenes and incidents of intense interest gleaned from all lands and is the fruition of a life-time of study and a genius of incessant work. It will be shown at the New Plainfield theatre Wednesday night.

An "Oratorio Evening."

Under the auspices of the Brotherhood of the First M. E. church an "oratorio evening" will be given at the First M. E. church Thursday night, by the combined choirs of the First M. E. church and the Presbyterian church, Westfield. Miss Bertha vanNuis Willis, Mrs. Stephen H. Tugwell, vocalists; Miss Florence Wohlfert, violinist; Miss Jessie Utter, organist, and Mrs. Harry N. Taylor, pianist, will assist.

It Pays to Advertise.

Omaha, Nov. 20.—A. J. Seaman, an eccentric bond buyer of Omaha, who lives on nine cents a day, is receiving hundreds of letters from women in all parts of the country who wish to marry him. Seaman's story was printed in the Sunday papers, and the letters proposing marriage came in hundreds. To those inclosing a stamp Seaman is answering on a postal card, making one cent on each applicant.

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

A Warning to Housewives.—A cook of thirty years' experience points out that such combinations as meat cooked in conjunction with flour (sausages and pork pies) are liable to turn sour in twenty-four hours, and this sourness, which can be detected both by taste and smell, indicates the presence of poison. This applies to soups, stews, gravies, etc., which have been thickened with flour, as well as to sausages and meat pies. If before the sourness supervenes such things are eaten hot or cold or made hot up to boiling point they are safe, but simply warming up hastens the generation of the poison.

A teaspoonful of borax will stiffen clothes and make them glossy

Pewter ware should be washed in hot water with fine silver sand and afterward polished with a leather.

If a cotton gown has become green with grass stains, pure alcohol rubbed into the stains will remove them.

Always make coffee with fresh water and use it as soon as it is made. The coffee pot should be kept scrupulously clean.

If the cellar is inclined to be damp boxes of lime placed in it will assist in bringing it to a more healthful condition, and pieces of charcoal will also aid in purifying it.

To remove mildew rub over the marks with a piece of raw tomato, sprinkle with salt and lay in the sun. Repeat the process if necessary two or three times.

A little pulverized chalk moistened with ammonia and applied with a brush will remove the mark caused by the dripping of a faucet in a marble basin. An old toothbrush is a good thing to use for this purpose

FOR THE NURSERY.

It would be worth while to be a child in these days. So many pleasant things are provided for them to grow up among. There is, for instance, that new slate wainscot for the nursery. Fancy being able to walk around the room and write and draw pictures all over the wall without being scolded. It is really a gigantic slate running all around the lower part of the room, and, topped off by a pretty border and paper, looks very well, besides being a scource of huge delight.

Then there is the new small nursery furniture—which children ought to have had long ago. The little chairs, tables and couches are strongly made, but of a size suitable for children's little legs and bodies, and calculated to inspire them with delight in furnishings of their "very own."

A Noah's ark frieze is also new. Noah and his strange procession of animals march around the top of the room to the huge joy of the little inhabitants.

The picture cretonne is nearly as nice. This means that Mother Goose personages prance all over the hangings and chair coverings in the room.

The liveliest posters, depicting little boys and girls in various occupations of the day, are gotten out to decorate the walls between frieze and slate wainscot.

A Darby and Joan rocker in mission style, with seats for two little tots, is cunning.

For the floor there are Angora rugs, the center all fluffy white, and the border of cloth decorated with little flannel animals.

There's a miniature bookcase, too. Not a toy, but a little one, from which a child would enjoy its own books.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

ROAD TO HEAVEN.

Senator Davis, of Minneapolis, used to tell this one concerning Bishop Whipple, the venerable "St. John of the Frontier," who served the people long and well, says the Los Angeles Times. In a passenger coach going into Dakota Territory the Bishop sat reading the morning newspapers, and in the second seat before him sat an infidel, who was loudly proclaiming his antipathy to the Bible and everything believed by religious people. He said that he would dare to meet any prophet, priest or Pope in discussion, and loudly proclaimed: "If I could meet old Bishop Whipple, I'd ask him at least one question he couldn't answer."

"I am old Bishop Whipple," said the venerable apostle to the Indians, as he dropped his newspaper; "ask me your question now."

The fellow was startled, but soon recovered and said: "Well, Bishop, as saving souls is in your line, I'd like to know if you can tell me the straight road to Heaven?"

"That is very easy indeed," responded the Bishop, with his saintly smile. "Turn to the right and go straightforward."

And there was no further discussion nor further questions propounded.

Congressman Fowler, of New York.

C. N. Fowler, Jr., son of Congressman Fowler, of New York city, and his friend, R. S. Gales, also of New York, have left by the Maritime express for Metapedia, from which point they go into the country about fifty miles to hunt moose. They expect to be away about ten days.—Montreal Star.

"Then you still have those papers?" and Stanton seemed rising from his chair.

"Yes, sir," and Benton seemed ready to spring to meet him, with fight in every line of his face.

"Here?" and Stanton had dropped the ruler and gripped the arm of his chair.

"Here," and Benton had the "touch-if-you-dare" look of a bull-dog watching a bone.

"You may deliver them to Maj. Thorpe," said Stanton, as though the matter were settled, and the major accordingly, but uncertainly, advanced a step or two. He was fifty years of age, and Benton was barely half his years, but the elder little liked the look of the younger's eyes.

"I may not, Mr. Secretary," and despite his wrath, something almost like a smile of amusement played about the corners of Benton's firm set line, "these letters concern only two people besides myself, Ladue and—my sister. You may have my resignation this minute, but not her letters."

CHAPTER XXII.

"CAPT. BENTON, YOU'RE A COWARD!"

"A spy in camp," was what the brigade said, when it heard the story that came from Washington, and "hopping mad" was the brigade. Its fur had been rubbed the wrong way by the little flings of rivals, prompted by the pitiable envy that seems inseparable from any profession whose reward is mainly reputation. Its sense of subordination, too, had been tried by tales of sneering remarks made by Gen. This or Col. That, and it firmly believed that much of Fred Benton's present trouble was due to the fact that he wouldn't stand hearing them abused, belittled, or maligned. In greatly exaggerated form, the rumor of his disagreements with his fellow staff officers and his "row with Old Scoffer" had gone the round of the regiments, to the end that Fred was now looked upon as a hero and a champion, even by the Black Hats, who rarely saw heroism in anybody, who scouted the idea of needing a champion and who pronounced one general of the Army of the Potomac, at least, a consummate ass. They were mad clear through when told he had declared Benton disloyal—"had more friends in the south than in the army." Only a few weeks previous they had been pulling Benton to pieces among themselves, because of his apparent neglect of them and preference for his new associates. Now they were all afire at the idea of any one abusing him, and there was wrath and wonder in camp when it was learned that by order of Stanton himself Fred Benton was held in close arrest, with the prospect, said rumor, of being sent to that so-called bastile of the war days—Fort Lafayette.

Oh, a beautiful case was this worked up against Capt. Fred Benton, A. D. C., if the rumors from the rear could be believed, and strange it was, indeed, that in the midst of all the wrath and despond in all ranks, there should appear at the camps of the Iron Brigade, shaking hands with brother officers and soldiers, that very able talker and genial fellow-citizen, Maj. McKinnon, and Mac had lots to tell. Growlers—and most men were growlers that woful Christmastide along the Stafford Heights—who asked him why he wasn't with his regiment, were told that he was still on court-martial duty, but court had adjourned over Christmas. Growlers at first only growled when McKinnon tentatively began to talk about Benton and Ladue, but later they listened—most men will—and when he returned three days later to his court at the capital and made report to certain confidential officers at the department, it must be admitted that, though he took back with him far less of compromising character concerning Benton than he expected and hoped, he left a lot behind him.

And all this time there lay at the old capitol prison, awaiting needed evidence to prove him a spy, a very luckless young soldier, Paul Ladue. All this time there fumed and chafed, confined in arrest to the limits of Greble Barracks and the adjoining square in which were the officers' quarters, Capt. Fred Benton, A. D. C., well-nigh forbidden to be seen by anybody save secret service specimens detailed for the purpose. All this time there was a man that could have thrown light on the situation, but most unaccountably had he disappeared. Jennings was again at large, and the department declared it knew not whither he had gone. He had been released, was the explanation—well—because it would appear that he had only done what humanity dictated—helped and nursed a half drowned, half fever-burned, half dying man.

Then the squire came out from the west, and that lusty patriot happened to be at odds with state officials over some regimental appointment. The great president was now confronted by new and direful problems—Burnside had demanded the dismissal of several of his generals or else his own. A new chief of the army had to be chosen at this crisis of its history. No wonder the mighty captain could not anchor his craft in the rush of the rapids, and lower a boat for the little boy's apple. No wonder he had no time to personally investigate the case of Benton's beloved son. "The new housekeeper," he said, "would quit without notice rather than submit to interference." With sorrowing, suffering, anxious heart he let Burnside go, and set Burnside's fiercest critic, himself to lose his head a few weeks later, in Burnside's place, and then the great, loyal, triple-tried army went in again, with overwhelming numbers, to round up that thin gray line along the southward heights. Again the fords were ribboned with the pale blue columns, as a dozen great divisions circled the confederate left. Again did Jackson dare to drop everything at the front, swing clear round the outermost line and come crushing in on an astonished and bewildered flank. "Never," say the confederates, and God knows they know, "did the Yanks fight harder than at Chancellorsville"—that is, those who fought at all, for only a fourth of their entire array got a chance, but again "Back to the fords!" was the order, and, cursing their luck and praying for a fair fight and no favor, back the fourth time went the army. Then came the summer, the race for the Potomac, and the rush at last to the high-water mark of rebellion on the shores of the Susquehanna.

But meantime there had been a scene or two at Washington, never mentioned in the chronicles of the day and in the midst of alarms and distractions such as Washington had never known before. Such matters as the public cowhiding of an army officer almost in front of the white house would be "scare-headed" from Maine to Manilla to-day, but the papers had no space for it then. Squire Benton had touched up McKinnon's new uniform to the tune of 30 lashes before the police could step in and spoil the sport, and only in a local journal and one or two in the far west was the affair referred to.

Paul Ladue, convalescent, had been twice subjected to rigid questioning with the hope of establishing the guilty connivance in his escape of a certain Baltimore household, as well as a certain union officer, and with the result of establishing nothing beyond the fact that even in his weakness he had more strength and "sand" than the prosecution. Then he was tendered release on parole, for long investigation had failed to unearth a thing to warrant detention as a spy.

A romantic turn in the tide of affairs had come when a certain senator called on the secretary and offered to show that the incriminating papers which Benton had refused to surrender and which Miss Benton now would be willing to show, if necessary to save the prisoner's life, were personal letters and nothing more. Stanton knew this, probably, as well as the senator, but was wroth that any one else should know it, and furious that an officer should dare refuse to surrender them, no matter what or whose they were. Then Ladue's Baltimore friends had sent word across the line that Ladue was to be tried as a spy and hanged whether convicted or not, and an Alabama brigade declared in reply that they would hang the first Yankee lieutenant they caught if a hair of Paul's head were injured.

FINAL PLAY FOR CUPS ON COUNTRY CLUB LINKS

ACTIVE SEASON ON COURSE TO CLOSE THANKSGIVING DAY.

The final play for the Thomas R. VanBoskerck consolation and club cups were the only events of special interest at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday. These contests were arranged by the Golf Committee for those who were not fortunate to secure high honors in the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup, and they have been very interesting.

Mr. VanBoskerck offered what was known as a consolation cup to be completed for by those who received three points for the season cup, and the club also offered a cup for those who failed to be included among those entitled to competition for the consolation trophy.

Henry D. Hibbard won the consolation cup, beating G. F. Earl, by 4 up and 3 to play. In the other competiton E. A. Cruikshank won the club cup after a spirited match with J. J. Blackmore, by 1 up. On the seventeenth hole both players were even up, but by clever work Mr. Cruikshank won out.

With the play on Thanksgiving day the active season at the club will terminate. On that day there will be a cross-country tournament for men and women. This will be the first competition of this kind ever held by the club and promises to be a great success. There will also be the final play for the Holiday cup, and a clock golf competition for women. The entries for the cross-country tournament and clock golf competition will close on Saturday and from present indications they will be large.

It has been arranged to keep the course open until January 1, if the weather permits. The social festivities at the clubhouse are over for the season, although the club will be kept open for the present. If those favoring Sunday golf win their point there will be play on that day until January 1. It is said that a large number of players will visit the course on Sunday, following the club meeting to be held Thursday night, when the advocates hope to carry the proposed amendment to the constitution by a majority ovte.

BIG MEETING OF RED MEN.

Will Be Held in Trenton in January.

The Improved Order of Red Men of the State will hold a monster mass meeting in Y. M. C. A. Hall, Trenton, on January 19. A delegation from every tribe in New Jersey will attend.

Invitations will be extended to Governor E. C. Stokes to welcome the members on behalf of the State and to Mayor Frederick W. Guichtel on behalf of the city. Several prominent speakers will make addresses.

The object of the gathering will be to discuss the objects of the order and to create an interest in the three tribes to be instituted in the canal zone of Panama.

John W. Cherry and Wilson Brookes, two of the great chiefs of the United States, will sail for Panama on January 20 to look after the institution of the tribes at that place. Charters have already been received for the proposed tribes. The Red Men will constitute the first secret organization in that country.

Mass meetings will also be held in Delaware and Pennsylvania.

Trenton was selected for the New Jersey meeting because of its central location and because of the number of good halls here for such a gathering.

At the close of the meeting the great chiefs of the State will give a banquet to the great chiefs of the United States.

CHARGES AGAINST KIELY TO BE FILED ON DEC. 4

Police Committee Chairman Notifies Common Council That He Will Be Prepared at Next Meeting

SUBPOENAES TO ISSUE

Resolution Passed Empowering President Daniel to Sign Summons—Five Days' Notice to be Given Chief.

Appropos the recent councilmanic events in reference to police department affairs, an despecially the alleged wrongdoings of Chief P. S. Kiely, Councilman W. S. Tyler, chairman of the police committee, stated at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last night that charges will be preferred against Chief Kiely on or before December 1.

Mr. Tyler then offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

"Resolved, That the writs of subpoena which by the statute in such case made and provided, the Common Council has power to issue to compel the attendance of witnesses in the matter of the charges against Patrick S. Kiely for alleged misconduct or disobedience of just rules and regulations established for the government of the police force or police department of the city, shall be issued by and on behalf of the Common Council in manner following, that is to say: Said writs of subpoena shall be signed and sealed by the president of the Common Council and said president is hereby authorized to issue and sign and seal all such subpoenas as may be applied for by or on behalf of either party, which writs of subpoena shall be served in the same manner as subpoenas issued out of the courts for the trial of small causes."

Mr. Tyler stated that in announcing that charges would be preferred against Chief Kiely on or before December 1, the conclusion had been reached after a conference with Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh.

According to the instructions sent to the Common Council by Corporation Counsel Marsh, a copy of the charges must be presented to Chief Kiely at least five days before the date set for the trial. In view of the statement made by Mr. Tyler, a copy of the charges will probably be presented at the next regular meeting of the Common Council on Monday night, December 4.

It is believed that the trial of Chief Kiely will be held within a few days from that time, unless Charles A. Reed, counsel for Chief Kiely, is able to hold the matter up until next year, or succeeds in preventing Councilmen Tyler and Bullock from sitting at the trial.

It is evident that Messrs. Tyler and Bullock fully intend to exercise what they deem is their privileged right and will not step aside unless legally prevented from doing so.

COUNCIL HOLDS UP P. S. C. SWITCH PETITION

ON ADVICE OF F. E. KINSMAN PREVIOUS ACTION IS RECONSIDERED.

On a motion offered by Mr. Higham, chairman of the committee on public affairs, the vote adopting an ordinance on first and second readings giving the Public Service Corporation the right to lay additional tracks at certain switches in this city, was reconsidered at the Common Council meeting last night and was laid on the table.

This action was the result of a conference held between the members and F. E. Kinsman prior to the meeting. Mr. Kinsman, it is said, explained to the members the wisdom of holding this matter up until further investigation is made, and it was decided to adopt this course.

A similar request was made by the Public Service Corporation in Newark, it being the desire of the company to so construct certain switches and turnouts that single-end motor cars can be operated without the inconvenience of changing fenders and making unnecessary changes. In Newark, there is opposition to granting these concessions without some remuneration and now that the petition has been held up here, no doubt something in return for the privilege will be asked.

"THE HOMELESS 26" TO HOLD A REUNION

JOHN O'KEEFE FIRST PRESIDENT OF THE ORGANIZATION.

John Arthur O'Keefe, of this city, who is a traveling representative for a Newark firm, found himself, with twenty-five other commercial men, in the city of Pittsburg, Pa., last Thanksgiving Day, unable to reach home, and he suggested that they all dine together. The proposition was heartily agreed to, and the twenty-six commercial and business men ate their Thanksgiving dinner at the Colonial Hotel, in Pittsburg.

The goodfellowship shown among those present impressed the party of the benefit of an organization, so one was then formed and named "The Homeless Twenty-Six." John A. O'Keefe was chosen president.

The first annual meeting will be held next week in the same hotel. The organization now has a membership of over 2,000, the objects of which are to promote among commercial, business and professional men acquaintance, goodfellowship and mutual interest.

A funeral benefit of $250 is paid upon the death of a member, the sum being raised by a special assessment of twenty-six cents from each member. Any commercial, business or professional male between the ages of twenty-one and sixty, white, and of good moral character is eligible to membership. The entrance fee to the Supreme Circle is $1.26, and the dues $1.04 a year.

Got His Horse Back.

A man whose name is down on the books at police headquarters as John O'Kienuver—nobody there would guarantee that to be anything but a resemblance to the name—reported the disappearance of his horse from its stable at South Plainfield yesterday afternoon. A short time after the notice was received Doorman McCue learned that the missing horse had been picked up on Arlington avenue and stabled at No. 1058. Officer Kelly brought the horse to Cole's stable on Second street, and "O'Kienuver" was notified to get his property.

Justice Nash Settles Strife.

The contract case of D. W. Dearing & Co., of Newark, against J. Saunders, of this city, which was returnable in Justice Nash's court yesterday, was amicably settled by the justice before testimony was completed. The suit was brought to secure the balance due for lightning rods sold the defendant. V. W. Nash, Jr., represented the plaintiff, and W. S. Angleman the defendant.

FOR TOWNSHIP TROLLEY

Washingtonville Citizens Launch Movement For Somerset Street Extentions.

HOLD PUBLIC MEETING

General Sentiment Enthusiastic In Support of the Scheme—Wealthy Property Owners' Aid to be Enlisted.

Citizens of Washingtonville, including all those of prominence, met at Texier's Mill in the valley last night to discuss the proposed extension of the Somerset street trolley line through North Plainfield township. There were between thirty-five and forty men, some of them, like Dr. Richard Moldenke, large property owners.

Enthusiastic support of the proposal was expressed by all the speakers. The latter numbered fifteen or more. It was the concensus of opinion that Washingtonville was ripe for growth, and that all it needed was the stimulus of the trolley; that moreover, the trolley company would find it a very paying investment to send its Somerset street line through the village. Among those who spoke were Dr. Moldenke, Mr. Guion, Francis Boden, Edward Canning and Theodore Luersen.

The plan espoused by the Washingtonvillians involves the extension of the trolley to the far line of the township. There are three roads over which the proposed tracks could be run, and the citizens voted to allow the P. S. C. a free hand in making choice from among them.

Active steps for the furtherance of the scheme were decided upon. A committee of three, consisting of Dr. Richard Moldenke, Andrew Wilson and Hippolyte Texier, was appointed to bring the plan before the P. S. C. in the most favorable light. One of the first things the committee will do is see F. De L. Hyde, and seek to enlist his aid in the movement. Mr. Hyde has taken a great deal of interest in the advancement of the township since he settled on its borders, and it is believed that he will use whatever influence he has with the trolley people to bring the scheme to a successful issue.

Before going to Col. Hine, the man before whom all trolley schemes for the P. S. C. are passed in review, the committee will labor with James Y. Wilson, one of the largest property owners on the most favorable road, to induce him to consent to the passage of the cars by his quarry. Mr. Wilson has said that he will not consent to the improvement unless the road, at present thirty-five feet wide, is widened to sixty feet. The committee has hopes of putting the matter before Mr. Wilson in such a favorable light that his consent to the right of way will not be lacking if the company accepts the scheme.

What the P. S. C.'s attitude is the citizens do not know with any degree of certainty, but they have reason to believe that it is favorable. Col. Hine is one of the railroad men who believe in the power of the trolley to make business for itself, and he is very likely to recommend the extension to his superiors.

BENEFIT SUCCESSFUL.

Friends Tender Testimonial to Frank Haurand.

For the benefit of Frank Haurand, who recently recovered from a long illness with typhoid fever and who had much other sickness in his family, an entertainment and ball was given in Saengerbund Hall, last night. It was largely attended by residents of the city and borough and as a result about $125 was cleared.

The programme given comprised operatic selections by Paroubek's orchestra, including the "Anvil Chorus," "Moonlight Serenade," and excerpts from "Babes in Toyland," with descriptive effects; Prof. Chamberlain's moving pictures and acrobatic specialties by Charles F. Meyer, Sr., and Bertram Hansen. With its conclusion the floor was cleared and dancing was enjoyed until after midnight.

The committee which arranged and had charge of the affair was made up of Frank Jellig, chairman; William Claassen, Walter Koeppel, John Retzer and Lawrence Fahn.

Sues J. L. Darby Estate.

The contract case of David Dunn, of Scotch Plains, against Hannah E. Darby, executrix of the late John L. Darby, of Alton, will be tried before Justice Nash Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The plaintiff has instituted the suit for a claim of $61, which was filed with the executrix within the nine months provided by law, and which claim has been disputed by the estate. The plaintiff was ordered to bring suit. It is a claim for horse hire and carting wood during the life of John L. Darby. V. W. Nash, Jr., represents the plaintiff.

FALL MAY PROVE FATAL

Coachman Thrown From High Trap Receives Fractured Skull.

STILL UNCONSCIOUS

William McCann, Jr., in Critical Condition As Result of Mishap on Mountain Avenue.

While driving along Mountain avenue, near Netherwood Farms, late yesterday afternoon, William McCann, Jr., coachman for Pierre Malli, was thrown from a high trap and probably fatally injured. His skull was fractured. Before a physician arrived he lost a large amount of blood. The injured man has not regained consciousness since the accident.

Mr. McCann, who is the son of the caretaker at the Malli estate, was on his way home with a friend when the accident occurred. He was driving a spirited animal and in turning a corner the trap struck an embankment and upset. McCann fell backward and struck on his head on the hard macadam pavement. His companion was also thrown, but landed on his feet, and he quickly caught the horse before it had a chance to run away.

A telephone message from William Lindsay's dairy on Mountain avenue brought Dr. O. L. Jenkins to the scene of the accident. He found McCann in an unconscious condition and bleeding profusely from the nose and mouth. As speedily as possible a rig was secured at Mr. Lindsay's farm and the injured man was hurried to Muhlenberg Hospital. Dr. Fred Hughes, the family physician, is attending him.

Mr. McCann is about twenty-nine years old, married and has one child. His father has been employed on the Malli estate for a great many years, and the young man has been engaged as coachman for some time.

BOROUGH SCHOOL BOARD HOLDS SPECIAL MEETING

DISPOSES OF SEVERAL MATTERS OF MINOR IMPORTANCE.

The borough Board of Education held a special meeting, las night, for the purpose of disposing of several matters of business in connection with the building and grounds. It was voted to have all the flagging about the Somerset street school relayed at a cost of not more than $100 and the proper committee was instructed to take out an extra policy of $1,000 on the furniture in the same building.

It was reported that people had been making a practice of using the school walk to get either way from Somerset to Vine street and that it had been causing much trouble. The erection of an iron fence was suggested by action was deferred until the Board has fully investigated the matter. No report was received on the question of light in the clock tower and it continues to remain dark at night.

The building and grounds committee reported that the heating apparatus of the new structure does not work satisfactorily. The matter has been under consideration for some time and the Board voted to have the specifications carefully considered to see what could be done.

It was decided to purchase at a cost of $25, a duplicate of the State's mineral exhibit at the St. Louis exposition, offered the Board by the State geologist.

CELEBRANTS SURPRISED.

Neighbors Call Unexpectedly on Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Smalley, Sr.

As a close to their celebration of their sixtieth wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Smalley, Sr., of Craig place, were treated to a surprise by forty of their neighbors last night, who called in a body without sending previous notice. They took possession of the house and after presenting the celebrants with numerous floral offerings and extending congratulations, set about making merry. Mayor N. B. Smalley was present and aided the gathering in having a thoroughly enjoyable time.

All day yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Smalley continued to receive guests and bouquets of flowers. Among the latter were a beautiful bunch of chrysanthemums from Charles W. McCutchen and a score or more of American Beauties from W. G. Besler.

MR. WILSON SARCASTIC

Councilman Gloak Thrusts at His Chairman in Council Meeting.

GAVEL STOPS REPARTEE

Mr. Gloak Shows His Displeasure Plainly — Tilt Grows Out of Ordinance for More Macadamizing Work.

An ordinance providing for macadamizing work on Park Terrace, Berkeley avenue and Webster place was passed on its first and second readings at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last night. The passage of the ordinance was attended by a mild exchange of thrusts between Chairman Wilson of the street committee and Councilman Gloak, a committee member.

Mr. Gloak has been calling notice to the infrequency of committee meetings. After the ordinance had been read once, he asked whether it had ever been considered at a committee meeting.

Mr. Wilson replied that when the question of establishing the grades on the streets proposed to be macadamized was fixed and decided upon by the committee and the Common Council it was generally understood that these streets would be permanently improved.

Mr. Gloak said it had been so long since the street committee met that he couldn't remember what was decided upon. Mr. Wilson retorted ironically and Mr. Gloak answered in kind. Symptoms of enlivening repartee and airy persiflage were discernible when President Daniel's gavel brought back the humdrum of plain business. Mr. Gloak voted no to the motion for a public hearing on the ordinance, and showed his displeasure toward the methods of the chairman of the committee in doing it.

The ordinance referred to provides for the macadamizing of Park terrace, from Belvidere to Berkeley avenues; Berkeley avenue, from Park terrace to Leland avenue, and Webster place, from Putnam to Watchung avenues. For the payment of the work, two municipal bonds of $1,000 each are to be issued in the usual way, and they are to run for three years, with the privilege of redeeming them sooner if the Common Council desires to do so.

Upon the completion of the work the court is to be asked to appoint commissioners to assess benefits and damages. The streets are to be macadamized for a width of sixteen feet, and the work is to be equally as good as that on Madison avenue, between Fifth and Sixth streets, and is to be completed by May 15, 1906.

It is also provided that a public hearing is to be held on this matter in the Common Council rooms on Thursday night, December 21. It is the purpose of the committee to advertise for bids and to award the contract for the work to the lowest bidder.

PASS POLICE BILLS.

Common Council Approves of Deferred October Claims.

One of the chief reasons for holding an adjourned meeting of the Common Council last night was to pass upon the police bills, held up at the regular November meeting. At that time the bills were not presented in the customary way and the police committee objected to passing upon them in the aggregate as requested by the former police commission.

Upon a motion by Mr. Tyler the bills were presented, approved and Councilman Frank DeWitt Randolph, as a member of the auditing committee, reported them correct and moved that they be paid, which was so ordered.

Mr. Tolles offered a resolution that Collector Robert L. Lee be authorized to receive all assessments for macadamizing work until December 1, without interest, and after that to charge the usual interest. This is for work done since October 1 and approved by the Common Council. The resolution was adopted.

Golf Handicap Revision.

The handicap committee of the Metropolitan Golf Association has made two revisions of the general handicap list since its issue last May. The first revision was in July and the second in September. The September revision was for the use of clubs giving tournaments during the fall. It was used at the Metropolitan Golf Association open, at Fox Hills, and at the Nassau Country Club tournament two weeks later. It will be used also at the Lakewood event this week, the last of the season.

LONG IS ON THE STAND

Negro Charged With Murder Claims Shooting Was Accidental.

PROSECUTION CLOSES

Plainfield Cops on the Stand Yesterday—Case May Go to the Jury Tonight.

After presenting a very strong case the prosecution in the trial of Charles Long for the murder of Matthew Cunningham at Trenton last July, closed its side at noon today, having placed a large number of witnesses on the stand. The defense will be presented this afternoon, and there is a possibility that the matter might reach the jury before adjournment.

Before recess was taken this morning W. Holt Apgar, counsel for Long, outlined his defense. He claimed that the shooting was accidental, that Long in no way had planned it and that it occurred while the negro was temporarily insane with passion. Long, he said, had been living with a woman and that Cunningham had estranged her fro mhim, and that under the circumstances he was practically crazy with rage.

He laid stress on the fact that one of the State's witnesses yesterday declared positively that the gun went off almost as soon as Long took it in his hands and that it was not even braced against his shoulder, as a man would naturally do if he intended to shoot anything. There were other circumstances which bore him out in this contention, and he asked that the prisoner be acquitted.

Apgar's plea ended the morning session and one of the first witnesses called this afternoon was Long himself. The negro is bearing up well under the strain, though at times yesterday when damaging testimony was submitted, beads of perspiration gathered on his forehead, and he asked his counsel for a drink of whiskey.

Chief Kiely, Detective McCarthy and Patrolman Higgins, of the local police force, were on the stand yesterday and told of Long's capture on the Van Nuis farm at New Market. They were at court today and will be recalled to the stand this afternoon.

POLL TAX KICKERS SHOULD READ THIS

THAT DOLLAR MUST BE PAID, DESPITE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

Misunderstanding of the function of the poll tax by taxpayers is one of the mild botherations that are vexing Collector Robert Lee in gathering the municipal tithes for 1905. A good many men—intelligent men, some of them—have a standing grievance ag'in the gover'ment on account of the poll tax, and air their feelings when they come into the collector's office to pay it.

They want to know, in the first place, where any State or municipality got the right to make them pay for a vote. Others, who aren't citizens, want to know why they should be taxed for a vote when they haven't got a vote.

The explanation, which Collector Lee is tired of making, is that the dollar is not a vote tax, but a per capita tax. That it is called a "poll" tax simply because "poll" means "head," and that it what, in unfrilled language, it is—a head tax.

Because it is a head tax, and designed to spread the burden of taxation on a per capita basis, every man who acquires a residence here, or in any other municipality of the State, must pay that tax. Men who retain their residence in other States or other places may escape payment by proving that fact to Collector Lee. Unless you are prepared to prove that, you must pay the tax, and nothing in the Constitution of the United States nor the keen sense of injustice in your own breast can save you from liability.

Run Over by His Wagon.

George Keiderling, a driver for Boice, Runyon & Co., fell from his seat on a lumber wagon at Linden avenue and Somerset street yesterday and rolled beneath the wheels. The vehicle passed over him and he was left in a partially conscious state. Witnesses to the accident picked him up and sent him to his home on New street in a carriage. Though badly bruised and suffering from shock he was able to be out today.

New Building Under Way.

The work of building the foundation for Charles W. McCutchen's new business block in Park avenue was started yesterday morning by the contractors, B. F. Tallamy & Bro.

STEPHEN CAHOONE DEAD

Philanthropic Christian Worker Succumbs to Pneumonia After Week's Illness

FORMER STOCK BROKER

Spent Much of His Time and Money In Upbuilding of Y. M. C. A.—Leaves Two Sons, Five Daughters.

Stephen Cahoone, for thirty years one of Plainfield's foremost citizens, died this morning at his home in Watchung avenue. Pneumonia caused his death after one week's illness.

Mr. Cahoone was born in Brooklyn about sixty years ago, and moved to this city three decades ago. During the early part of his residence here, he lived on Watchung avenue, near the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, but a few years later he sold that property and built his present residence at 1126 Watchung avenue, near Kensington avenue, where he spent the remainder of his life and died. He was engaged in the stock brokerage business in New York until to a few years ago, when he sold his seat in the Stock Exchange.

It is probably in religious enterprises that Mr. Cahoone was best known here. He was an active and prominent member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. Early he became greatly interested in Christian work for boys and men and identified himself with the Young Men's Christian Associaion. He served in all departments of this work and was the association's honored president for seven years. His excellent judgment and wise counsel has been of incalculable value to the association and successfully solved many difficult problems which confronted the organization. He spent much of his time and means to make the association work a success and he will be greatly missed in this Christian field.

Mr. Cahone's wife died about six months ago. Like her husband she was greatly interested in Christian work, her efforts being spent in the advancement of the principles of the W. C. T. U.

His great interest in Y. M. C. A. work was shown forty years ago, when at Franklin, Pa., he organized an association in that town. Today it is a flourishing organization.

Mr. Cahoone is survived by five daughters and two sons. The daughters are the Misses May, Bessie, Florence and Fanny Cahoone, and Mrs. Robert H. McCready, and the sons, Walter E. and Roy Cahoone, all of this city.

Announcement of the funeral services will be made later.

WANTS $35,000 FOR LEG.

William Long's Suit Against Sanitary Company on Trial.

In the Circuit Court, Elizabeth, today the suit of William Long, of Elizabeth, against the American Sanitary Company, of the same city, was tried. Mr. Long, while in the employ of the company lost a leg, and instituted a suit for $35,000 against his employers. The case was given to the jury at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

In November, 1904, Long was assisting in rolling a piece of lead. The machinery got out of order and he was instructed to measure off two feet of the strip of lead. To do this he was obliged to stand on the long sheet while it was moving. While in the performance of his work an electric light overhead went out, leaving him in darkness. To save himself he stepped off the machinery into a gear, which resulted in the loss of the leg.

Bullet of Mercy.

A tiny black pup, thin, scrawny and half-blind from some eye disease, crawled shakily into the vestibule of police headquarters yesterday and snuffed whimperingly for something to comfort it. Cop Overbaugh saw the pup and gave it the only comfort the city allows homeless little dogs. It was such a little dog that the bullet made a hole in its head almost as big as its hungry little mouth.

Thanksgiving Basketball.

There will be a double basketball bill at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Thanksgiving afternoon. Four local teams will play, probably the first Y. M. C. A. team and P. H. S., and Leal's and the Business Men.

Pythian Knights to Feast.

Crescent Company, No. 13, U. R. K. of P., will meet in Unity Lodge rooms Thursday night to transact important business, after which they will adjourn to the Waldorf Hotel for the annual banquet.

NEW MILITIA BILL IS DRAFTED FOR CONGRESS

NEW JERSEY AUTHORITES HAVE ENDORSED PLANS OF ASSOCIATION.

Backed by the approval of the Interstate National Guard association a bill for increasing the efficiency of the militia of the country is to be introduced in Congress this winter. The co-operation of the military departments of the various states has been asked in the work of securing the passage of the bill.

The New Jersey military authorities have endorsed the plan and will ask the members of Congress from this State to vote for the bill. The proposed measure was drawn by Brigadier General James A. Drain, of Olympia, Washington, chairman of the executive committee of the Interstate National Guard association.

Section 1 provides that $1,000,000 be annually appropriated by Congress to provide arms, ordnance, quartermasters' stores and camp equipage for issue to the militia. At present $1,000,000 is appropriated annually for the same purpose.

The bill makes no provision for any change in the method of apportioning the appropriation among the states, and this is being criticised by friends of the national guard in this State. At present the government appropriation is apportioned to the states according to the number of their representatives in Congress, and no state is entitled to share in the apportionment unless the number of its organized and active uniformed militia shall be at least 100 men for each representative in Congress.

Those in this State who claim that the new bill should make a change in the method of apportionment base their claims on the contention that the money should be distributed according to the actual number of the active militia in each State. They compare New Jersey with North Carolina to show what they claim are the inequalities of the present system. Each of these states has 12 representatives in Congress, which gives each of them $23,937.24 of the $1,000,000 appropriation.

By putting with this a comparison of the national guard of the two states it is pointed out that the defects of the system are made very apparent. In its last report to the secretary of war New Jersey was shown to have a total membership in its national guard of 4,500 men. This State appropriates from its own treasury $150,000 annually for the support and maintenance of its guard, has $1,250,000 invested in regimental armories, and in many other respects is far ahead of North Carolina in its national guard department.

North Carolina, which gets as much from the government as this State, has a national guard membership of only 1,817, appropriates far less than this State from its own treasury, and it behind New Jersey in the matter of armories and other military appurtenances. A reference to the state of Texas also shows up what are claimed to be the inequalities. Texas, with 18 representatives in Congress, gets $35,905.86 from the national appropriation, though its national guard membership is but 3.087, or over $1,400 less than New Jersey.

Colonel C. E. Godfrey, of the adjutant general's office, is making a special study of this phase of the question and will take the matter up with the military authorities of other states.

One of the principal changes made by the proposed new bill is that the governmental appropriation shall be available for the actual excess of expenses of travel in making the inspections provided for over the allowances made for same by law; for the promotion of rifle practice, including the acquisition, construction, maintenance and equipment of shooting galleries and suitable target ranges; for the hiring of horses and draft animals for the use of mounted troops, batteries and wagons; for forage for the same and for such other incidental expenses in connection with encampments, manoeuvres and field instruction as the secretary of war may deem necessary.

Section 4 gives another important addition to the present law. It says: "That whenever any property furnish to any state or territory, or the District of Columbia, as hereinbefore provided, has been lost or destroyed, or has become unserviceable or unsuitable from use in service, or from any other cause, it shall be examined by a disinterested surveying officer of the organized militia, to be appointed by the governor of the state or territory, or the commanding general of the national guard of the District of Columbia, to whom the property has been issued, and his report shall be forwarded by said governor or commanding general direct to the secretary of war, and if it shall appear to the secretary of war from the record of survey that the property has been lost or destroyed through unavoidable causes, he is hereby authorized to relieve the state from further accountability therefor; if it shall appear that the loss or destruction of property was due to carelessness or neglect or that its loss could have been avoided by the exercise of reasonable care, the money value thereof shall be charged against the allotment to the states under section 1661 of the revised statutes as amended. If the articles so surveyed are found to be unserviceable or unsuitable, the secretary of war shall direct what disposition, by sale or otherwise, shall be made of them, except unserviceable clothing, which shall be destroyed, and if sold the proceeds of such sale shall be covered into the treasury of the United States."

FARMERS WANT CONVICT LABOR ON THE ROADS

A RESOLUTION ADVOCATING PRISON HELP WILL BE DEBATED TODAY.

The National Grange Patrons of Husbandry held memorial services Saturday afternoon at Atlantic City, which were attended by 2,000 grangers and their wives. Chief Granger Aaron Jones presided.

Among the resolutions to come up for debate today is one by F. A. Detrick, of Ohio, which suggests the employment of convict labor on highways. This resolution is liable to cause considerable discussion, as it is held that it will come in conflict with labor unions. The resolution says in part:

"The farm-help question can be relieved to an important degree by the employment of convict labor on the highways. Some States are doing this and figures show that the cost is about 33½ cents per man. This hire would allay serious friction between authorities and labor unions. Defalcations, embezzlement, land betrayals, etc., would be less if such punishment followed in their wake, and if the guilty knew they would have to pound stones, shovel gravel and dig ditches, instead of holding kid-glove sinecures in flower-bedecked offices with no environment indicating prison."

AMUSEMENTS.

George Klimt has apparently found a gold nugget in the play field. His new comedy-melodrama, "Big Hearted Jim," which is to be here Thanksgiving afternoon and night, is winning high praise for its strength, true mixture of good comedy and romance and its remarkable life like types.

A survey of forthcoming attractions reveals much that has especial interest. There are many in view. But the engagement at the New Plainfield theatre on Wednesday night of Lyman H. Howe's marvelous pictures, by common acceptance America's greatest exhibition, attaches to itself the largest importance in the minds of most persons to whom the name of Lyman H. Howe is synonymous for a programme that at once combines the mirth of comedy with the culture of world-travel. It is one of that class of attractions which one attends always with that sure sense of knowing that every feature promised and every claim made will be "made good"—and more. Mr. Howe has impressed this fact on hundreds of thousands during the past ten years by his unrivalled exhibitions.

"When London Sleeps," presented by the Jas. H. Wallick Amusement Company, will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night. It is a thrilling sensational melodrama and is a "continuous performance" of new and startling situations. The story is intensely interesting and is cleverly interpreted by a strong company of players of acknowledged merit. It is consistent, coherent, and well connected and the stage settings are of the finest. The mechanical effects are all up-to-date and are startling. Do not miss seeing the heroine walk the telephone wire at the end of the third act. The feat is plausible as she was a tight rope walker in a circus. See the play and see how she accomplishes it.

"When the World Sleeps," which will hold the attention of the patrons at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night and comes here with the unstinted praise of the critics from other points will no doubt, meet with favor here. The story is written on somewhat new lines. It has, for its hero, a young man who, upon finding the dead body of his brother and his sweetheart standing by, believes he to be guilty of the crime, but his great love for the girl prompts him to take upon himself the terrible charge and thereby save his sweetheart from eternal disgrace. Around this unusual chain of circumstances there runs a story of exciting and thoroughly realistic scenes and the mounting is claimed to be nigh perfection.

Train Kills Telephone Employe.

Perth Amboy, Nov. 21.—Andrew Szoke, of Woodbridge, an employe of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, was found dead along the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad in this city Saturday morning. His pay envelope was in his pocket and his identification was made sure in that way. Szoke had evidently been walking along the track and death was probably instantaneous. His left hand was in coat pocket. His right arm was broken at the shoulder and his head was crushed.

Last night Mrs. H. C. White won three points, Mrs. Max Munger two points and Miss Weber one point. For the men, H. C. White won three points, Max Munger two points and E. H. Ladd, Jr., one point. Mrs. Max Munger now leads among the women contestants with four points.

After the play refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed. Play will be resumed two weeks from last night.

TWO TAXATION ACTS ARE NOW PASSED BY

STATE BOARD MAKES NO COMMENT ON THE HILLERY AND RAILROAD BILLS.

Trenton, Nov. 21.—Two important acts of the last Legislature relating to the subject of taxation are passed by in the annual report of the State Board of Equalization of Taxes without comment. One of these is the Hillery maximum tax rate act and the other the act taxing second-class railroad property at local rates. The report of the board contains only a statement as to the provisions of the two acts, but refrains from remarks or criticism of any kind. Of the Hilllery act is has merely this to say:

"The act approved March 31, 1905, amends sections 24, 25 and 26 of the revised tax act of 1903. The amendment of section 24 limits the county tax rate, so that the amount thereof 'shall in no case exceed in the aggregate the sum of fifty cents for each one hundred dollars of assessed valuation in the county,' and section 25, as amended, provides further that 'in no case shall the rate of taxation for county, school district and local purposes exceed in the aggregate the sum of one dollar and seventy cents for each one hundred dollars of assessed valuation in cities having a population over fifty thousand, one dollar and fifty cents for each one hundred dollars of assessed valuation in all other cities, boroughs, villages, towns and townships.'

"Any municipality may exceed such rate by a vote of the people, nor shall the limitation imposed by the act apply to the tax rate required to raise the State tax, if any, the State school tax or to pay judgments against the taxing district, which may be imposed in addition to the limited rate as fixed therein. The amended section 26, setting forth the duty of the assessor to enter certain items in his duplicate, reiterates in this connection that 'the rates per hundred dollars in cities having a population over fifty thousand shall not exceed one dollar and seventy cents on each hundred dollars of assessed valuation; in all other cities, boroughs, villages, towns and townships one dollar and fifty cents on each one hundred dollars of assessed valuation.'

"In brief, the tax rates under the new law shall not exceed $1.70 and $1.50, plus the State tax, if any, and the State school tax. The act takes effect January 1, 1906."

Of the act taxing second-class railroad property the regular report of the board says:

"The act approved April 3, 1905, amends the act of 1884, taxing the property of roads and canals, so that the second-class property shall be taxed at the rate prevailing in each taxing district where such property is located. Previous to the passage of this act, this class of property was fixed at a rate not to exceed one dollar and fifty cents on each one hundred dollars of assessed valuation."

THE FORUM.

Campaign "Fact" Exploded.

Editor, The Daily Press:

The much proclaimed era of "cheap silver" that the gold monometalists told the people of in the 1900 campaign has not arrived. Today's "Tribune" states that silver is today worth in the market 54½ cents an ounce, making the bullion value in a silver dollar more than the face or money value, in financial circles. Fear is expressed that they may be bought up and melted into bullion.

CONTEST MILKMAIDS' VICTORY.

State Has Appealed the Wolpert Milk Case.

The State Board of Health has served notice on the District Court that it has appealed the acquittal of Frank Wolpert, charged with offering for sale milk below the State's standard, to the Somerset Pleas Court.

The case will now come up there for a new trial before another jury just as if it had never been tried before. This class of cases is the only kind that can be appealed to the Common Pleas Court, the other appeals going to the Supreme Court.

This is the suit where Mr. Wolpert's daughters, the milkmaids, claimed that they conducted the business and that their father had nothing to do with it, excepting to own the rig.

JUDICIARY COMMISSION CONFER

Talks of Changes of System, but Takes no Action.

Jersey City, Nov. 21.—For the first time this fall the commission appointed to report to the Legislature a method of improving the judicial system and the system of procedure of the State, met yesterday in the office of Charles L. Corbin.

The commission consists of former Governors John W. Griggs and Franklin Murphy, former Supreme Court Justice Bennet Van Syckel, Charles L. Corbin and John R. Hardin, of Newark.

The commission discussed plans for the revision of the judicial system which the individual members had formulated since the last meeting, but took no definite action upon any of them.

By our improved sanitary method it comes in contact with heavy blowers that force out every particle of dust and dirt.

SCORE INSURANCE GRAFT.

See in Recent Exposures Cause for the Public to Protect Itself.

Atlantic City, Nov. 21.—The National Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, went on record yesterday in favor of temperance and the curtailing of saloons, declaring "that they should be abridged until they are abolished."

A resolution on the subject says: "Every community should be empowered by law to vote every saloon from its border." The Grange strongly condemned all influences brought to win legislation by lobbyists or others, and deplored the use of money in campaigns.

"The recent agitation," a resolution says, "and investigations in regard to extravagance in the management of our great financial institutions, the exposure of graft in high places and the enormous power exercised by great transportation companies through combined arrangements have aroused the people to a realization of the necessities of vigorous action if they would protect themselves against the inordinate desires of wealth."

Among other resolutions adopted during the day was one strongly urging congress to enact a law to prohibit the making of cigarette papers as well as cigarettes. The Grangers indorsed the establishment of country high schools by a combination of district schools.

DRAGGED ON THE TRACKS.

Man First Had Been Drugged and Robbed of Money.

Trenton, Nov. 21.—Drugged to insensibility, robbed of $24 and then placed on the trolley tracks, presumably that a car might grind out his life and cover the evidences of crime, was the fate of William H. Van Note, of Penns Neck, who came to Trenton Saturday.

He was found Sunday night in a secluded place on Ingham avenue. A motorman on the Johnson line noticed the body of a man lying across the rails. He applied his brake just in time to stope the car wheels from running over the body. The motorman jumped fro mthe car and found Van Note in an unconscious condition. He thought Van Note was dead, and a hurry call was sent to the police.

DIGS FURROUGHS AS GUARD AGAINST FLAMES

FARMER GETS PLOW AND HORSES OUT TO DIG PROTECTION.

Dunellen, Nov. 21.—Fire in the underbrush and dry leaves on the Watchung Mountains north of here Saturday night raged for several hours. For a time it looked as though the outbuildings on some of the farms would be destroyed. William Randolph, who lives on the mountain near Washington Rock, was obliged to get out his teams in the evening and plow furroughs around his house and barns that were in the direct path of the fire. The farmer decided upon this plan none too soon, for an hour later the fire had burned up to the newly plowed ground, where it died out.

The fire was started, it is thought, by some person riding along the turnpike road, who threw a cigar stump or light match into the dry leaves. The part of the mountain where the fire was started has been pretty well cleared of big timber during the last two years, and there were immense quantities of underbrush, broken limbs, etc., that had become thoroughly dried during the last two months, in which no rain has fallen. Water has become very scarce in this locality, and farmers in the outlying districts say the small brooks and springs on their farms in many cases have completely dried up. Wells and cisterns in town are very low, and persons not supplied by the water company are using the water from their wells very sparingly, less their supply become exhausted.

HAZERS NEED NOT APPLY.

Rutgers' President Declares Custom Against College Sentiment.

New Brunswick, Nov. 21.—Hazing was considered again by the authorities at Rutgers College yesterday morning, and the students made to understand fully that hazers were not wanted. Dr. W. H. S. Demarest, the acting president of the college, brought the matter up after exercises in Kirkpatrick chapel, when all the students were present.

He said that the self-government board stood back of the faculty in emphatically saying that hazing should not be permitted. And one doing so was going against the college sentiment, he declared, and any one against college sentiment was not wanted in Rutgers College.

FEAR MAN IS LOCKED IN CAR.

He Was Last Seen Loading One a Week Ago.

Somewhere between Chicago and Paterson John J. Reilly, a freight handler in the employ of the Erie Railroad, is believed to be a prisoner in one of the cars. He has been missing since last Tuesday. When last seen he was loading a car in the freight yards at Belleville.

Being subject to fainting spells, it is feared the man when suffering from one of the attacks was locked in the car.

The Erie authorities as far west as Chicago have been ordered to search every car in the yards for the missing employe.

Bishop Forgot His Mitre.

Proceedings were held up at the laying of the cornerstone at the new Hungarian church of St. Ladislaus, New Brunswick, Sunday afternoon. After Bishop James McFaul had been escorted in great state to the scene of the ceremonies and everything was ready to begin, it was discovered that the eminent prelate had forgotten, in the excitement, his cap and mitre. An altar boy was sent after the missing article and after some delay succeeded in locating it. He was the object of great interest to his boy companions, who followed him in large numbers and gazed with awe upon the precious headpiece. After the cap was satisfactorily adjusted upon the Bishop's head the services went on without interruption.

RETIRES AS INSPECTOR.

General Gillmore Will Continue to Command Second Brigade.

Trenton, Nov. 21—General Quincy O'M. Gillmore, commander of the Second Brigade of the National Guard of New Jersey, and a retired captain of the regular army, has tendered his resignation to the military secretary at Washington as United States inspector of the troops of this State. General Gillmore has held this position since September 16, 1903, his duties in connection therewith being to inspect the troops for the government and instruct them in military affairs in accordance with the methods of the regular establishment. General Gillmore has based his resignation upon the ground of physical disability.

The effect of General Gillmore's retirement as military instructor will be to reduce his pay from the government from that of a captain in active service to that of a retired officer of the same rank, or, in other words, to two-thirds pay. Governor Stokes will have the naming, subject to the approval of the War Department, of a new military instructor from the retired officers of the regular army, of whom there are a number in New Jersey. This courtesy is accorded by the War Department to the Governors of States, the officers appointed exercising a certain control over the State military organizations.

General Gillmore is building a home at Princeton. He will continue to serve as a commander of the Second Brigade.

FIREMEN MUST BE BETTER.

Newark Commissioners Adopt New Rules to Prevent Gossip.

New rules, far more stringent than those that heretofore have regulated the department, were adopted yesterday by the Board of Fire Commissioners of Newark.

Some of these rules are intended to kill off a practice of indulging in gossip and criticism of company commanders by visiting firemen, which, it is claimed, has militated against discipline. One rule provides that "the practice of the members of the department in visiting companies to which they are not attached on regular days off or at other times, to indulge in gossip and comparisons between companies, commandants and equipment will not be tolerated."

Another rule provides that "officers and members of the department are admonished from participating in arguments about departmental affairs and to refrain from adverse criticism of other branches of the city government."

Still another prohibition rule puts a stop to the custom of the members appointing legislative committees to lobby for the passage of bills in the interest of firemen, or to attempt to influence the passage of ordinances or appropriations of the Common Council.

Members are prohibited from engaging in any private business that requires leaves of absence.

TO TEACH HISTORY.

State School Teachers Will Form Conference to Aid Them in Work.

Superintendent H. C. Krebs, of the borough schools, attended a meeting at Trenton yesterday, called by Superintendent Mackey, of that city, for the purpose of discussing ways and means for better teaching history. Twenty school officials were present and addresses were made by Superintendent Mackey, Miss Dynes, one of the teachers of the Trenton Normal School, and Professor Van Dyke, of Princeton.

It was afterward decided to organize a conference of history teachers of the State public schools, and a meeting for that purpose will be held in Trenton in December or January.

P. H. S. Elects Baseball Captain.

The board of directors of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association yesterday elected Joseph Gavett, Jr., baseball manager for 1906. Hudson Burr was elected hockey manager, and Paul Collier manager of the basketball team, was instructed to purchase suits for the team. Twelve applications from members of the football team were made for the P. H. S. insignia. They will be considered later.

Brewing Company Wants $75,000.

A civil suit for $75,000 has been instituted in the New Jersey Supreme Court by Lawyer Edward Nugent, as counsel for the Rising Sun Brewing Company, of Elizabeth, against Philip Schauble, of that city, who was president of the company until November 22 of last year. Mr. Nugent would make no statement concerning the litigation beyond saying that the company claimed the amount mentioned was due them from Mr. Schauble.

OARD'S HARDEST WORK

Arbitration Body Tells Governor Stokes "Same Old Story in the Same Old Way."

The State Board of Arbitration has submitted to Governor Stokes an annual report, so much like that of former years that a reproduction of its contents would be trite. The report tells the same old story, to the effect that the board has accomplished nothing, or next to nothing, during the year; that it has been handicapped in its work by lack of power, and concludes by reciting the laws of some other states to show that with increased authority it might be able to do something.

This board has been notorious for several years for the amount of work it has not done. The members are paid an annual salary of $1,200 each, and it is said the most laborious duty they have is to draw their money.

The members are William R. Garranbrants, Newark; Harry H. Banker, New Brunswick; Thomas H. Joiner, Camden; Samuel Berry, Millville, and Joseph C. Schenck, Rutherford.

The last report of the State Treasurer shows that the board last year cost the State $6,215.69, and for all this money the State got nothing but an annual report.

The salaries of the members made up $6,000. Of the balance $200 went to the secretary, who was kept "tremendously" busy all the year writing the annual report, and $15.69 for stationery.

Among other things the report just handed to the Governor says:

"New Jersey has been exceptionally free from labor disturbances in the past year. While the industrial conditions in neighboring States and in other parts of the country have been violently disturbed and strikes have been declared and carried on, the differences between capital and labor in this State have been trifling in their character and effect. There have been differences, but no serious strikes have been declared, and with mutual concessions on both sides the troubles were speedily adjusted.

"In a number of instances, when strikes or lockouts were threatened in New Jersey the services of the State Board of Arbitration were proffered to aid, if possible, in bringing about an adjustment of the dispute, but the good offices of the board were declined, as has been the case of late years.

"The lack of power to enforce the provisions of the act creating the State Board of Arbitration has hampered the board in its efforts to be of service to capital and labor, and so long as there is no compulsion for the settlement of labor disputes by arbitration the board will continue to be hampered in its work of aiding in the adjustment of strikes or lockouts."

The report also discusses in a general way a federal act concerning the creation of boards of arbitration, and incidentally comments that twenty-two States have like laws. These statutes are all concerning interstate commerce.

ODD FELLOWS PLEASED.

Plan to Have Home Run Under Direction of Grand Lodge.

Trenton, Nov. 21.—Odd Fellows are greatly elated over the fact that a commission has been appointed to consider ways and means by which the grand lodge may be able to take charge of the Odd Fellows' Home here. At present the home is really in charge of a separate association of members, who with their families only can take advantage of it.

The idea of the appointment of the committee is to have the home so controlled that any member of the Odd Fellows in this State may be able to go there. At present each member of the grand lodge pays a per capita tax for the support of the home, while the members of the home association only are benefited, and they want to derive the same advantages as the favored few.

The commission consists of C. Fleming Stanger, of Glassboro; E. O. Bussing, of Lyndhurst; Amos B. Pierce, of Newark; Walter S. Campbell, of Newark; Rev. J. K. Manning, of Trenton; James B. Hankings, of Bordentown; Wesley B. Stout, of Asbury Park, present grand master.

Charged with Robbing Cars.

Elizabeth, Nov. 21.—Two young men, N. E. Brown and Harry L. Lucas, were caught Friday night by Special Policemen Hennessy and O'Laughlin, of the Jersey Central, who charge them with stealing shoes from a case in a freight car of the Central. When detected, the policemen say, each man had three pairs of shoes in his possession. The prisoners were arraigned this morning in police court before Judge Mahon and Chief of Police Dougherty, of the Central, made a formal complaint against them. They were committed to jail to await the Grand Jury's action.

Poor Laws Board Appointed.

Governor Stokes has appointed as a commission to codify the laws relating to the poor, Judge Algernon T. Eweeney, Vivian M. Lewis, clerk of the Court of Chancery; Alderman Thomas A. Davis, of Orange; Prosecutor William H. Speer, of Hudson county, and Arthur W. McDougall, superintendent of the Newark Bureau of Associated Charities.

HAIR NATURALLY ABUNDANT.

When It Is Free of Dandruff, It Grows Luxuriantly.

Hair preparations and dandruff cures, as a rule, are sticky or irritating affairs that do no earthly good. Hair, when not diseased, grows naturally, luxuriantly. Dandruff is the cause of nine-tenths of all hair trouble, and dandruff is caused by a germ. The only way to cure dandruff is to kill the germ; and, so far, the only hair preparation that will positively destroy the germ is Newbro's Herpicide—absolutely harmless, free from grease, sediment, dye matter or dangerous drugs. It allays itching instantly; makes hair glossy and soft as silk. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

MODERN MAXIMS.

One hot bird on hand is worth two in the rush.

Tell me how much money a man carries about with him, and I will tell you how much his company keeps.

The fool and his wife are soon parted.

No man is a hero to the Carnegie fund.

Take care of the sounds and the sense will take care of itself.

Spare the mode and spoil the style.

Never pat a bad dog on the mouth. —Baltimore American.

UNFORTUNATE MAN.

"Want to marry my daughter, do you?" said the financial magnate, wheeling around in his chair.

"Wh-who said so?" gasped the young man.

"Are you not young Spoonall?"

"No sir; my name's Simpson. I've come to bring back a suit of clothes we ironed for you this morning."

"Oh, I see! Put the bundle on that chair. Good afternoon."

The magnate looked at his watch and turned to his desk.

Presently the door opened again.

"Well, what is it now?" he asked. "Do you want the pay for ironing those clothes?"

"N-no, sir," said an embarrassed voice behind him. "I'm Mr. Spoonall. I came here according to appoint—"

"Five minutes late, young man. Good afternoon."

HIGH HEELS.

In the feet vanity too often pays a price which is dangerously expensive. The high-heeled shoe is made in defiance of the relation it ought to bear to the anatomy of the foot and to the direction in which the pressure of the body's weight falls upon it. The boot or shoe, that it may not slip upon the foot, which by the high heel is deprived of its usual purchase of direct downward pressure, is made to hold with undue firmness just above the back of the heel.

Chafing of a delicate skin is readily produced. This, though in itself a trifle, may lead to graver troubles. Inflammation of the leg with abscess formation, not infrequently follows, and the exciting cause has been traced to the patient's shoe. Abscesses forming around some neglected trifle of this kind have sometimes ended fatally.

NEW SLEEVES.

Elbow sleeves are more appropriate for summer than for winter, yet they are to be seen not only on handsome winter bodices, but upon the dressy coats as well, and the protection of the lower arm is evidently to be left to large gloves in many cases.

There are indications that sleeves will soon undergo another change. It is said that they are to be a little smaller at the top. Why the change should be made so soon no one knows. The sleeve of today is certainly pretty, and is becoming to the stout as well as to the slight woman, for sleeves have not yet grown as ridiculously large as they were a few years ago. If the change shall come, the probability is that the new sleeves will not be as well liked as are the present ones. However true the prophecy may be in regard to dress sleeves, the new fur coats have quite a little fullness at the top. This looks, despite the advance news, as if dress sleeves would also be of good size.

BRIDAL LORE.

A January bride will be a prudent housekeeper and very good tempered.

A February bride will be a humane and affectionate wife and tender mother.

A March bride will be a frivolous chatterbox, somewhat given to quarreling.

An April bride will be inconstant, not very intelligent, but fairly good looking.

A May bride will be handsome, amiable and likely to be happy.

A June bride will be impetuous and generous.

A July bride will be handsome and smart, but a trifle quick-tempered.

An August bride will be amiable and practical.

A September bride will be discreet, affable and much liked.

An October bride will be pretty, coquetish, loving, but jealous.

A November bride will be liberal, kind, but of a wild disposition.

A December bride will be well proportioned, fond of novelty, entertaining, but extravagant.—Chicago News.

$100,000 for Lafayette.

Easton, Nov. 21—It turns out that Lafayette College has received a gift of $100,000 from Ralph Voorhees, of Clinton, N. J., instead of $1,000, as was first announced. The gift is to form a part of a fund being raised for the celebration of the college's seventy-fifth anniversary. Other gifts bring the total to $162,500.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," Etc.

Copyright, 1902, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

One thing, it was said, that had made Stanton so forceful a prosecutor in the past was the ease with which he could always persuade himself of a prisoner's guilt, the jury following as the night the day. Something had to be done, he had said, to stop this wholesale transmission of state and military secrets to the enemy, and a victim was demanded. He had mured this confederate officer, caught in civilian dress, in Old Capitol prison, and if he wasn't a spy, then he "must have neglected his opportunities and deserved to be hanged." What made Stanton so hot against Ladue was that so many women, clergymen, church people and others took to pleading for the lad. Then it was that McKinnon began to find favor at the war department. Then it was that Capt. Benton's limits were restricted instead of being enlarged. Then it was that soft-hearted surgeons at the Old Capitol hospital were replaced by men of sterner stuff. Then it was that the Chiltons were notified that they must leave Washington forthwith, and the Squire, bursting with wrath at being forbidden to see the doctor and his daughter, had had brief conferences with Fred, now almost fretting his heart out at the barracks; had learned through an officer of rank in the regular service that beyond possibility of doubt Maj. McKinnon was at the bottom of all these new and most oppressive orders; had gone to the white house with a demand to see the president; had been promised an opportunity immediately after cabinet meeting that afternoon; had met McKinnon sauntering down the avenue in company with a fellow soldier-lawyer, and had hurled himself upon him then and there, to the end that the major was picked up and carried to Willard's, the squire escorted to the police station, and the interview didn't come off. It is recorded of the president that when told of the incident that evening, his sad face brightened for the first time in a week. "I wonder if the squire would let me make him a general," said he. "At least he fights."

That night a soldier of the regular service did a thing that, had Stanton known it, would doubtless have sent that soldier to close arrest, if not to a cell. He was an officer of rank, a gentleman of gentlemen, and a fellow beloved of his fellow men. Entrusted with an order to see that Dr. Chilton and daughter were safely sent to the steamer for Old Point Comfort, a suitable guard going with them, he had called on the kindly old Virginian late in the afternoon.

There had been a brief, courteous talk. The officer deeply regretted, he said, to have to be the means of carrying out the order, but he would call with a carriage at 8:30. Was there anything he or his wife could do for Miss Chilton?

"There is, sir," answered a voice, and with cheeks flushing through their pallor and eyes that flashed despite evidence of recent tears, Rosalie Chilton swept quickly into the room. "We hear that Mr. Benton—Squire Benton—too, has been arrested and—my aunt will not admit of anything—but I feel that it is to him we are indebted for most generous aid. Major, I wish to see him, to thank him, to—tell him something—as his daughter is not here. Can that be arranged before we go?"

"If a possible thing," said the major, well knowing the squire was out on bail by this time, and would certainly come in person. All the same, he told his wife at dinner of Miss Chilton's request and, what had not that keen-witted army woman already known or surmised?

"He cannot leave barracks," said she, on the spot, "but you can invite him here to your quarters; then bring them here on the way to the boat and leave the rest to me."

"He cannot leave! Why, my dear, he isn't in barracks. The police——" begins the major, obtusely.

"Major! You ask Capt. Benton here and—and—no questions," interposes madame with severe and superior wisdom. "Then bring—her to me." And light begins to dawn on the master—and he obeys.

That evening a carriage whirled past the guarded gateway of the barrack square and drew up at the quarters of the commanding officer. The major stepped forth, tendered his hand to an agile, slender girl who followed her soldier escort to the doorway, where, with eyes that shone and cheeks that colored and lips that puckered and hands that clasped in sympathy and compassion, a warm-hearted wife and mother met the motherless girl and drew her in. The major went back to the doctor; the lady led her guest to the parlor door and ushered her into the dimly-lighted, cozily-warmed and closely-curtained room; then vanished, and, for the first time since that night at Charlottesville, Fred Benton stood face to face, alone, with the girl he so fondly and so sadly loved.

And when he, in yearning and love, stepped eagerly toward her, his eyes shining, his hands outstretched, the furred hood fell back from her flushing face, revealing it in all its dark and queenly beauty. Her eyes, too, flashed, as in amaze, and then in anger she recoiled. One instnat she glared at him, then spoke:

"Capt. Benton, you—you're a coward!"

CHAPTER XXIII.

GETTYSBURG.

The spring had come and gone. The sword of Lee led again to the border. The spirit of Jackson had fled to the skies. Grimmer than ever, old Ewell now ruled at the head of the famous "Foot Cavalry" corps, foremost in the dash for the Susquehanna. The arms of the south swept on to invasion. Under the new, sore-tried and little-trusted leaders the arms of the north were reversed in pursuit. Hooker had quit, as he said, in disgust, declaring no man could plan and fight with a string to his shirt-tail and Stanton and Halleck a-pull at the string. Reynolds, calm and sagacious, soldier and fighter, had been tendered command, and politely declined. Meade, his subordinate, stepped over his head, since Reynolds would none of it, and with prayer and misgiving picked up the reins dropped by Hooker in sight of the Maryland shore. And the same hard fighting, hard marching, hard swearing, hard used old army hove in sight of the stream that had given it its name, and one corps, at least, had lost nothing by the change.

BOSSES SEE FIGHT AHEAD WITH COLBY

THEY FEAR CANDIDACY OF MARTIN FOR FLOOR LEADERSHIP OF THE HOUSE.

With the speakership of the New Jersey House about decided in favor of Assemblyman Robbins, of Burlington; the presidency of the Senate going to Senator William J. Bradley, of Camden; the Senate leadership floating to Senator Hillery, of Morris, a line on the leadership of the House was obtained this week. In the expected candidacy of Assemblyman William P. Martin, of Essex, there is room for a huge row.

It was Martin who went on the stump with Everett Colby last summer. Martin stood the brunt of the battle against bosses in Essex county and the slings of those in other counties. He went on the Colby ticket and has been elected to the House of Assembly. New he comes in for his reward at the hands of the man he fought for, as well as for the enmity of the bosses, county and State.

Of course, Martin will be fought. The State machine does not like his candidacy at all, and if the way of the bosses is to be done, Martin will be beaten. They fear the conditions back of him.

Martin said last Tuesday that he was not a candidate for the speakership of the House nor for the floor leadership. Yet events in Essex county during the week, the support of the Record wing of the Hudson County Assembly delegation, and the possible secession from the bosses of the Dickinson wing of the same Assembly delegation, have given Martin a great prospect of being the House leader.

This fight is the queerest that has developed in New Jersey State politics in many years. Usually the line is drawn sharply between north and south Jersey, but this year it is different. It is still south against north Jersey, but the old line drawn at the northern boundary of Mercer county is being extended by the State leaders to take some of the north Jersey counties into the south Jersey ranks.

Now south Jersey is the only entire section of the State true to the bosses, and with it they are seeking to preserve the State machine.

All the resources of the politician are being exerted to rally north Jersey counties to the support of south Jersey, which is equivalent to saying that the machine leaders are worried over the Colby movement.

Colby and Martin must be put down at all hazards, is the conclusion they have reached. They are afraid that Colby means to come down to Trenton this winter and "spring everything wide open." So the battle is on.

Colby, with his own delegation against him last year, and having the enmity of the county and State bosses, nearly won the speakership against Avis, of Gloucester. He goes after a thing with the determination to get it, and frequently does.

Asks $10,000 Damages.

Washington, N. J., Nov. 21.—Charles S. Simanton, a jeweler, of St. Johnsbury, Vt., has instituted a suit for $10,000 damages against Oscar Brambach, superintendent of the Needham Piano and Organ Company. The suit is for an alleged false arrest. Former Prosecutor William A. Stryker is the attorney for the plaintiff. Mr. Simanton claims that his reputation and business standing were injured by reason of the arrest. Some time ago Simanton purchased an automobile of George M. Depue, of Washington. The latter claims he had reason to think that Simanton was trying to leave the State without paying for the machine he had been operating for nearly a month. Depue then sold the machine to Oscar Brambach, and the new owner and Depue had an exciting chase at midnight after Simanton. The latter was arrested at Newton, and it was claimed by his pursuers that he was attempting to leave the State, having gone in the direction of the New York State line, after leaving Hackettstown, where, it is said, he had agreed to leave the machine.

Thanksgiving Day.

We all have many reasons for which to be thankful this year, but some of them are strange to those who don't quite understand their neighbors. Mark Twain, for instance, in expressing a Thanksgiving sentiment in next Sunday's New York World, says that we should all give thanks because—— But you must wait to find out what the foremost living humorist has to say. A Thanksgiving poem by James Whitcomb Riley and a fine Thanksgiving story by O. Henry are among other features of real note that make the Thanksgiving number of the Sunday World a worthy issue.

Colby After Prudential?

Some of the Essex county Assemblymen who helped to enliven Governor's Day at the State House last week confided to their close friends that one of the things Senator-elect Colby will be most urgent about at the coming session of the Legislature will be an official investigation into the Prudential Insurance Company. Such a move is regarded as part of a plan to prevent the re-election of United States Senator John F. Dryden, who is president of the Prudential, to the Senate.

"RAFFLES" REFUSES TO PLEAD.

Gentleman Burglar Is Remanded Until Tomorrow.

Alfred Porch Smalley, known as the "gentleman burglar," from Clayton, who confessed to robbing James W. Jackson's residence in Crescent avenue, together with a number of other homes in various cities and towns, appeared in the Court of Common Pleas at Elizabeth, this morning, to plead to the charge of burglarizing George Olmstead's house in Elizabeth.

Smalley was about to plead when he noticed that his counsel, Samuel Schleiner, Esq., was not present. He declined to enter any plea during the absence of counsel and was remanded to the county jail.

Later his counsel appeared and he wanted Smalley arraigned again, but the court refused the request. He will probably be arraigned tomorrow, which is sentence day in court.

A Devious Suit.

The hearing is set for December 8. If Steele's claim is proved, Leichtentritt will be ordered to show cause why he should not pay the Steele claim for Rulin.

OWNS A NOVEL QUILT.

It Contains Autographs of President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

New Brunswick, Nov. 21.—Miss Sadie Buckalew, of 47 Albany street, is the possessor of an autograph quilt that is an original and interesting novelty. It contains the autographs of President Roosevelt, of Mrs. Roosevelt, and of nearly 600 people prominent in local church and business affairs. Miss Buckalew was one of the promoters of the enterprise which led to the creation of the quilt. She is a member of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Reformed church of this city and one of a committee the society's treasury.

It was in July that Miss Buckalew and Miss Margaret Michel, of Paterson street, conceived the idea of the quilt and put it on execution. Fifty-six squares of hemstitched linen were secured and distributed among the members of the society, who began charged with arranging a bazar to fill securing autographs. Each person supplying his autograph paid ten cents toward the fund. The autographs were written in lead pencil, in letters three-quarters of an inch in height, and then the committee embroidered them in yellow, the color of the Dutch Reformed church. The autographs are written diagonally across the blocks, and the effect is pleasing.

What is known as the honor block occupies a space near the centre of the quilt. It is the one prepared by Mrs. Atwell Bartholomew and contains the names of President Roosevelt and of his wife, Edith Kermit Roosevelt. Other names on the block are those of Rev. J. P. Searle, president of the New Brunswick Theological Seminary of the Dutch Reformed church; Rev. J. H. Gillespie, Rev. F. S. Schenck, of the seminary faculty; Rev. W. H. S. Demarest, acting president of Rutgers College; Rev. P. T. Pockman, pastor of the church; Rev. J. H. Raven, of the Theological Seminary; V. M. W. Suydam, president of the National Bank of New Jersey, and Howard Buttler, both of whom have been superintendents of the Sunday-school.

Other ministers whose names are on the quilt are Rev. J. F. Shaw, of the First Methodist church, and Rev. C. P. Case, of the Franklin Park Reformed church. The autographs of three undertakers, Charles R. Moke, J. Burr Herbert and J. L. Rogers, are on the quilt. Dr. J. W. Rice is the only physician represented. The names of former Mayor Viehmann and all of his family are on one block. Prosecutor George Berdine and former President of the Board of Education Robert L. Hoagland are also on the quilt.

Dunellen Revival.

The revival spirit still has a strong grip on the people of Dunellen. Large congregations attended the first of the "extra week" meetings at the Presbyterian church Sunday night and indications point to a great culmination of the campaign. Meetings will be continued in the Presbyterian church every night up to and including Friday, with afternoon meetings for prayer and song at 3:30. Rev. A. C. McCrea, of the First M. E. church, will speak tonight.

Y. M. C. A. FIVE WON FROM STRONG PARTHIANS

DEFEATED CRACK NEW YORK COMBINATION, 32 TO 22; HIGH SCHOOL WON.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team had its real opening for the season last night. The five encountered the crack Parthians, of New York, composed of ex-college players, in the first game of the strong schedule arranged by Mr. Boardman. They won, 32 to 22. The game was fast and interesting. Y. M. C. A. was a shade the better in goal shooting but at every other point the Parthians matched them. The first half closed 19 to 17 and there was never any certainty that Y. M. C. A. would get away with the decision.

The feature was Leary's goal shooting. He was remarkably accurate and scored at something like twenty of the thirty-two points.

The score:

BOOK SAVED POLICEMAN FROM BURGLAR'S PISTOL

Saffron Finds Cracksman on Point of Blowing Up Safe.

A DESPERATE BATTLE

Robber Slipped Revolver From His Sleeve After Officer Searched Him, Shot to Kill, and Escaped.

Shot at twice by a cracksman, Officer Andrew Saffron owed his life last night to the little leather covered memorandum book that all the Plainfield police officers carry. The book, which rested almost directly over his heart, deflected both bullets. The shots were fired during a hand-to-hand struggle outside the office of John Keely, the coal dealer, on South avenue. The cracksman tore loose from Saffron's grasp after firing the shots and escaped.

Saffron discovered the burglar at work on Keely's safe at 11:40 o'clock. Approaching the office on his rounds, he saw the gleam of a light through the office window. Saffron ran to the door and tried it.

"Is that you, Jack?" he called.

The light went out suddenly and a rush of feet sounded from inside. Saffron jumped the fence about the yard and ran to the rear. A figure was running for the coal bins. The officer drew his revolver and fired, running after the fugitive at top speed. He cornered his quarry in the shadows under the coal chutes. The man threw up his hands.

"I'm shot," he gasped; "I'll give up."

He stepped out into the yard, with his hands in the air. Saffron drew his electric flashlight and turned it on him. He saw a slender, well dressed young man, about five feet ten inches in height, enveloped in a long black overcoat, with a new brown derby on his head.

Saffron went through the man's pockets for weapons, but found none. The man went quietly until the gate was reached. Then he turned and grappled with his captor. They fought furiously for fifteen minutes, until Saffron, using the electric lantern as a club, beat the prisoner to his knees.

Saffron's arm was raised for another blow when the prisoner shook his right arm in a peculiar way and raised it toward the officer's breast. Something flashed in his hand and two shots sounded. He had had a revolver up his sleeve.

The first shot Saffron scarcely felt, but the second caused him to sink to his knees. The shooter jerked loose, leaped to his feet, and ran into the woods back of the coal yard. Saffron recovered his strength and took off his coat and vest to look for wounds. The bullets rested against his left side. Two marks on the edge of his report book, which was in the vest pocket over his heart, showed how the bullets had been turned from their course.

Saffron notified headquarters of the affair and Sergeant Frederickson hustled Roundsman Flynn and Officers Flynn and Higgins to the scene in the patrol wagon. They tracked the man to the edge of the woods. The last trace they could find of him was a piece of coat lining that fluttered from a barbed wire fence. His natty brown hat, crushed and battered in the fight, was found in the coal yard.

In Keely's office the policemen found a complete set of high grade burglar tools. Everything that an expert cracksman uses was there. There was a four-inch hole in the safe door, seventeen sacks of wet coal were piled about its base, and a heavy chain was buckled about the safe midway between top and bottom. The cracksman had been just on the point of blowing the door up when Saffron interrupted him.

Everything about the man's work, from the tools he carried and the way he used them, to the desperate gunplay in the dark yard, bears the mark of the practiced and daring professional. That there was no trace of a lookout or other confederate is considered strange by the police. Men in the safe cracking line usually travel in pairs, but Saffron is positive that there was no one but the one earnest young man with whom he dealt about the place.

Saffron's interference saved the cracksman from a great disappointment. There was only fourteen dollars in the safe. He may have worked on a delayed tip, because there was between $1,500 and $1,600 in the safe about the first of the month.

The police of this section, New York and Philadelphia have been furnished with a description of the

ADAM BLAIR'S HOUSE AFIRE THIS MORNING

DAMAGE AMOUNTS TO $300 FIREMEN'S QUICK WORK.

Damage to the extent of $300 was caused at the home of Adam Blair on Park avenue this morning, the flames having their origin in an ash barrel located in the cellar. Mrs. Blair was at work in the upper part of the house when she was startled by smoke pouring up the stairs, and hastened below. She found flames creeping about the dining room and hall and notified fire headquarters by telephone.

Chief Jennings and part of the apparatus was on the scene when an alarm was turned in from box 26 at Park avenue and Eighth street. A hydrant stream was turned on and the chemical was used on the first floor. The flames were finally extinguished after half an hour's work.

The ashes had contained hot coals, and these fired the barrel. The flames caught a post and then worked their way up to the flooring. The loss is covered by insurance.

MISS HOLLY'S REPORT

Agent's Annual Account Shows Society's Great Work During Last Twelve Months—Mrs. Ryder's Report.

Officers were elected and reports of the work during the past year were received at the annual meeting of the Charity Organized Aid Association, held in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, last night.

These officers were chosen for the coming year:

President, Henry M. Maxson; vice presidents, Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Mrs. John Doull Miller; secretary, William S. Tyler; treasurer, Boardman Wright.

Mr. Maxson was in the chair, and in the absence of Mr. Tyler, the secretary, John Doull Miller filled the position temporarily. The first report called for was that of the treasurer. This showed a balance at last report of $11.87. The receipts during the year from all sources were $727.04, and after all expenditures there is left a balance of $215.08, which includes interest on one Atchinson, Topeka and Santa Fee bond.

Mrs. Charles E. Ryder, as chairman of the co-operation committee, presented a brief report showing how all of the various churches, societies and organizations of the city are co-operating with the Charity Organized Aid Association.

Dr. W. H. Murray, as district secretary, stated that he had no special report to make, but that it was decided best to incorporate it with that of the agent, Miss Holly. The president then called upon the agent for her report, the statistical part of which follows:

Applications for aid, 801; individuals helped, 246; number of new cases added, 84; number of persons reached, 13,397; number of calls made by agent, 1,821; number of calls received by agent, 966; number of letters written by agent, 469; number of letters received by agent, 462; number given employment in wood-yard, 29; number given employment sewing, 35. Miss Holly also referred to the co-operation of various societies and churches and the assistance of The Daily Press in the work of the association, and of her efforts to work in harmony with the Plainfield Relief Association. She mentioned the efforts made toward better sanitary conditions about the homes and yards of the poor, adding that thirty-three floral gardens were maintained during the year, Government seeds being used. The first prize for the best exhibit was won by a little girl.

The agent reported the child-saving work as being in a satisfactory condition, and the fact that support is still being given to the Berkshire Industrial Home, Caanan Four Corners. Children have been placed in new homes, and better quarters have been secured for aged persons. Reference was also made to the day nursery soon to be started, adding that it would be a great help to the association's work.

Miss Holly strongly urged and recommended that better houses be secured for the poor. This she said was one of the great needs of Plainfield. She also said that the work of the King's Daughters at the mountain camp during the summer was proving a great help in looking after the poor during the fall and winter months for both mothers and chil-

THREE-YEAR SENTENCE FOR ITALIAN SLAYER

SCADUTO ESCAPES WITH LIGHT PENALTY BEFORE JUDGE VAIL.

Luigi Scaduto, the killer of Lorenzo Fauci, his rival fish peddler, who was stabbed to death in a fight on North avenue, was sentenced to three years in prison this morning, when arraigned before Judge Vail in the Court of Common Pleas under conviction for manslaughter.

John P. Owens, counsel for Luigi, made a strong plea for clemency in Scaduto's behalf. He pictured the man's wife and children, and the destitution that would follow his long incarceration in jail. Judge Vail made no particular comment on the case in passing sentence.

Mr. Owens is arranging to appeal the case before the Supreme Court. He contends that his client was convicted against the weight of evidence adduced.

STANBERY'S PLEA IS "NOT GUILTY"

SAME AS HARRISON'S—DATE FOR MANSLAUGHTER TRIAL NOT FIXED.

Before Judge Strong in the Middlesex county court, this morning, William R. Stanbery, of Fanwood, and Oscar Harrison, of the city, entered a plea of not guilty to a charge of manslaughter, directed against them because of the automobile accident on West Front street, last July, which resulted in the death of Mrs. William W. Westphal.

The plea was accepted and both men were admitted to bail in the sum of $1,000 for trial later, the date to be fixed by agreement between Prosecutor Berdwine and counsel for the defendants. The bond was furnished by Thomas Rutledge, of North Plainfield, for Harrison, and Henry Lietke, of West Front street, for Stanbery. Harrison is represented by Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and Stanbery by S. S. Swackhamer and Alan H. Strong, the latter of New Brunswick.

It is possible the trial will be held within the next three weeks though counsel on either side, at noon, refused to state as to what time they proposed setting.

FRACTURED SKULL FATAL TO M'CANN

COACHMAN THROWN FROM HIGH TRAP IS DEAD.

William McCann, Jr., who was injured in a runaway accident on Mountain avenue Monday afternoon, died yesterday afternoon. Death was due to a fracture of the skull. The injured man did not regain consciousness once after the accident, and his physician, Dr. Fred Hughes, had no hopes for his recovery after and examination of the injuries.

Mr. McCann, who was employed as a coachman for Pierre Malli, of East Front street, was driving a spirited horse along Mountain avenue Monday afternoon. In turning the corner at Mountain and Leland avenues the trap in which he and his friend were riding struck an embankment, throwing both men out.

Mr. McCann struck his head on the hard macadam, fracturing the skull, while his companion landed on his feet and was able to catch the horse before he had a chance to run away. The injured man immediately became unconscious and failed to rally.

The dead man was about twenty-nine years old, married and had one child. He was the son of William McCann, Sr., caretaker on the Malli estate for many years.

Missionary Women Meet.

The Women's Home Missionary Society of the Monroe Avenue church held the regular monthly meeting at the parsonage, yesterday afternoon. After the business had been transacted, Mrs. W. B. Grannatt read a report of the recent annual meeting held at Elizabeth two weeks ago.

It Was a N. P. H. S. Victory.

It was stated yesterday that the Plainfield High School second team defeated North Plainfield High School second team, in football, by a score of 16 to 0. The true score was just the reverse. The borough school boys played a good game and were clearly entitled to victory.

Lodge Sociable.

Members of Friendship Lodge, No. 4, D. of R., were entertained at a sociable at Mrs. J. B. Higgins' house, West Front street. The affair was a delightful success.

DR. WIGHT ON HIS WORK

State Commissioner of Charites Tells Organized Aid Association of His Duties

INSTRUCTIVE ADDRESS

A Big Job on His Hands—Has Some Plans for Betterment of Conditions — What He Supervises.

With more than ordinary interest, Rev. Dr. G. B. Wight, the new State Commissioner of the Department of Charities and Corrections, spoke at the annual meeting of the Charity Organized Aid Association in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, last night. This is a new department in this State, and although Dr. Wight has only been in charge but a few months he clearly showed that he is rapidly acquiring knowledge of his work and is keeping well in touch with it.

The speaker gave much valuable information about the work of charities and corrections, showing many proposed changes and reforms, not the least of which is that which will make it possible for convicts to contribute to the aid of their families, through money they are able to earn while in confinement. Also the proposition that some one industry be adopted for penal institutions, such as the manufacture of clothing which will clothe all of the inmates of the State institutions. On this basis, it is believed that greater and more practical returns will be received by the State from convicts, which is not the case at present.

Dr. Wight praised the work of the charitable societies, such as the Charity Aid Association, which receive no State aid and give of their time and money gratis. These he considered a valuable aid to the work being accomplished by the State.

Dr. Wight then stated that the new department of which he is the head was created by the last Legislature, and to his great surprise he was asked by Governor Stokes to accept the commission. He entered upon his duties in May last, and from the fact that the State had previously had no such work and he had no precedents to follow, it was simply a case of blazing away through the wilderness.

Going into details, Dr. Wight defined the duties of the new department, which includes the consideration of all plans for public buildings and the direct supervision of State institutions. The law provides that he must have a licensed and thoroughly competent architect as an assistant. The institutions over which the department has the greatest concern are the State Prison, the State Hospitals at Morristown and Trenton, the Reform School for Boys at Jamesburg, the Girls' Industrial School at Trenton and the Epileptic Village, Skillman; the Home for Feeble-Minded Children at Vineland and the State Reformatory at Rahway. He described the conditions in each one telling of the work being carried on and the systems employed.

The speaker said that the boys' school at Jamesburg and the girls' school at Trenton are open to criticism for the fact that very often young children are allowed to associate with older ones and learn evil habits. He deplored the absence of the home life and said that whenever possible the children are put in good homes.

In referring to the Reformatory at Rahway, Dr. Wight spoke of the system employed there to help inmates to secure employment and become honest, respectable citizens. He praised the parole system and said that he hoped to see it adopted in the State Prison.

As to convict labor, the commissioner said that he favored the centralization of labor into one industry, instead of the present method of making many different articles. He said that one serious problem confronting his department was some method to separate the professional criminal from those who reach State Prison through bad companions and who do not intend to be bad. He urged the appointment of more parole officers and the adoption of some plan whereby families of convicts can receive some support from their labor while confined.

The speaker said that at present there are 1,700 inmates of the State Prison, 1,400 in the State Hospital, Trenton; 200 in the Home for Feeble-Minded Children, and a large number in the other institutions. One important matter which it is the intention of the department to take up is the enrollment throughout the State of the names or inmates of all charitable and penal institutions, and data concerning their parentage, especially in the case of insane persons. He referred to the efforts some well-to-do persons make to have aged members of their families put

PRETTY CHARITY BAZAAR

Successful Affair Held at Park Club by King's Daughters Circle.

RESPLENDENT TEA ROOM

Riot of Color, Japanese Costumes and Incense—Attractions and Those in Charge—For City Nurse Fund.

Silver Cross Circle, King's Daughters, conducted a highly successful fair at the Park Club yesterday afternoon. It ran from 3 o'clock to 6. The proceeds will be applied to the support of the city nurse's work.

The decorations were unusually attractive. A striking feature of the bazaar, from the decorative standpoint, was a Japanese tea room. One of the small parlors was converted into a resplendent example of what the Occidental imagination pictures as an Oriental apartment. There was a wealth of color and a profusion of chrysanthemums. Over the main table spread a gorgeous paper umbrella. Incense permeated the air, and the attendants wore costumes that nobly took their parts in the riot of color.

Mrs. Allen B. Laing was in charge of the tea room. Assisting her, at the heads of the tables, were Mrs. David Randall, Mrs. S. F. Weaver and the Misses Marion McCutchen, Elsie Brokaw and Helen Phillips.

The other features and those in charge of them were as follows:

Useful articles booth, Miss Adelaide Ball, Miss Laura Long and Mrs. Everett Murray; cake table, Mrs. Frank French and Mrs. William Faber; candy table, Mrs. T. U. Dudley, Miss Nellie Valiant and Mrs. E. T. Wilson; grab-bag, Miss Hallie Vandeventer and Miss Margaret Long; gypsy fortune tellers' tent, Mrs. Harry White and Miss Case; pumpkin pie guessing competition, Miss Irene Miller; shooting gallery, where contestants threw little balls at the gaping mouth of a papier mache lion's head, Mrs. C. W. McGee and Miss Daisy Elsberg; silhouettes gallery, Misses Edith Tracy, May Shreve, Maud Honeyman, Kate Overton and Elizabeth Curtis.

At 4:30 o'clock a Punch and Judy show for the entertainment of the children was conducted from the stage. It was in charge of Miss Mabel Vandeventer and Miss Margaret McCutcheon.

The committee in charge of the affair is composed of Miss Margaret McCutcheon, Miss Mabel Vandeventer and Mrs. H. C. White. Silver Cross Circle has thirty-five active members and about half that number of associates.

BOY SERIOUSLY HURT BY FALL DOWN STAIRS

CLARENCE VAN SICKLE UNCONSCIOUS ALL NIGHT FROM BRAIN CONCUSSION.

Clarence VanSickle, fourteen years old, son of J. W. VanSickle, started downstairs to the cellar of his home, on East Third street, at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon with a lighted lantern. Somewhere between the top and bottom of the stairs he lost his balance and fell headlong.

Mrs. VanSickle heard the boy cry out and ran to the cellar. She found Clarence huddled at the foot of the stairs, unconscious. He was too heavy for her to carry and she ran to the street for help. John Apgar, a night watchman on his way to work, answered her appeal. Between them they carried the boy upstairs to bed, and Dr. Endicott was summoned.

The doctor said Clarence had concussion of the brain. The boy is in a serious condition. All night he alternated between unconsciousness and stupor. He was very little better this morning.

The lantern that Clarence carried when he fell did not damage.

MURDERER LONG TO HANG

Negro Caught Near New Market Found Guilty of Killing His Rival.

PRISONER UNMOVED

Jury Out Four Hours—Cunningham His Victim — Story of the Crime.

Charles Long, the negro who blew the head off his rival, Matthew Cunningham, with a shot gun, at Trenton, last July, and who was captured at New Market by the Plainfield police, was convicted of murder in the first degree, last night. The jury which had heard the evidence in the case retired at 6 o'clock and returned at 9:55. Long was brought to the room from his cell and heard the words of the foreman without any display of emotion, although he watched every action of the jurymen with eyes lowered, head drooped and his body relaxed. The verdict, if carried into execution, means that Long must expiate his crime on the gallows.

As previously stated in The Daily Press, the contention of Long's counsel, W. Holt Apgar, was that the shooting had been accidental. Yesterday afternoon's session of court was devoted to hearing the prisoner's testimony. He recited the facts of the killing in detail but claimed that when he picked the gun up the trigger had been drawn back by someone and that it was discharged without his touching it. The prosecution broke down his statement at several critical points and though Long maintained his composure, his story did not help him any. It differed in many respects with that told by the Jenkins woman, over whom the men had been quarreling, and other witnesses in the room when the shot was fired.

In summing up for the State, Prosecutor Crossley said Long was guilty of murder in the first degree and went over the testimony to show that the prisoner with malice aforethought had shot Cunningham. The charge to the jury was delivered by Justice Reed.

The killing was a brutal affair and when Long fled from the scene of the crime, the whole State was asked to be on the lookout. The fugitive made his way to New Market, where he had frequently been employed and was finally cornered, after a week's chase, on the farm of Frank Van Nuis by Chief Kiely, Detective McCarthy and Patrolman Higgins, of the local force.

RANDOLPH PERKINS TO BE HOUSE LEADER

UNION COUNTY ASSEMBLYMAN SLATED FOR JOB BY REPUBLICANS.

The second day when all the senators and assemblymen who could get to Trenton were gathered in the State House there yesterday but emphasized the impression that the result of the Republican caucus for organizing the one hundred and thirtieth Legislature will be as follows:

President of the senate, William J. Bradley, of Camden; leader of the senate, Senator Hillery, of Morris; speaker of the house of assembly, Samuel K. Robbins, of Burlington; leader of the house, Randolph Perkins, of Union.

Assemblyman Perkins came up rapidly in the gossip yesterday and because of the great popularity of the man, as well as because of his ability, he is the likely choice of the Republican caucus.

There were many legislators down, including Senator Ackerman, of this city, and the Union county members of the assembly.

FINACEE IS SHOT; MAN'S THROAT CUT

NOTE INDICATING MURDER AND SUICIDE MAY BE ASSASSIN.

Waverly, Ill., Nov. 22.—Clement Gray was found dead and Miss Nettie Rogers mortally wounded early yesterday at the latter's home, where neighbors and Night Watchman Abree were attracted by a woman's screams and gun shots.

Miss Rogers was lying in the front yard with a gunshot wound in her cheek and marks and bruises on her body. A shotgun, with the stock broken off, was found beside her. She was clad in a night dress. Gray's body was found in his bedroom. His throat was cut from ear to ear by a razor stroke. There was no light in that room or in the house. He was fully dressed.

In a gun case was found a hastily scrawled note reading:

"Good-by! I am going to leave this world. Thank God, I can take somebody with me. We were engaged to be married and I was ready to do my part, but she failed to do her part. When she saw the gun she began to call me 'darling' and asked me not to shoot. It was too late. This is the last you will ever know of either of us.

"CLEMENT GRAY."

Coroner Spencer, of Murrayville, conducted an inquest, and the jury decided that Gray had shot Miss Rogers, then, fearing she was not dead, had beaten her body with the shotgun till he broke it, and had then gone into the house, wrote the note found in the guncase, and then cut his throat.

This theory is not shared by all the neighbors, many of whom believe a double murder has been committed by somebody jealous of Gray's intimacy with Miss Rogers.

Miss Rogers is not dead, but has not regained consciousness, and doctors say she cannot live. She is twenty-nine years old and very comely. Gray was a year younger. They were known to have been engaged and to have had several slight quarrels. Last night they were in the parlor together till after 11 o'clock, playing on a piano and a violin.

DR. EVANS TELLS HOW TO ASSIST THE INSANE

THEY SHOULD BE HUMANELY CARED FOR' SAYS MEDICAL DIRECTOR.

Morristown, Nov. 22.—Dr. Brittin D. Evans, medical director of the State Asylum for the Insane at Morris Plains, Sunday gave a talk before a large gathering of men and boys in Association Hall at the Y. M. C. A. His topic was "Insanity in its acquired and hereditary forms; ways to prevent its development and how to prevent its increase." He cited as the principal cause of hereditary taint the excessive indulgence in alcoholic drinks and narcotic drugs, excesses and the intermarriage of families tainted with mental and nervous instability.

He advised against the inordinate use of alcohol and drugs, recommended legal restrictions regulating the intermarriage of persons into families clearly tainted with hereditary insanity, and that the pupils of both sexes in all public schools and colleges should be taught to inquire into the family peculiarities of persons whom they thought of marrying. Further, that divines of all denominations should instruct their congregations that the marriage ceremony, the matter of a man taking unto himself a wife, or a woman accepting the hand of a man who is to be her husband and the father of her children, should be entered upon with thoughtful care that shall insure to them the fact that their companion is a person of good mental and physical health, properly balanced in mind and calculated not to transmit to succeeding generations ill health in any form.

Dr. Evans also entered upon the psychological side of the proposition, showing what mental health means. In order to help our brothers and sisters who are afflicted because of hereditary transmission, or acquired irregularities of mind and nervous system, they should be humanely cared for, and he added that true statesmanship, Christian philanthropy and religious charity prompt us to provide for those who are unable to raise their hands and voice in their own behalf. And, further, he said, clean citizenship, true manhood, magnanimous legislation and statesmanship does not consist in doing that which shall subsequently react to help the so-called statesman and politician. To be moved by such motives is to simply do something for political expediency, whereas true Christian charity means the promotion of legislation that will help our afflicted brethren, and do it without any thought of advancing selfish interests.

HER MAMMA A MODEL SAYS HER POLITE BEAU

BUT AFTER FIFTEEN YEARS' COURTING GUERTIN IS SUED FOR $10,000.

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 22.—Alleging that Joseph Guertin, of Holyoke, had courted her for fifteen years and then married another woman, Miss Louise Buerton, of Chicago, testified yesterday in a $10,000 suit against Guertin for breach of promise. The defendant broached the subject of marriage, Miss Buerton says, twelve years ago. He called two evenings a week, gave her a diamond engagement ring and told her he was saving his money. Miss Buerton prepared for marriage on three occasions. The defendant pleaded for a postponement, stating that his business affairs were unsettled.

"What did Guertin do when he called upon you?" asked Miss Buertin's attorney.

"The same as other men do—stayed to dinner and said if I was as good to him as my mamma he would be a happy man," answered the plaintiff demurely.

Guertin last called upon the plaintiff in February. A few days later Miss Buerton read a newspaper announcement of his marriage. Guertin's attorney said that it would be shown that Miss Buerton, referring to Guertin, had said she "would rather marry a bum than a gambler."

Lyman H. Howe's world famous pictures will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight. They are superior to any attraction of this kind ever sent on the road.

The James H. Wallick Amusement Co. will offer as the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night the startling, thrilling, greatest of all melodramas, the famous sensational play, "When London Sleeps," written by Charles Darrell, the well known English author. It is a play with a record of one thousand nights in London, England, which alone ought to be enough to convince the ordinary theatregoer that there must be some merit back of such a play. It has been played in the United States for the last four years, touring only the largest cities from coast to coast. It is a play that appeals strongly to ladies and children and is a good moral lesson to every human being. The play is in four acts and eleven scenes and each and every scene is replete with startling scenic surprises.

"When the World Sleeps," the latest of scenic sensations, which comes to the New Plainfied theatre Saturday night, is spoken of as a play and production with many startling surprises and contains much that pleases the lover of melodramatic sensations. The scenes shown are many and varied, and the principal climaxes are reached at the "old mill" when a daring rescue from fire is made and later the burnt ruins of the mill with its dying embers, glowing coals and wonderous effects produced by electrical devices, show a picture that for realism has seldom been equalled.

Elmer Walters' "A Thoroughbred Tramp," which appears at the New Plainfield theatre Monday night, carries a thorough equipment for the presentation of the play. Much pains have been taken to make the new third act (the hospital ward for the feeble minded) natural and picturesque. "A Thoroughbred Tramp" unquestionably excels all other dramas of its class and certain it is that the comedy element is more hilarious. T. Rush Thompson is one of the most humorous character parts ever conceived, and though but a vagabond, the character carries prestige with the refined theatregoer.

Love and courage against trickery and treachery have a bitter struggle in "Big Hearted Jim," and the beautiful romance of the pretty school teacher and the brave Montana sheriff, Jim Saxon, is told with unerring skill. The play is a mine of gold of true comedy and big nuggets of the best humor are discovered. A talented company makes the many remarkable characters live. It appears at the New Plainfield theatre Thanksgiving afternoon and night.

BEN EVANS APPOINTED.

Made Engineer and Janitor of New High School.

The city Board of Education has formally appointed Benjamin Evans, of the Jackson building, engineer and janitor at the new Plainfield High School. He was selected from a list of fifty or more applicants because of his fitness for the position. Mr. Evans is a young man, at present employed as a machinist at the Scott Press Works, and met all the requirements demanded by the board. He will enter upon his duties December 1.

Work on the new building is being pushed with all possible vigor and it will undoubtedly be ready for occupancy by January 1. All the contracts for the furnishings have been let and little remains for the board to accomplish before the pupils are in their places.

WOMEN EMBRACE JUDGE IN COURT

IMPLORE MERCY FOR CONVICTED WRITER OF INSULTING LETTERS.

Danville, Va., Nov. 22.—Rome T. Chandler was convicted Monday in the United States District Court of sending obscene letters through the mails to prominent society girls of Virginia, and was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. Judge McDowell said only the failing health of the young man saved him from a term of ten years.

When sentence was delivered the aged mother of the prisoner and his young sisters fell upon their knees before the judge, begging for clemency for the son and brother. The girls fought their way to the bench and throwing their arms around the judge's neck wept and begged until they were forcibly taken out by the court officials and the judge fled to his chambers. The women waited outside until court adjourned and followed Judge McDowell to his hotel, crying piteously and begging for clemency.

Evidence developed no excuse for the letters except on the ground that Chandler is a moral degenerate. None of the women to whom the letters were addressed was made to appear in court.

BRIDE-TO-BE SEES SWEETHEART DIE

CORONER TO INVESTIGATE THE MYSTERIOUS DEATH OF JOHN BURKE.

So unusual and mysterious is the death of John Burke, of No. 430 Fourth avenue, Brooklyn, who died Monday night at the home of Miss Tillie Casey, of No. 208 Eighth street, Brooklyn, who was to have become his wife next week, that the coroner of Kings county has ordered an investigation.

Burke, who was a trusted clerk in the employ of the Stamford Manufacturing Company, of Manhattan, went shopping with Miss Casey yesterday. The young couple made all sorts of purchases for the new home they were going to live in after their marriage.

They were a happy couple when they went to Miss Casey's home Monday night. Both were in the best of health. Burke had eaten dinner with his sweetheart, when he suddenly complained of illness. He became so weak that a messenger was sent for Dr. George B. Fielding. The young man suffered agonies, with pains in his chest and stomach, and before medical aid came he was dead.

Dr. Fielding gave it as his opinion that death had been caused by acute indigestion, but he reported the case to the coroner and the investigation was set in motion without delay.

Miss Casey is completely prostrated over the death of her fiance.

The Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will meet on Tuesday night, November 28, and listen to an illustrated talk on "Above, Below and Between the Magic Circles."

Plainfield, N. J., November 22, 1905.

Judging from the evidence submitted, the big life insurance companies are charitable institutions, the real beneficiaries of the policyholders' money being the Republican party and a few who do the "inside job."

"Odd that the great effort of evangelists to save New Jersey," says the Philadelphia Record, "should get its start so soon after the Republicans so effectually 'saved the State.'" Another instance of a "psychological moment."

Union county will figure conspicuously in the next Legislature. Assemblyman Randolph Perkins will be the Republican leader of the House, and Senator Ernest R. Ackerman will be one of the strong men in the upper chamber.

FIRE AT THE 'PLAINS.

Large Barn on the Hollingsworth Place Completely Destroyed.

The large barn on the property of Loftus Hollingsworth at Scotch Plains, was destroyed by fire, yesterday morning. The origin is a mystery, although the owner believes it was caused by tramps dropping a match in the hay.

Frank Huigler, an employe on the Hollingsworth place, discovered the flames just as they were breaking through the roof and gave an alarm. The 'Plains fire department turned out but the structure was beyond saving when they reached the scene. The men devoted themselves to getting out the contents on the ground floor, which included a horse and several wagons.

The building was insured but the amount falls far below the actual loss.

AT MONROE AVENUE.

Last Night's Special Meeting Conducted by Rev. Geo. B. Mooney.

Rev. George Mooney was again in charge at the special praise service at the Monroe Avenue church, last night. The attendance was large and much interest was manifested, two in the gathering signifying their intention of accepting Christ.

No meeting will be held tonight because of the union missionary meeting at the First M. E. church. They are to be resumed tomorrow night and the last will be held Friday. The interest in the gatherings has been spreading and it is thought good crowds will attend the conclusion.

Splendid Programme.

The oratorio evening which is to be given at the First M. E. church tomorrow night by the combined choirs of the First M. E. church of this city, and the Presbyterian church, of Westfield, was given in Westfield last evening before a large and enthusiastic audience. Miss vanN. Willis and Mrs. Stephen H. Tugwell were the vocal soloists and added fresh laurels to their already enviable reputation as singers. Miss Florence Wohlfert pleased greatly with her violin selections and was obliged to respond to an encore after the second number. The same programme will be given here tomorrow evening under the auspices of the Brotherhood of the First M. E. church.

Unity Lodge's Guest.

Past Deputy Grand Chancellor W. D. Quick, of Somerville, a candidate for grand outer guard, will visit Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias, tomorrow evening. Members of Perseverance Lodge have been invited to attend the meeting.

Novel Surprise Parties.

JAPANESE ENTERTAINMENT SCORED GREAT SUCCESS

Y. M. C. A. COSTUME MUSICAL A BRILLIANT AND PICTURESQUE AFFAIR

The musicale held by the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A., at Y. M. C. A. Hall, last night, was a decided success from every standpoint. Miss Aimee Louise Emmons, the elocutionist, in whose hands the affair was placed, arranged a striking programme under the title of "A Japanese Entertainment." It afforded unlimited enjoyment to a large audience.

The programme included drills, songs, recitation, a monologue and instrumental selections, with bright colored costumes and calcium lights giving frequent touches of the spectacular.

The drills were the principal features of the Japanese numbers. In a parasol drill the Misses Florence Fowler, Grace Woolston, Ida Engelhardt, Jessica Hill, Arline Brown and Catherine Peacock took part. The lantern drill was acted by the Misses Marguerite Woolston, Elsa Schwed, Alice Peacock, Helen Wooley, Bernice McClintock and Ethel Neumann. Miss Emmons arranged both drills.

Recitations were rendered by the Misses Arline Brown, Marguerite Woolston, Elsa Schwed, Alice Peacock, Bernice McClintock, Ethel Neumann, Helen Wooley, Florence Fowler and Ida Engelhardt.

Mrs. Ida Humpstone sang a Japanese song, "Yama San," with choral support. The chorus was composed of the girls who took part in the drills. Mrs. Humpstone, the reciters and those in the drills were in Japanese costume. The different colored slides of the calcium light produced a brilliant effect on the dresses.

Miss Bessie Robeson, in costume, delivered a monologue of tragic trend called "Cherry Blossoms." Miss Robeson is a professional entertainer and rendered her number with force and finish.

The instrumental selections were played by the Sagamore Musical Club. They scored their usual success.

After the entertainment a sale of icec ream and cake was conducted by the women of the auxiliary in the small hall. The hall was prettily decorated with Japanese lanterns. The refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. J. W. Gavett, Mrs. C. A. Zabriski, Mrs. George M. Rittenhouse and Mrs. Nelson Hull, assisted by other members of the auxiliary.

dren are better able to do for themselves after the rest and recreation.

After the report was received and filed, Hugh F. Fox took occasion to speak of its completeness, saying that he considered it a model one, filled with terse and convincing state ments. Dr. W. H. Murray also added words of praise for its excellence. This completed the business of the evening, and Rev. Dr. G. B. Wight, the new commissioner of the Department of Charities and Corrections, was introduced and made an address, an account of which will be found in another part of The Daily Press.

GEORGE GUNTHER DEAD.

Cancer of the Throat Ends His Life.

George Gunther, aged about thirty-five years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Gunther, of the East End, died at the home of his parents this morning. Death was due to cancer of the throat. Mr. Gunther was born in Finderne, and when a lad moved to this city, where he liver the rest of his life. For several years he was employed as coachman for W. J. Buttfield, of North Plainfield, and about a year ago he gave up this position to accept a similar one with the Plainfield Cab Company. He was employed there until a short time ago.

Masons Exemplify Work.

Right Worshipful District Deputy W. D. Wolfskeil, of the Fifth Masonic District, made his annual visitation to Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., last night, when the degree work was exemplified to the entire satisfaction of the district deputy, who took occasion to commend the lodge upon its excellent showing.

Her Condition Still Critical.

Miss Florence Marsh, of Madison avenue, who was suddenly attacked with spinal meningitis a week ago, is still in a critical condition. Two physicians and a trained nurse are in attendance. Monday night a specialist from New York was called in consultation and everything possible is being done for the patient.

Is Your Bedding in Healthy Condition?

If not, see our mattress man and have him renovate and make over your old hair mattress, so that it will look like new. Many think it all right to have their mattresses cleaned at home, because they feel sure they'll get back their own hair. But a mattress cannot be made healthy by simply picking the hair apart and allowing the dust and dirt to remain. By our improved sanitary method it comes in contact with heavy blowers that force out every particle of dust and dirt.

DESPERADO ROSE NOT CAPTURED BY MURPHY

WAS ROUNDED UP LAST WEEK BY JERSEY CENTRAL MEN.

Several newspapers throughout the county yesterday, told in startling headlines of the capture of Fred Rose, the young desperado and pal of "Dutch" Ides, crediting his arrest to Detective Murphy, of the Elizabeth force. The story originated in the fertile brain of some imaginative reporter as Murphy had nothing to do with taking him in custody beyond escorting him from Somerville to Elizabeth. His captors were Mike Laveratt and Frank Gaffney, of the Jersey Central's detective force; Detective Holly, of the Lehigh Valley, and Detective Totten, of Somerville, who bagged him among the five men caught last Thursday for robbing a freight car.

Rose tried hard to get away and would have succeeded but for the pluckiness of Laveratt, who chased him through the woods and swamps at Lincoln, finally landing him after the two had fought hand-to-hand in a mud hole. He then gave his name as Sam Willis, of Paterson, but the officers soon recognized him as the Elizabeth desperado and boon companion of Ides. He had not participated in the actual robbery of the car, only taking some of the goods from the others, but knowing that he was wanted by the Union county officials on four indictments, Chief Dougherty, of the Central force, turned him over to the Elizabeth department. He had been confined at Somerville and all Murphy had to do with the case was to go after him when sent for.

The other prisoners taken for the car robbery gave fictitious names but have since been recognized as "Scotty" Fisher and Richard Dunn, of Elizabeth; Frank Clark, of Scranton, and Frank Johnson, address unknown. They will be turned over to the Mercer county authorities for trial, the robbery having occurred within its boundaries. Since the men were captured Laveratt and Gaffney have recovered forty more sweaters included in the booty and which was hidden in a tool box west of Lincoln.

BANK PRESIDENT GUARDED.

Gwinner's Home Besieged Since He Paid Poor Depositors.

Pittsburg, Nov. 22—At the request of Frederick Gwinner, Sr., president of the insolvent Enterprise National Bank, special officers are guarding his home. Since the publication of the statement that he had paid $177,000 to poor depositors out of his private resources his home has been besieged night and day by depositors and others in search of financial aid.

Francis J. Torrance, who is interested with W. H. Andrews in the Santa Fe Central Railroad, denies the statement that the road brought about the failure of the Enterprise Bank. There was no politics in the railway, he says, and its success was in no way contingent upon the admission of New Mexico as a State.

Q. E. D.

Residents of Plainfield, N. J., are all by the ears and the town's country club is divided into two sections over the question of Sunday golf. Thought this had been all settled legally. Can't see any ground for controversy anyway. Let those who can't play golf desist and those who can play golf just play at golf on Sundays. Perfectly easy.—N. Y. Evening Telegram.

in an institution so that they will not have the care of them. He said that the State takes good care of its unfortunates but has no room for such persons. In speaking of graft, Dr. Wight declared that he had seen none of it, and he praised highly the character and efficiency of the officials of the various institutions in the State.

After his address, on motion of Dr. W. H. Murray, a vote of thanks was given to Dr. Wight and Hugh F. Fox spoke words of praise of his work, adding that no one need have any fear but that this department will be well cared for.

THEY MUST NOT FLIRT.

Jersey City Health Board Will Reprimand Couple Caught a-Spooning.

Charges that a young physician and a nurse at the Jersey City Hospital had been guilty of flirting were before the Health Board of that place Monday evening. Rumors that the internes and nurses had been observed holding each others' hands and spooning recently reached members of the board, and Drs. Lambert and William Delaney were appointed a committee to investigate.

The committee reported Monday evening they had found trustworthy evidence that the rumors had a basis of truth, and a specific charge of holding hands was made against Dr. McIneny and Miss Donegan, a nurse.

The report recommended that the physician and nurse should be reprimanded.

Dr. Hespe moved to amend that the two be dismissed, and Drs. Dickinson, Gray and McLaughlin and Commissioner George McCarthy voted with Dr. Hespe.

City Physician Joseph M. Rector made a plea for clemency, and Dr. Gray changed his vote, defeating the motion by a vote of five to four.

A motion that the Hospital Committee reprimand the guilty young persons was defeated and the recommendation of the investigation committee was adopted. This puts the reprimanding on the investigating committee, which, according to the regulations of the board, is the milder method of reprimand.

MOTHER GOES TO JAIL TWICE ON PRINCIPLE

WINS FIGHT AND HER SON WON'T BE VACCINATED.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Nov. 22.—By serving two terms in jail, Mrs. Victoria Moulton, of East Lemon, Wyoming county, has defeated the efforts of the school authorities to vaccinate her thirteen-year-old son, Fay. She was released at the expiration of the second term on Saturday night, and today declared her intention of going to jail again rather than consent to the inoculation of her son.

In avoiding the vaccination she will not be allowed to send him to school. This in itself is a violation of the Compulsory Education law; but it is the duty of the school district to enforce the law, and no effort will be made to do so in this case.

MOTHER OF FOURTEEN COMMITS SUICIDE

DESERTED BY HUSBAND, SHE FINDS LIFE'S BURDEN TOO HEAVY.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—After thirty years of married life, Mrs. Marion Frank was deserted by the father of her fourteen children. Then her oldest son came home intoxicated, a condition in which she never saw him before. She wrote a note to her husband, kissed her children and committed suicide by taking Paris green. It was a surprise to the neighbors to learn two weeks ago that husband and wife had quarreled, and Mr. Frank had gone away. For days the wife appeared heart-broken, awaiting his return.

"He will come back—I know he will come back," she kept repeating.

But the days lengthened into weeks, and although the children searched for him to persuade him to return no tiding came of the missing husband and father. The family is in good circumstances.

WALES'S NOTE TO LILY LANGTRY BRINGS $25

WRITTEN BY PRINCE TO ACTRESS REQUESTING MEETING.

A friendly letter of Edward VII. of Great Britain, written while he was Prince of Wales to Lily Langtry, was one of the interesting autographs sold yesterday by the Merwin-Clayton Company, East Twentieth street, New York. The letter is written on one page of Marlborough House paper, 12-mo size, in the upper left-hand corner of which is the Price of Wales' crest. The letter reads as follows:

Saturday.

Dear Mrs. Langtry:

Should you be sitting to Mr. Pennington at 1 tomorrow, I should be delighted to come and see the picture.

Will you kindly let me have a line by bearer, if that day and hour would suit you. From yours very sincerely, A. E.

Accompanying the letter was a plain white enevlope with this address in Edward VII.'s handwriting: "Mrs. Langtry, the Prince's Theatre." The item sold for $25.

DEATH DOESN'T STOP SUIT.

Breach of Promise Case to Go on Although Plaintiff is Dead.

Asheville, N. C., Nov. 22.—Attorneys in the breach of promise suit brought by Miss Nola Burgess against G. Frank Cannon, a well known clubman of Concord, N. C., say that this suit will be brought to trial notwithstanding the death of Miss Burgess, which happened a few months ago. It was expected that with Miss Burgess' death the matter would be dropped, but it is said that it was her wish that the suit be continued. The affair has created much interest owing to the social prominence of both the parties.

Miss Burgess asserted that young Cannon has broken off their engagement and became engaged to another girl, whom he has since married. The suit is to be heard in the Federal Court in Asheville.

NIP IT IN THE BUD.
First Appearance of Dandruff a Forerunner of Future Baldness.
That such is the case has been conclusively proven by scientific research. Prof. Unna, the noted European skin specialist, declares that dandruff is the burrowed-up cuticle of the scalp, caused by parasites destroying the vitality in the hair bulb. The hair becomes lifeless, and, in time, falls out. This can be prevented.
Newbro's Herpicide kills this dandruff germ, and restores the hair to its natural softness and abundancy.
Herpicide is now used by thousands of people—all satisfied that it is the most wonderful hair preparation on the market to-day.
Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

WHAT IS WORN.

Surplice styles have lost none of the popularity they enjoyed in early spring and summer; in fact, they've become even more popular than before.

Curiously enough, they can be juggled with so as to be successful for almost every type of figure. Made on a tight boned foundation, with just a little fulness, and that judiciously arranged, a surplice dress makes a large woman take on slimmer lines, yet can be treated so that fills out too slender a figure in the prettiest possible way.

For suits gray worsted will lead. There are two distinct types of these worsteds; the tight, hard twisted suitings, such as men wore in their spindy-spanky sack suits this last summer, and that with the soft finish.

There must be a hundred different styles and variations of the checks, plaids and stripes that are almost invisible, yet give such individual and distinct beauty. One has a plaid an inch or so in weave, forming a curious single section from the "Wall of Troy" design. In the light the effect is absolutely fascinating and absolutely illusive. Another has a small check outlined in a delicate green—you can't tell it is green, but the indefinite quality this particular shade gives to the check is charming.

Chemisettes of real baby Irish lace are among the most attractive of the new neckwear from Paris.

Waistcoats and cuffs trimmed with bright gilt braids, laid on white broadcloth, are worn with almost any color.

NOT TO WEAR WOOL.

Wool, in its natural state, seems to be a very poor protection for the animal that grows it. No animal is more sensitive to cold, no animal has weaker lungs. "To die like sheep!" How common the expression.

"Woolen underwear is almost universally worn." Quite true; but that does not necessarily argue in its favor. "Colds," also, are almost as universal as are the wearers of woolen underclothing.

"Woolen underwear is warm." Quite true. It is too warm for either summer or winter weather. It overheats and then chills the body with its moisture. It is suposed to be a non-conductor of heat. So it is when perfectly dry, but that condition does not long prevail.

Wool retains moisture longer than any other material, therefore should not be worn next to the skin. Wrap a piece of ice in a woolen cloth and it will be protected as long as the cloth remains dry, but when it becomes wet the ice will melt rapidly, says the Boston Traveler.

The woolen underwear theory is fast dying out, so are those that advocate it, so are those that wear it. A false theory may be adopted and followed and obtain for years, yet the theory may be wholly at variance with facts.

About wool as an outer garment—the very fact that wool is a slow absorbent renders it the very best material for overgarments, especially in humid climates and seasons where protection is required from the atmospheric moisture. Remember that the outer clothing should be a poor absorbent of moisture; the underclothing a good absorbent, therefore the very commendation of the one is the stronger commendation of the other.

Are you afraid to lay aside your flannels and adopt something else simply because you have always worn flannels? Treat this as you would or as you should any other bad habit. Cast them aside. Displace the old unhygienic garments with the hygienic ones.

Society, Sport and Health Go Hand in Hand.

As a winter resort for health, sport and social charms, Lakewood is unsurpassed. The hotels are magnificent structures in the Georgian or Colonial style, capable of entertaining at least three thousand guests, a number equal to the population of the village itself. There are four or five of palatial dimensions, replete with reception rooms, ball rooms, dining rooms, smoking rooms, cafes, bookstalls, brokers' offices, telephone and telegraph connections. But the greatest features of all are the sun parlors and sun galleries that surround three sides of every building, offering a promenade in some cases a quarter of a mile in length. The sun parlors are heated by steam, the sunlight enters through semi-transparent curtains of colored silk, and the temperature is that of a day in June. They are furnished with heavy, soft carpets, cozy chairs and couches, and offer nothing less than an environment of the most luxurious repose. One of the larger hotels has added to its other appointments an equipment for the practice of hydrotherapy, which has proved to be of great value in treating nervous troubles. The Lakewood booklet, published by the Central Railroad of New Jersey, is replete with information of interest, including descriptions and rates at the various hotels and boarding houses. Write for this booklet to C. M. Burt, G. P. A., Central Railroad of New Jersey, 143 Liberty street, New York City.

The Iron Brigade

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Freyne," Etc.

Copyright, 1902, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

A shout had gone up one day on the Rappahannock when the word went the rounds that Fred Benton was back. Suddenly had he appeared in their midst just before Chancellorsville, and royal was the welcome they gave him.

But Benton had changed, said they, as a result of the first week of watching. He had grown silent and stern, if not sour. He seemed filled with restless, feverish energy, and no sooner was the main army back from Hooker's first essay as chief in command, than he sought and obtained permission to go scouting with a small force of cavalry among the by-roads and lanes of the down-stream counties. Released and ordered to resume duty with that military modification of the Scotch verdict, "Not guilty, but—don't do it again," Benton came to the front, burning with wrath at the foe at the rear—a foe personal, official and professional, whom he felt must be McKinnon. He was not allowed to know at the time, nor to see until long after, the extent of McKinnon's intrigue against him or of its reaction on McKinnon himself. Only one officer witnessed the scene a week after the Chiltons, father and daughter, had been returned to the southern lines, when Stanton demanded of the major that he prove his case or thereafter hold his peace. He had "fooled away a whole month," said the secretary, "filled it with vague charges and failed on specifications." They sent him away, ostensibly to straighten out the legal tangle in Kentucky, not yet blessed with the benefits of martial law; then, when McKinnon was beyond reach, sent for Benton. Of course he did not see the secretary. A placid, baa-lamb, soft-spoken staff officer had been told what to say. Benton's associations had been—ah—unfortunately compromising, and, while his conduct on duty had not been called into question, at a time of such public peril the department held that its officers should be ah—be above suspicion, or at least show a disposition to relieve themselves from blame, and Capt. Benton's—ah—refusal to surrender papers confessedly given him by a confederate officer had added much to the gravity of the case against him. "What case?" demanded Benton, fiercely. "Well, perhaps that was putting it rather—ah—strenuously," said the officer. "What is meant——" "Oh, damn it!" burst in Benton, most improperly, "what is meant is that you know I've been accused without rhyme and reason—that you dare not let me meet my accusers, and you won't give me fair hearing," and for this inappropriate outburst he declined to apologize. For another week, therefore, it looked as though, after all, he might get a trial; but it ended in his being ordered to quit Washington forthwith, and to report for duty.

In heart, in pride, in spirit he had been sorely hurt. In heart by Rosalie Chilton's astounding accusation and the impossibility of getting the faintest explanation. After her impetuous outburst she had whirled about and rushed to the waiting carriage, demanding of the astonished major that he take her at once to the boat and, even in captivity, it seems, her imperial highness was wont be obeyed.

O what a day was that first of July!—warm, soft, sunshiny, the roads still puddly in places as from recent rains—no dust to choke the hurrying columns, no thick clay mud to clog the wheels or load the worn brogans.

Even before the earliest sunbeams came glinting through the eastward wood, Reynolds had called on his men; and they presently went tramping away northward between moist, smiling fields and orchards, heading for the distant towers of the quaint little Pennsylvania town. Somewhere up that charming valley their leaders knew John Buford to be, for he and his suntanned troopers had been thrown ahead to cover the advance and find the army of Lee, well known by this time to be concentrating to meet them.

Years and experience have taught the leaders of the Army of the Potomac something of the true use of cavalry, and there is no more of the blind groping of the old days. They know that Longstreet's whole corps is camping about Chambersburg, across the South Mountain range to the west. They know that Hill is between him and Cashtown, the first village of importance to the west of Gettysburg. They know that Ewell's foremost divisions have struck the line of the Susquehanna, only to be recalled to meet the spirited northward sweep of Meade's far-spreading corps. They know that these men of Reynolds lead the van of the main army, and will doubtless be the first to reach and back the cavalry when those searching horsemen find and tackle the foe. What they do not know is, that from west, northwest, north and northeast these converging columns are all headed for that same little Pennsylvania town, marching to concentrate on Gettysburg, and that this, the First corps of the Army of the Potomac, is destined within three hours to thrust square in between those swift-closing jaws, and compelled, as Buford says to his own men, to "fight like the devil" until the rest of the army can reach it in support.

In far better fettle and discipline is Lee's brave army than when it tried the conversion of Maryland ten months before. Only in two points is it less to be feared—Stonewall Jackson is dead and Stuart's cavalry is as good, or bad, as lost. For once in his life that brilliant and daring leader of horse is of no use to his commander. Through some error of judgment he has gone far to the east and has been cut off from communication. For once the Army of the Potomac has its eyes and its wits at the front when the eyes, at least, of the Army of Virginia are away to the rear. At breakfast time in Gettysburg, this morn of the first of July, Heth's division of A. P. Hill's corps of the Army of the South comes "bulging" ahead, without the accustomed screen of cavalry skirmishers, and is brought up standing by the challenge of Calef's light guns, planted squarely in the middle of the Cashtown pike, and the simultaneous uprising of squadron on squadron north and south of the road—Devin's and Gamble's gallant brigades of famous John Buford's division—and there, like a bulldog Buford holds them two mortal hours, until Reynolds, with his foremost men, comes spurring up the eastward face of the brigade, joins Buford at the old Lutheran seminary, and notes that the main lines of Heth's division, north and south of the pike, are just forming for advance to the attack in force—all that preceded having been the work of strong skirmish lines—and now begins in grim earnest the greatest and most momentous battle of American history.

First to reach the field in support of Buford's hard-fighting Horse is the First division of the First corps of the old Army of the Potomac, and the first brigade to come swarming up the slope is led by old graybeard Cutler, whom we saw at the head of the Sixth Wisconsin in its maiden battle on the Warrenton pike, while, following close at the heels of the foremost and, obedient to Reynolds' orders, breasting the height to the south of the seminary, stride the five battalions of the Iron Brigade, the biggest not quite 500, the others barely 300 strong. White-haired Wadsworth rides at the head of the little division. That's all there is of it—these two brigades, led by those two far western brigades, barring the batteries that ever go with them—but the blue-blooded old Gothamite in command swears he wouldn't swap it, small as it is, for the strongest division in the whole army—and he means it.

MOUSE IN BONNET DISTURBS CHURCH

MUSIC WAKES UP RODENT AND LATTER PUT CONGREGATION IN HYSTERICS.

Marion, O., Nov. 22.—Sister Wallace Wynn, wearing a hat that had been in a hand-box during the week, occupied a pew in the centre of Wesleyan Avenue church Sunday. She did not know that a mouse had made its nest between the lining and the crown of the hat.

Scientists have long known the aversion of mice to music. This particular mouse submitted to the opening anthem and was undemonstrative during the offertory until the organist pulled out the diapson stop. As the rumbling basso notes filled the church the mouse squeaked and scampered through Mrs. Wynn's coiffure. She screamed and tore at her hair. The braids come down, the mouse dropped to the floor and Mrs. Wynn fainted.

Occupants of nearby pews caught sight of the mouse. Women throughout the congregation seemed to know intuitively what was the matter and several became hysterical. The Rev. Dr. C. E. Rowley restored order with great difficulty and proceeded with the sermon.

JACK LONDON MUST BE MARRIED AGAIN

AUTHOR HASTENED WEDDIMG A WEEK AND FINDS ILLINOIS DIVORCE LAW IN

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Because of his ignorance of a law passed by the last Legislature, forbidding the marriage of divorced persons in Illinois within a year, Jack London, the author, may find it necessary to re-marry Miss Charmion Kittredge, of Newton, Ia., who became his bride here Sunday. The same law is in effect in California, where London was divorced. The initial decree was issued Nov. 17, 1904, and the final decree Nov. 18, 1905. London assumed that the year commenced from the issue of the preliminary decree, but lawyers in this city declare that the divorce is not effective until the final decree is granted and that one year of probation must elapse after that time.

"I will get married in every State in the Union just as fast as I can get from one to another if it is necessary," declared London today. "It seems to me that as the new law in Illinois did not go into effect until last July it cannot affect my case."

The wedding was advanced a week for reasons which neither the bride nor bridegroom has explained. It was announced for next Saturday at the home of a friend of the bride in Newton, but last Saturday night London telegraphed Miss Kittredge to meet him in Chicago.

HE WEDS HIS WIFE FOR A SECOND TIME

SANITARIUM INMATE HAS CEREMONY PERFORMED WHICH PUZZLES FRIENDS.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 22.—John Van Auken, the Minneapolis speed maniac, who a few weeks ago compelled his chauffeur to run an automobile through the streets of St. Louis at more than fifty miles an hour, was today married by Justice Cronin to a woman known in the marriage license as Winnie May Warren.

An hour after the ceremony was performed Van Auken was back at the Mayfield sanitarium with his Minneapolis wife, who has been here nursing him for two weeks. Mrs. Van Auken indignantly denied that her husband had been married, yet the description of the bride tallies exactly with a description of Mrs. Van Auken, of Minneapolis.

The name given in the marriage license is said to be Mrs. Van Auken's maiden name. Hence it is believed that Van Auken was remarried to his own wife. He has been inviting his friends to attend his wedding for some time, and the theory of some of these friends is that Mrs. Van Auken consented to have a second ceremony performed just to humor him.

Mrs. Van Auken will not admit that this is true, and the sanitarium officials and friends of the pair are mystified.

Justice Cronin and his clerk, both of whom know Van Auken well, are satisfied that Van Auken was the man married.

Instructor Entertains P. H. S. Squad.

Lindsey Best, of the Plainfield High School faculty, and instructor and coach for this year's football team, entertained the members and subs at dinner, last night. The spread was given at Mr. Best's home in East Ninth street. Covers were laid for fifteen. Captain Douglass, on behalf of the team, presented Mr. Best with a handsome watch fob with a football charm and suitably inscribed. The rest of the evening was spent in reviewing the past season's successes.

William Ford, of New Brunswick, is visiting his parents on East Fourth street.

LEST YOU FORGET!

That Thanksgiving is coming, we gently remind you that gala attire is the order of the day. Everybody wants to look his best and turn out spick and span in honor of this most American of all holidays. No need of new clothes either when those you already possess can be made by an expert cleaner to look "better than new." Not an empty phrase that, but a fact, for the garment that's turned out by an up-to-date cleaner looks as if it really belonged to the wearer and loses the too-too apparent "newness" of the "just out of the shop" suit or gown.

Suits, Overcoats, Gowns, Jackets—in fact, every article of personal attire, we cleanse "in your own time," and in a manner unequalled for beauty and finish.

The funeral of Dr. Myron A. Carman was held from his late home on Franklin place yesterday afternoon, with a large gathering of relatives and friends in attendance. The service was in charge of Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church. Two solos, "Crossing the Bar," and "Lead, Kindly Light," were sung by Rhys Thomas, of the Crescent Avenue choir. GIRL ACCOMPLICE.

She Is Only Ten Years Old; Her Companion One Year Older.

Emma Heinrick, ten years old, of Paterson, who was before Judge Scott in the Juvenile Court there last week on a charge of stealing a coat and was allowed to go under suspension of sentence on promising to behave herself, is again under arrest, this time charged with several burglaries committed in the Dundee section of Passaic.

About 1 a. m. yesterday Patrolman Dorahey, of that city, caught her and a boy robbing Joseph Field's store, at No. 117 Second street, where they got $5 and several small articles. The girl's companion was John Loksak, eleven years old. They got into the store through the girl lifting Loksak up so he could crawl through the transom and drop into the store. Then he unlocked a side door for her to enter.

The young burglars were locked up and confessed that they had another companion, Johnnie Dooley, nine years old. He left then earlier in the night after they had visited several other places. He was found.

It has been learned the children robbed Andrew Maguth's saloon, taking fifty bottles of whiskey and a lot of cigars.

The police still are plying their investigation. The three young culprits have confessed. They were committed to jail on charges of burglary without bail to await the action of the next Grand Jury.

FINDS SISTER AFTER 50 YEARS.

Child Kidnapped by Organ Grinder Returns a Widow.

Montclair, Nov. 22.—After a search of fifty years, Thomas C. Paddock, of Vernon, Essex county, has succeeded in locating a sister who disappeared from Vernon a half century ago. At the time of her disappearance his sister was six years old. An organ grinder kidnapped the child. Although seen with her in various parts of the State, he escaped detection, and finally all trace of him was lost.

Advertisements inserted in papers all over the country brought no tidings of the missing child.

The girl drifted westward and grew to a woman there. She had a dim recollection, however, of the scenes of her childhood, and it was this slight memory that resulted in finding her relatives.

Mr. Paddock in a letter received from his sister learned that she had married, her husband's name being Smith. Her husband and four children died twenty years ago at Silver City, N. D.

Mrs. Smith's parents have been dead twenty-five years.

Funeral of Thomas Curren.

In St. Mary's church this morning funeral mass was conducted over the body of Thomas Curren, who died at his home on East Second street, Sunday. Rev. Father Delehanty was in charge, and a large gathering of friends attended. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery, the pall bearers being Michael Callahan, John Finley, Michael Harrington and John Ketch.

Taken Ill in Store.

Mrs. John W. Pitts, of Leland avenue, employed as a saleswoman at The Fair on West Front street, was taken violently ill in the store yesterday afternoon. Following a severe hemorrhage, she was assisted to L. W. Randolph's drug store, where she suffered another attack. Owing to her condition, she was removed to the hospital at once. Today she was reported improved.

Sesame Club Meeting.

The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow morning at the residence of Mrs. Frank Howland, 417 Kensington avenue.

Mrs. Peter Lund, of East Sixth street, was taken to the Polyclinic Hospital, East Thirty-fourth street, New York, yesterday, for the purpose of having an operation performed.

PLEASANT AFFAIR HELD BY TRINITY CHURCH MEMBERS LAST NIGHT.

FOUR BLOWN TO BITS.

Smokeless Powder Laboratory Destroyed—Superintendent Perishes.

New Brunswick, Nov. 22.—Four men were killed by an explosion in the laboratory of the International Smokeless Powder Company, at Parlin, near Sayreville, yesterday afternoon. The victims are John Price, of South River; Frank Spratford, of Sayreville; John Applegate, of Sayreville, and L. W. Redpath, superintendent of the laboratory.

While the four were at work in the laboratory about 4 o'clock there was a sudden explosion, which shook the surroundings like an earthquake. Flames shot rom the room, and in an instant the whole building, which was detached, was in flames. The fire spread to a second building, and although the fire department connected with the plant used every effort to check the flames, both buildings were totally destroyed. The main buildings of the plant were not destroyed. The force of the explosion tore the men to bits. Two buildings were burned.

Frank Spratford was a widower with one child, and, like all the others killed, was well known in South River and Sayreville. John Applegate was married a short time ago to Lena Rankinbach, of Sayreville. John Price is the son of Ebenezer Price, of South River. He leaves a wife and two children. About two months ago he underwent an operation for appendicitis in the Wells Memorial Hospital, in this city. It was only yesterday that he returned to his position in the laboratory of the powder works.

Mr. Redpath was a bachelor, and lived at the Parlin Club, where many of the officials of the works lived. He came here three years ago from Providence, R. I.

The exact cause of the explosion is unknown, except that it was caused by chemicals. Unusual precautions had always been taken at the works to prevent any accident, and South River was wildly excited over the news.

WOMAN PLAYED THE RACES.

Lost, and, Becoming Despondent, Tried to End Her Life.

Mrs. Daniel Munn, thirty-five years old, of Third and Warren streets, Harrison, attempted suicide yesterday afternoon by swallowing laudanum. As soon as she took the poison Mrs. Munn says she thought of her two children and concluded she did not want to die. She hurried to the office of Dr. Marcus F. Squire, who gave her emetics, after which she was sent home in care of her husband.

When asked why she had made an attempt on her life, she said she had been advised by a friend "to play the races" and was given a "sure thing." She mortgaged a house she owned in Brooklyn and played the "tip," which finished among the "also rans." This made her despondent.

EFFORTS FOR MISSIONS

M. E. Church Women's Society of Elizabeth District Reviews Its Work.

MRS. McCREA, PRES'T

All Told $1,739.40 Raised During Year—New Societies Formed —Some Addresses Made.

Interesting reports of the past year's work were presented at the annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, Newark Conference, Elizabeth district, held in the First M. E. church yesterday afternoon and evening. The meeting opened at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. F. P. Du Rie, the president for the past year, was unable to attend, and in her absence Mrs. J. H. Knowles, of New York, conference secretary, was in the chair, and conducted the devotional exercises. Rev. A. C. McCrea, pastor of the church, gave the address of welcome, and Mrs. Knowles responded.

Mrs. J. Lillibridge, of Roselle Park, presented the treasurer's report, showing the receipts to date to be $21.77, and the expenditures the same. She also read the report of the corresponding secretary. During the past year ten new auxiliaries were formed, making a total of forty-six. In addition there are thirteen Young People's Societies.

The banner society is at St. James' church, Elizabeth. This society supports six orphans, provides three scholarships, contributed $75 to the Young People's work in China, pays two shares toward Miss Strowe's salary as a missionary, supports a Bible woman, and raised $367. All of the members but three are self-supporting. The other auxiliaries throughout the district gave encouraging reports also.

The reports showed that the auxiliaries raised $1,227.33, and the Young People's Societies $512.07, making a total of $1,739.40. In the entire Newark Conference $8,456 was raised for foreign mission work during the year. This financial review was conducted by Miss E. L. White, conference treasurer.

An interesting talk was also given by Mrs. E. Sanger, conference superintendent of special work, who told of the large meeting of all the branches of New York, Brooklyn and New Jersey held in Brooklyn last month. She gave an excellent report of the work being accomplished in all the various branches, which indicates marked progress in foreign mission enterprise. It is the intention of the Elizabeth district branch this year to contribute $500 toward the work of Miss Adams in China and $500 for the work in the Methodist College in Mexico City.

During the business of the afternoon these committees were appointed: Nominating—Mrs. J. H. Knowles, of New York; Mrs. J. C. Pierson, Mrs. N. W. Pike, of Plainfield, and Miss Denman, of Rahway. Resolutions—Mrs. J. Lillibridge, of Roselle Park, and Mrs. C. W. Parsons, of North Plainfield. Registration—Mrs. M. Winter and Mrs. E. Clark, Jr., of Plainfield.

After the adjournment of the afternoon session the members of the Foreign Missionary Society of the First M. E. church, assisted by members from other local churches, served supper to the visiting delegates.

Following a brief devotional service, led by Mrs. E. L. Winter, the evening session opened shortly before 8 o'clock, with the election of officers. The election resulted as follows: Honorary president, Mrs. B. F. Ham, Cranford; president, Mrs. A. C. McCrea, of this city; vice presidents, Mrs. E. Clark, Jr., North Plainfield; Mrs. Samuel Mackey, Elizabeth; Miss Waidman, Junction; Mrs. William Porter, Princess Bay, S. I.; Mrs. Andrew Henry, Clinton; Mrs. William Mitchell, Port Richmond, S. I., and Mrs. E. L. Lillibridge, Roselle Park; secretary of literature, Mrs. W. H. Stewart, Cranford.

Mrs. George Heber Jones, a Korean missionary, spoke of the field in which she worked. Her description of the life led by the Korean women in heathen households was most interesting. Miss Marguerite Ostrom, dressed in Korean costume, and a number of fetishes were used to illustrate the talk. Mrs. Jones sang a verse of "Rock of Ages" in Korean to give her hearers an idea of the language.

J. M. L. Harrow, who has worked for many years in the African field, spoke of that section of heathendom. He said, among other things, that Christians on this side of the world were pretty much the same as his uncivilized pupils at the bottom. The same general regard for superstition was discernible in America as in the African interior, he said. Carrying potatoes in the pocket to ward off rheumatism or nailing horseshoes up for luck was just about as bad in principle as worshipping fetishes.

ACCUSING GIRLS FACE GALBRAITH IN COURT

AGED MAN MUST ANSWER TO FOUR CHARGES BEFORE GRAND JURY.

Under four separate charges, John Galbraith, seventy-three years old, one of the five men arrested for misconduct with small girls, was held for the Grand Jury without bail yesterday afternoon. After a hearing before Justice Mosher in the city court Galbraith was the last of the men to be arraigned and held. His counsel, Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., insisted on a full hearing before the justice, in order to learn as much as possible of the State's case, and the prisoner was remanded twice until both sides were prepared to go on with the case.

The four charges were heard in full. The testimony took from 3 o'clock until nearly 6. No defence was put in, Mr. Hetfield refraining even from making the customary plea for dismissal. The testimony was the reverse of nice, scarcely a line of it could be quoted without gross offence against decency.

The charges under which Galbraith was held were made by Annie Ross, Rose Green, Kate Ennis and Mary Regan, through their parents. The girls, the eldest of whom is not more than fourteen, were compelled to tell the story of the alleged relations with Galbraith on the stand.

The testimony was taken down in shorthand by A. E. Kelly, a court stenographer, of Elizabeth. Assistant Prosecutor John English conducted the case against the prisoner. He followed Mr. Hetfield's example in refraining from addresses to the court.

FUNERAL SERVICES OVER AGED FRIEND

MANY PAY LAST TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF MRS. MARY L. FORCE.

There was a large gathering of relatives and friends at the funeral services of Mrs. Mary Laing Force at the old homestead on Watchung avenue, yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. Force passed away Sunday afternoon at an advanced age of nearly ninety-one years. She was a faithful and consistent member of the Religious Society of Friends, and attended the meetings until infirmities of old age prevented.

The large gathering was a beautiful tribute of respect to an aged Friend, who was held in high esteem. W. D. Williams, minister of the Society of Friends, Hicksite meeting-house, on Watchung avenue, opened the services with well chosen remarks. The speaker dwelt upon and commended the Godly life of the departed and said that he could but advise and urge allepresent to emulate her beautiful Christian character.

Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, followed Mr. Williams, offering a fervent prayer, in which he spoke tenderly of the loss of a loving mother and a Christian saint. He commended the bereaved ones to the loving Saviour, who doeth all things well.

There was a beautiful display of floral tributes, which nearly covered the casket, which were given by the family, the grandchildren, the sisters-in-law and Carl Peterson, a friend. The remains rested in a handsome black casket, lined with grey silk, which was in harmony with the religious belief of the departed.

Interment was made in the family plot in the North Plainfield cemetery. The pall-bearers were four grandsons—Theodore H. Hardy, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; John L. Force, of Elizabeth; Ernest A. Millard and Will F. Williams, of this city. At the grave Rev. Dr. Schenck recited the commitment service and pronounced the benediction.

Rev. E. E. Roberson will give the second of his series of special addresses to men at the Y. M. C. A. hall on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Subject: "Why Did God Suffer Man to Sin and Then Damn His Soul?" The Misses Burnet will render vocal and instrumental music; W. C. Leek, baritone, will sing. All men are invited.

VISITORS TO HIGH ART BURGLING EXHIBIT

CURIOSITY SEEKERS LOOK AT CRACKSMEN'S TOOLS AT HEADQUARTERS

A dozen or more curiosity seekers visited police headquarters yesterday afternoon to look at the burglar tools left behind by the cracksman who tried to rob John Keely's coal office Tuesday night. They were allowed to see the outfit, which is beautifully complete. It includes jimmies of all sizes and drills from one-eighth to four inches. The latter are worked by a belly-brace. The only thing the burglar didn't leave behind in his outfit was his nitro-glycerine.

"It is as fine a set of tools as any cracksman would want to set to work with," said one of the officers who knows something of high-grade thieves and their methods. "A machinist might turn his nose up at the belly-brace, but that is the only thing a cracksman can conveniently carry. He can't very well manage a ratchet. He gets pressure with a minimum sacrifice of convenience out of his simple brace by working it from behind a rubber pad strapped to his shoulder."

There is a general impression that burglars' tools are special and peculiar creations that must be made at some subterranean and secret forge. The tools are the same sort that honest, workaday machinists use. One could go into any ordinary machine shop and, knowing what to choose, pick up as complete a set of burglar tools as any cracksman would want.

BELIEVE MURDERER LONG WANTS TO KILL HIMSELF

GUARDS FIND LONG BLADED KNIFE IN HIS POCKETS.

Following his removal from the court room after hearing the jury's verdict, Tuesday night, Charles Long, the convicted murderer of Matthew Cunningham, was searched by the jailers. A big knife with a blade five inches long was found in his outside coat pocket. He had been searched before going into the court room and at that time did not have the knife.

It is believed while the prisoner was being marched through the crowd, a friend or some one in sympathy with his position slipped the knife to him. It is thought the prisoner has designs on his life and his guard has been doubled to prevent him making away with himself.

Long was given the freedom of the jail corridors for a time yesterday, but he was closely watched. He did not say much about the verdict, but it worries him, as he slept very little Tuesday night. His face also shows that he is troubled and he has, it seems, fallen away physically.

W. Holt Apgar, his counsel, will probably take the case before the higher courts for review, but Mr. Apgar would not say anything yesterday definitely about his plans.

Long will be sentenced some time next week, but just what day has not yet been decided by Justice Aeed. As soon as he is sentenced a death watch will be put on him.

TWO SMALL FIRES.

City Department Called Out Twice Yesterday Afternoon.

The city fire department was called out twice yesterday afternoon for blazes that threatened a lot of damage, but did little. The first was on a still alarm, and was in the rear of Jacob Cantor's store on West Front street. Boys playing in the yard started burning leaves and the flames spread to a fence and small woodshed. It was necessary to lay in a hydrant stream to put them out.

At 4 o'clock an alarm was turned in from box 48 for a fire in the yards of Frank Berry and Mrs. Catherine Manning, on Dunellen avenue. Burning leaves were again the cause, and before noticed had spread pretty well about the premises. When the department arrived, two woodsheds, one in each yard, a "shoot the chutes" affair erected for children, and the dividing fence were burning. The chemical engine and one hydrant stream were used, soon killing the flames. The damage will reach about $100.

Perseverance Arranges Celebration.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., will have met just 1,800 times when it holds its regular session one week from tomorrow night and in honor of the event the members have planned to give an entertainment. It will take place in its rooms in Odd Fellows' Hall, Babcock building, and will be in charge of a committee composed of Asa D. Pope, Joseph C. Blimm and William Mills.

—Do not miss the oratorio evening at First M. E. church tonight.

LEG VALUES DIFFERENT

Girl's Leg, Broken, Worth $1,000, Circuit Court Jury Rules.

MAN'S LIMB CHEAPER

A Male Leg, Cut Off, Valued at But $200 More Than a Female Limb, Damaged.

Standards of leg values have been set up by the jury in the Circuit Court at Elizabeth. In disposing of two damage suits, the jury made the curious ruling that a woman's leg, broken, was worth $1,000, and a man's leg, cut off, was valued at but $200 more. The suits were heard before Judge Heisley.

Miss Gladys Fitch, of Roselle, sued for compensation for the broken leg yesterday. Her action was against the Central Railroad. Last February, it appeared, Miss Fitch was walking along the railroad station at Roselle over a very precarious footing. Ice and snow made walking a matter of acrobatic skill. Miss Fitch fell and her leg suffered.

Testimony was given by the company to prove that the platform had been cleaned several times during the day and covered with sand, but the jury refused to consider anything but the undoubted fact that Miss Gladys had damaked a useful leg. They evidently figured that the defendant was fairly entitled to $1,000 for damage to her limb.

The clipped leg belonged to William Long, a mechanic. He sued his employers, the American Sanitary Company, of Elizabeth. His leg was cut off at the company's plant. He had his own idea of the value of the leg. He asked for $35,000. The jury evidently didn't figure on the same basis as the defendant. They could only see $1,200 value in the leg.

7TH DAY BAPTISTS HOLD HARVEST HOME

ENTERTAINMENT AND SUPPER THE TWO FEATURES OF AFFAIR.

Under the auspices of the Women's Society for Christian Work a annual harvest home supper and entertainment was held in the parlors of the Seventh-day Baptist church last night. The parlors were elaborately decorated in true harvest style, including vegetables, fruits, conrstalks and pumpkins, while each table was garnished with flowers.

The supper was served from 6 until 8 o'clock, and the menu was appropriate to the occasion. Those in charge were Mrs. Henry M. Maxson, Mrs. T. C. Smith, Mrs. David E. Titsworth and Mrs. Marcus L. Clawson. They were assisted by these waitresses dressed in Puritan style: Miss Ruth Maxson, Miss Ethel Titsworth, Miss Mary St. John, Miss Mildred Green, Miss Bessie Dunham, Miss Eva Rogers, Miss Etta Randolph and Mrs. Oscar Ellis. Mrs. William C. Hubbard was in charge of the waitresses. Mrs. F. A. Dunham was the cashier.

The entertainment proved to be an enjoyable one. A number of children represented several well known advertisements and the feature proved amusing. There were piano duets by Mrs. William C. Hubbard and Miss Jessie Utter, and a delightful number was a recitation by Miss Hannah Shaw, who gave one of Paul Lawrence Dunbar's famous selections in the negro dialect.

"A Story of Two Thanksgivings" was the title of a reading by Orra S. Rogers, who received hearty applause. The programme was combined with a piano duet by Mrs. W. C. Hubbard and Miss Jessie Utter, and the rest of the evening was spent in a social manner.

According to the usual custom, the annual Thanksgiving proclamation by the President was read by Prof. Henry M. Maxson.

The entertainment committee comprised Mrs. Asa F. Randolph, Mrs. Frank H. Smith and Miss Jessie Utter. A substantial sum was realized from the supper and this will be used for the work of the society which arranged the affair.

BELLIGERENT NEGRO STANDING TRIAL TODAY

HENRY SCHENCK ARRAIGNED ON COMPLAINT OF PLAINFIELDERS.

Henry Schenck, the Scotch Plains colored man who badly pummelled Thomas Kearns and Adam Dunham, of this city, at Scotch Plains last September, was placed on trial in the Union county court at Elizabeth this morning. He is charged with atrocious assault and battery by the two victims. He entered a plea of not guilty.

Kearns and Dunham, both young men, were walking down Park avenue, Scotch Plains, on the night of September 22, when Schenck bumped into them. Kearns asked if he wanted the whole sidewalk, and the colored man replied by striking him in the face, then seizing a stone and knocking him senseless. Dunham attempted to protect his friend, but Schenck pulled a picket from a fence and beat him to his knees. The assailant afterward jumped into a bean patch and hid while an officer who came running up placed the two Plainfielders under arrest.

One of them had to be sent home, being half unconscious, and the other was released when bail was furnished. When arraigned before Justice Clark, the magistrate discharged them, declaring they had been punished enough if they had been at fault.

Kearns and Dunham then preferred a formal charge against Schenck and the Grand Jury found an indictment.

FRED ROSE MAKES PLEA OF NOT GUILTY

DUTCH IDE'S COMPANION ARRAIGNED THIS MORNING.

Fred Rose, one of "Dutch" Ide's companions, who was arrested last week by Mike Laveratt and Frank Gaffney, of the New Jersey Central's detective force; Detective Holly, of the Lehigh Valley, and Detective Totton, of Somerville, was arraigned in the Union County Court this morning on three old indictments, found by the January Grand Jury. He pleaded guilty to all three and was remanded for sentence.

While Rose was not one of the gang that was caught rifling a freight car at Lincoln, he received some of the stolen goods. Rose tried to get away, but after a hard chase was caught by the detectives. At the time he gave his name as Sam Willis, of Paterson, but was recognized by the detectives as Rose and one of Ide's companions. It was known that he was wanted in Elizabeth, and Chief Dougherty turned him over to the Elizabeth authorities.

RECRUIT FOR TRAMPDOM.

Fourteen-Year-Old Louis Delucci Runs Away to Take to the Road.

Louis Delucci, fourteen years old, disappeared from his home on North avenue Tuesday morning. He is supposed to have gone on a tramping trip.

Louis threatened to leave home several weeks ago, after a quarrel with his father. Sunday night they quarreled again, and Delucci pere was not surpised when the boy failed to come home Tuesday night. No effort is being made to find Louis, and his father says he won't allow him to come back unless he promises to mend all his ways.

To Save the Trees.

G. H. Powell, a recognized authority on trees, has returned to his home here for a brief period, and is spending some of his time in examining the trees about the city. Councilman Murphy, chairman of the councilmanic committee on trees and lights, has been in consultation with Mr. Powell with a view of having many trees on the streets sprayed. Numbers of threes are being ruined by the scales, and Mr. Powell has a method of treating them that has proven to be most satisfactory.

Bullets for Watch Charm.

Patrolman Saffron, whose life was saved by a memorandum book that deflected the two bullets fired at him by a burglar Tuesday night, is saving the twisted bits of lead that so nearly crumpled him up. He will have them caught together by a gold band and wear them in the form of a watch charm.

Identifying Crook.

Chief Kiely and Officer Saffron went to New York today to look for the picture of the safe cracker who shot at Saffron Tuesday night in the Rogue's gallery. The Chief believes the man is a crook of much experience and that his face is pictured in the gallery.

—Splendid musical programme at First M. E. church tonight.

WOMEN WORK HARD FOR CHAPEL FUND

SOME PRESS TROUSERS, WHILE OTHERS MADE PIES AND CAKES.

For the purpose of receiving the dollars from the members of the Ladies' Missionary and Aid Society a meeting was held at Warren chapel last night. The money received in this way will go toward the furnishing fund for the new chapel to be built on Watchung avenue. The women took the initiative in starting the furnishing fund, each member being asked to contribute $1 and to tell how she earned it.

Considerable time was taken up last night by the contributors in telling their experience in earning a dollar. Some sold dusters, pressed their husband's trousers, sold bread, pies and cake, gave lessons on the sewing machine, addressed envelopes and delivered packages. Together with $20 given by the Young Men's Brotherhood of the chapel $116 was the total realized last night. This is only the beginning, as there are many yet to hear from, including the Sunday school, the Christian Endeavor Society and the men of the chapel.

In addition to the above work the women brought useful articles to be placed in the missionary boxes to be sent away soon. The women met at the chapel this morning to pack these boxes.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey was in charge of the meeting last night. A pleasing feature was the phonograph selections rendered by John T. Baker's machine and operated by Arthur Beebe. This was the entertainment of the evening.

SUNDAY GOLF MEETING TO BE HELD TONIGHT

BOTH SIDES DETERMINED TO CARRY THEIR POINT.

Members of the Plainfield Country Club who favor Sunday golf will make a determined effort tonight to win their point and open the course and clubhouse on Sunday. There will be a meeting of the club at the Casino for the purpose of voting on the proposed amendment to the constitution.

If the amendment is carried by a majority vote, the members favoring Sunday golf will consider it passed and will take advantage of this by playing on the course Sunday.

The constitution now provides that a two-thirds vote is necessary to amend, an deminent counsel has given an opinion that such a vote is legal. On the other hand, other counsel, equally as prominent, has given an opinion that a majority vote rules. Being unable to agree on this question, the members in favor of a majority vote are going to fight the thing out to a finish and let the courts decide it.

There will undoubtedly be a large attendance of members at the meeting tonight, as both sides are going to do their utmost to carry their point. While Sunday golfers have been working very hard to secure a majoirty vote, the antis have been just as busy, and an interesting time is anticipated.

It is understood that at the meeting only active members, those entitled to vote, will be permitted to occupy seats in the front and center part of the room. The meeting is intended for active members. If associate members are present they will be required to sit in the rear or in the gallery.

Load of Wood Overturned.

Owen Gavin, a driver for John Mobus, the Watchung wood dealer, was painfully hurt this morning while hauling a load down the mountainside on the Washingtonville road. The front wheels of the wagon struck a stump and the whole load turned completely over. Gavin was caught beneath it and besides getting struck by heavy pieces of cord wood was kicked by the horses. He was assisted to this home at Watchung by witnesses to the accident.

The VanEps Concert.

GET HOUSE FOR NURSERY

King's Daughters Union Lease No. 344 West Third Street For the Purpose.

ENGAGE A NURSE

Mrs. L. E. Bird to be Matron of Establishment—Institution to Open on January 1.

The day nursery committee from the City Union, King's Daughters, at its regular meeting this morning announced that the property at 344 West Third street, between Central avenue and New street, has been leased. It is expected to commence the work on January 1. Announcement was also made that Mrs. L. E. Bird, of East Second street, a trained nurse, has been engaged as matron.

The committee decided to lease the entire house, although at first only three rooms will be fitted up for the work at present, unless the demand should be greater than is expected. The house is leased with the understanding that the remaining rooms can be sub-let if the committee so desires.

Between now and January first, the committee will be busily engaged in preparing to furnish the house and secure cribs, cradles and other articles needed in a day nursery of this kind. It is expected that support for this work will not only be received from the King's Daughters, but the churches and other charitable organizations in the city.

As previously stated the work will be started in a modest way and with a view to conducting thte nursery on economical lines. Before possession of the house is taken some repairs will be necessary, such as repairing the roof and making some repairs inside.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH BUSINESS MEETING

ELECTION OF FAITH CHAPEL OFFICERS APPROVED.

Confirmation by resolution of the election of officers at Faith chapel, in accordance with the constitution of that branch of the First Baptist church, was a part of the business transacted at the First Baptist church business meeting, last night. The deacons and trustees were chosen several months ago, subject to the approval of the mother church, which was done last night.

The deacons chosen are L. W. Randolph, Frank Stewart and U. B. Crane, and the trustees are: C. W. McCutchen, president; E. L. Bonny, U. B. Crane, W. A. Conger and L. W. Randolph.

The complete membership role of the chapel was also presented and approved by the church.

Eight persons were received into membership of the church by letter and several on confession. Those received on confession will be baptized after the morning service on Sunday. There was a large attendance at the meeting, fully 200 persons being present, and considerable interest shown in the business of the evening.

Now It's a Missing Kitten.

"Ikey," a high bred Maltese kitten, pet of the firemen at headquarters, has disappeared from the ken of his friends. Ikey has been missing since Tuesday. He was one of a pair presented to the department two months ago by a wealthy man who admires the fire laddies. The advance notices of "Ikey and Abey" were being put out by the theatre at the time, and the names for the kittens were suggested. The firemen want Ikey back, because Abey is not lively and enjoyable without his brother. "They were broke double," says Tillerman Jack Mehl, "and they don't go well singly."

May Be Kiple's Body.

A telephone message received by Mayor Payne, of Millville, yesterday from the Atlantic City authorities says the body of a suicide found there is believed to be that of Alfred Kiple, the young business man who has been missing from his home in Millville since last Thursday. One of the young man's relatives will go to the shore.

No Cause for Alarm.

A case of scarlet fever, very light in form, in the Watchung School was reported on Tuesday. Dr. Dundon, of the borough Board of Health, immediately had the building thoroughly fumigated, so that no possible danger of contagion now exists from the condition of the building or class rooms.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY

Complaints are being made by residents and property owners over the untidy condition of Fifth street. The roadway has become overgrown with grass and underbrush, and presents a very uninviting aspect. A number of improvements have been planned by property owners and they feel that something should be done to make that work worth while. The attention of the borough authorities has been called to the matter by W. R. H. Hardingham, Edward Maurer, F. D. Baerman and Edward Pennock, all of whom are interested in property on the street. They have asked that the borough not only tidy up the street, but have water mains laid through. It is understood that their views will be met by spring. The water company is said to be willing to lay the mains and the Council can hardly refuse to do what is asked in the way of street work. If the street is put into proper shape by spring the complaining citizens will be satisfied.

Truancy is receiving the attention of the school authorities of the borough. In every department a certain amount of the evil is certain to crop up unless steps are taken to discourage it, and the school board has determined to save the borough from it by early moves of a corrective nature, although but one case is now under consideration. Supt. Meseroll is now working on that. The authorities have set themselves to take a stern stand against truancy, and parents will be held strictly accountable for their share of responsibility. At the next meeting of the Council the board will request that the borough marshal be appointed truant officer, and into his hands all cases of truancy will be placed for uncompromising suppression.

ONLY ONE "BEST."

Plainfield People Give Credit Where Credit is Due.

People of Plainfield who suffer with sick kidneys and bad backs want a kidney remedy that can be depended upon. The best is Doan's Kidney Pills, a medicine for the kidneys only, made from pure roots and herbs, and the only one that is backed by cures in Plainfield. Here's Plainfield testimony:

Andrew Mattis, carpenter, of 127 West Fourth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I have been troubled for years with dull backache and pain in the back of my head, caused by kidney complaint. I was hurt severely some time ago by falling from a scaffold and the physicians thought my spine was injured. I think that fall injured the kidneys. As nothing else that I tried seemed to help my back or kidneys, I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills and got a supply at Randolph's pharmacy. I have now taken nearly three boxes, and find that the backache and headaches have disappeared."

AMUSEMENTS.

A "thriller of thrillers" is the verdict everywhere of the James H. Wallick Amusement Co.'s production of the greatest of all melodramas, "When London Sleeps." It is from the pen of Charles Darrell, the renowned English author, and has had a run of one thousand consecutive nights in London, England, and is still playing there. It ran four seasons in this country and played nothing but the large cities, this year being the first it has been seen in the one night stands. It is a strong play, well written, well enacted and superbly mounted. There is a thriller in every scene and the climaxes are new and startling. It is a play for the ladies and children and during its New Yor krun at the 11th Street theatre so great was the demand from the ladies and children that extra matinees had to be given. It appears at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night.

"When the World Sleeps" will be the offering at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night, and it is said to have much in store for the lovers of realistic and sensational scenes. The rescue from the burning mill, the escape from the county jail, the chase of the fugitives, the midnight murder, the sleep walking scene and many minor scenes are said to be sufficient to gratify the most ardent lover of excitement. The scenic mounting of the entire production is claimed to be the most gorgeous as well as realistic, and it all adds to the great success thus far attained.

Among the many interesting scenes and situations in "A Thoroughbred Tramp" the new third act, that of the Hospital Ward is probably the most effective, where in three distinct scenes is shown the reception room, together with the male and female wards, with its patients strewn about, and where a poison plot is concocted and exposed to the full satisfaction of the audience. In the first and second acts comedy predominates, though the dramatic situations are strong, and in the last act much originality is displayed by the author in righting the wrongs of the innocent. "A Thoroughbred Tramp," which has been a continued success since its birth, will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre Monday night.

Madame Kalich has entered upon her second month in "Monna Vanna" at the Manhattan theatre, New York, and it is needless to say is enjoying the success that an actress of her exceptional abilities in a powerful and poetically beautiful play deserves. Although Madame Kalich had won fame in various other languages, and in an amazing number of plays, her quick adaptation to a new environment is one of the marvels of the theatre. It proves her artistic breadth, however, and on all sides her advent is hailed as a great gain to the American theatre, in which it is her highest ambition to continue. "Monna Vanna," too, has proved to be one of the most enthrallingly dramatic, as it was known to be one of the most poetically beautiful of dramas, and nightly at the Manhattan it satisfies all sorts of playgoers—lovers of the most objective of dramatic appeals as well as those who delight in poetry and philosophy as they relate to human emotions. It is doubtful if a more picturesque production than that made by Harrison Grey Fiske of this play has ever been seen on the American stage. The magnificent settings really bring to the spectator the scenes of mediaeval Pisa, while the large number of supernumerary figures have been so well selected and so scientifically drilled that they simulate the populace of that city and time with a fidelity remarkable of the theatre. But one matinee performance a week, on Saturday, is given of this play at the Manhattan.

"The Walls of Jericho," the great Alfred Sutro play in which James K. Hackett and Mary Mannering are now appearing together, in a limited co-star engagement at the Savoy theatre, New York, continues to fill to overflowing the capacity of that playhouse at every performance. Not in years has any play made the unprecedented success that has been the reward of "The Walls of Jericho," which is now in its third month in New York, and present indications promise it to be the leading attraction in that city for many months to come. One may be able to get a good estimate of the worth and value of "The Walls of Jericho" from the following extracts, taken from the opinions of the New York reviewers: "Scored an unmistakable success," Herald; "Mr. Hackett has the play of his life," Telegraph; "Capital dramatic material in the third act," World; "Scenes follow each other in a natural manner," Times; "Rises to a vitally interesting moment," Tribune. In addition to the regular Saturday matinee, a special Thanksgiving day matinee will also be given.

Plays of real merit are rarer than ever, but Klimt and Gazzolo, whose "On the Bridge at Midnight" brought them into prominence as managers, seem to have got another success in "Big Hearted Jim," the new comedy-melodrama, in which Mr. Klimt is seen this season. It is booked to be here Thanksgiving afternoon and night. The title role is that of a Montana sheriff who had and deserves the admiration of the entire community, even the Indians, and the part fits Mr. Klimt with wonderful nicety. It is set in a genuine atmosphere of Western life, like Augustus Thomas' "Arizona," and avoiding the cheaply sensational flavor. It rings true in its emotions, humor and lifelike characters.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

It requires experience to make good bread and that is why H. A. Voehl, of Somerset street, turns out the best to be had in the city. He has been engaged in the local trade for many years.

Plainfielders desiring shrubbery or plants for ornamenting their residence property, should send their orders at once to W. H. Forristell, of the Belleview Nursery. His stock is complete and he sells at a low price.

Watch the advertising columns every day for specials at T. P. Kolb's candy store. The goods on his counters are strictly fresh and second to none in grade or quality. Kolb makes a specialty of supplying candy in wholesale quantities.

The stock reducing sale at Hill & Shupp's store continues with great success, and if you are really looking for genuine bargains now is the time to get them. The firm, besides giving full values in every department, also tell you in their advertisements how you can get a ticket for the New Plainfield theatre.

Purity in teas, coffees, spices and dry groceries is hard to find in the avereage grocery store nowadays unless you are willing to pay a price that is practically prohibitive. How much more important is it, then, that you should buy all such at the A. & P. Tea Co. store, West Front street, where you are always certain of securing purity at fair prices.

AGAIN THE FATAL BONFIRE.

Child in Flames Carried by Mother to Doctor's Office.

Charles Breslin, three years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Breslin, of Passaic avenue, Nutley, died yesterday from burns received from a bonfire.

The child, with companions, was playing about the flames when his kilt skirt caught fire. The other children screamed for help, which brought Mrs. Breslin to the scene. She picked up the boy and started to run with him to the home of a physician, when neighbors told her to lay him down on the grass. As she did so Cornelius Crowley, who was passing, pulled off his coat and wrapped it around the child, extinguishing the flames, but too late, as the little one was then unconscious.

Trenton, Nov. 23.—It was announced yesterday at the State House that Governor Stokes in his massage to the next Legislature will treat exhaustively the question of corrupt practices in connection with elections and that he will make radical and, some respects, original recommendations in an endeavor to put an end to vote buying.

The Governor has made a study of the laws of other States on the subject.

Mrs. L. J. Denton, of Washington avenue, who sustained painful injuries recently by a fall at her home, is improving slowly. Her nose and right arm suffered the most.

THE NEW GATEWAY TO THE METROPOLIS

NEW JERSEY CENTRAL HAS A NEW STATION IN NEW YORK.

A generation ago New York's busiest corner was at Fulton street and Broadway. Old residents of the metropolis can recall the bridge that formerly spanned Broadway at this point, erected by the city so that pedestrians might cross from one side of the street to the other without endangering their lives by attempting to thread their way through the jam of vehicles that made Broadway at its junction with Fulton street almost impassable. The office buildings, the shopping district, the hotels and theatres in those days were all downtown within easy reach of the Liberty street ferry. To the business man whose office is located in the lower end of Manhattan Island this ferry is still the most convenient, but the uptown march of trade has created a demand for quicker access to the new business center of New York and this demand has been met by the erection of ferry houses on the North River at the foot of West Twenty-third street, from which point what is now the heart of the metropolis can be reached in a few minutes. Statistics recently compiled by the police show that New York's busiest corner today is at the junction of Fifth avenue and Thirty-fourth street. Within the territory bounded by Fourteenth street and Forty-second street are most of the hotels, theatres and department stores, as well as the newer office buildings. This busy section of the city can now be reached from New Jersey by way of the Twenty-third street ferries as easily and almost as quickly as can the downtown section of the city be reached by the older ferries. Twenty-third street is the new gateway to the metropolis.

Eighteen months ago The Suburbanite, describing the plans adopted for the improvement of the water front at the foot of West Twenty-third street, said: "Four railroads and the city of New York will unite to make this an imposing and convenient entrance to the city. Ranged along the water front side by side will be the ferries of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Lackawanna, Erie and Pennsylvania. Instead of each road having a distinctive ferry house, arrangements have been made by which all the structures will harmonize in general proportions and architectural treatment. It is the intention of the city to acquire the entire block bounded by Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets and Twelfth and Thirteenth avenues and transform this into a fine approach or esplanade. Another convenience that will be much appreciated by arriving passengers is an immense shed of iron and glass fifty feet wide, which will extend along the front of the ferry houses and under which carriages and surface cars may be taken without entering the open. In inclement weather this will add much to the convenience of passengers."

The new ferry house of the Central Railroad of New Jersey was begun in February of the present year, and was opened to the public in June while still in course of construction, and finally completed about a month ago. Of the four ferry houses at the foot of West Twenty-third street it occupies the extreme left. Next to it is the new building of the Lackawanna Railroad, with its tall tower, and beyond that the ferry houses of the Erie and Pennsylvania Railroads.

The Twenty-third street ferry house of the New Jersey Central is a two-story steel frame structure, covered with copper sheathing of ornamental design. No stone, brick or cement was used in its construction. It has a frontage of 100 feet and a total length of about 435 feet. Passing under the metal awning, or marquise, that projects beyond the facade of the building one enters a commodious lobby finished in quartered oak. Here are the ticket offices, express office, information bureau and telephone and telegraph booths. Under each ticket window is a shelf raised just high enough from the floor so that the passenger can deposit his valise upon it without stooping when purchasing his ticket. This is a little thing in itself, but significant as indicating how the comfort of the traveler has been considered in the construction of the building even to the minutest detail.

Passing through the lobby just described one comes next to the main waiting room, a spacious hall finished, like the lobby, in quartered oak and with a lofty, paneled ceiling. The setteees and news-stand are of hardwood harmoniziing with the interior finish of the room. To the right of the news-stand a door leads to the women's waiting room, beyond which is a toilet with walls of gray marble and floor of terrazza, a kind of mosaic. At the opposite end of the waiting room is the men's toilet, which is reached by passing through the smoking-room. On the second floor of the building on a level with the upper deck of the ferry-boat is another waiting room, almost as large as that just described. Both waiting rooms are provided with heating and ventilating apparatus of the most approved pattern, the temperature of the rooms being kept uniform by means of automatic regulators.

Emerging from the waiting room to the platform leading to the boat the casual observer will notice nothing unusual in its construction, but to civil engineers this part of the building is apt to prove the most interesting of all. Seemingly an integral part of the edifice, it is as a matter of fact a unit in itself. It is built in sections and under the iron strips that cross the roadway at intervals are powerful springs, which convert the whole landing stage into a huge bumper that receives the impact of the boat ,reducing the jar to a minimum.

The section of the landing stage nearest the boat—known technically as the bridge—is not constructed on the usual pontoon principle, but is raised and lowered mechanically without reference to the tide. Heavy metal weights on either side counterbalance the weight of the bridge, which is close upon one hundred tons, so that very little power is required to operate it. A pull on a wire rope sets the machinery in motion and the bridge is raised or lowered in a moment to the deck level of the incoming boat, with the same ease and accuracy that an elevator boy stops his car at the floor where one wishes to alight.

Leaving the boat passengers pass out to the right of the waiting room along a smooth, asphalted walk. Alongside this walk is the roadway for teams, floored with creosoted wood block, forming a durable and almost noise-proof pavement. At the end of the roadway nearest the street are two baggage rooms, one for the outgoing, the other for the incoming baggage. The express office is also located in this end of the building, while at the other extremity of the ferry-house, close to the landing stage and under the same roof is the cab stand. Here electric cabs and coupes are always in waiting. This service, operated by the New York Transportation Company, conveys one or two persons anywhere within a radius of a mile from the ferry-house for fifty cents. For one dollar two persons may go from the foot of West Twenty-third street east to the ferries at the foot of East Thirty-fourth street, north to the Grand Central Depot, south to Washington Square, or to any of the hotels, theatres or shops that lie within the territory bounded by the points named. The same points, or indeed any part of the city, may be reached more cheaply, if not quite so quickly, by taking one of the crosstown cars at the door of the ferry-house and transferring to the proper uptown or downtown car.

More than 600 electric lamps are used in lighting the new ferry-house of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, not counting those employed to form the huge initials—C. R. R. of N. J.—that at night from the facade of the building flash a friendly greeting to the homeward bound suburbanite.—(From the Suburbanite of December.)

LEST YOU FORGET!

That Thanksgiving is coming, we gently remind you that gala attire is the order of the day. Everybody wants to look his best and turn out spick and span in honor of this most American of all holidays. No need of new clothes either when those you already possess can be made by an expert cleaner to look "better than new." Not an empty phrase that, but a fact, for the garment that's turned out by an up-to-date cleaner looks as if it really belonged to the wearer and loses the too-too apparent "newness" of the "just out of the shop" suit or gown.

Suits, Overcoats, Gowns, Jackets—in fact, every article of personal attire, we cleanse "in your own time," and in a manner unequalled for beauty and finish.

AN UP-TO-DATE DIRECTORY.

"I want to look at your directory a moment," he said to the drug clerk as he started for the telephone booth. "The directory is over in that corner," was the answer, as the attendant indicated an entirely different direction. The other caught up the telephone book and, after a glance through its pages, made a note and started out. On the way he paused at the soda fountain for a drink, and explained to the clerk: "The telephone book is the only directory that is absolutely correct and made so every few months. Now I'll wager that you have an old directory on that stand." "Yes," assented the clerk, "It is the one for 1903." "Precisely, and my friend moved up this way some four months ago. If I had looked in your directory I should have been sent up to Harlem, but I knew that he had a telephone, and the quickest way to find him was through the telephone book. Even the latest directory would not have that address."—New York Sun.

Robs Telephone Booth.

Rahway, Nov. 23.—A daring robbery was committed some time Sunday night in the Pennsylvania Railroad station here. A thief entered the automatic telephone booth in the waiting-room, forced open the telephone with a hatchet and abstracted the contents. As the money had not been removed for some time it is believed the robber made a good haul. It is thought that perhaps Frank Ides, who recently escaped from the Rahway Reformatory, may be the one who did this slick job. The telephone booth is alongside the Postal Telegraph office in the men's waiting-room.

Thanksgiving Day Dinner for Poor.

Miss Sara Curry, matron of the Little Missionary Day Nursery, 93 St. Marks place, New York City, is planning to give Thanksgiving dinners to 500 families on the East Side, New York. Donations of funds, fruits, vegetables or anything that will help to make the dinner complete will be gratefully received. Many of these families will have nothing unless they are helped by Miss Curry. Last year 319 such dinners were given in New York.

GAS KILLS MAN IN HOTEL.

Body of Lodger Found in Elizabeth Hostelry.

Elizabeth, Nov. 23.—In Sigmund Welt's hotel, 1000 Elizabeth avenue, here, a man, who registered at S. S. Robinson, was found dead in his room early yesterday morning. An open gas jet indicated the case was evidently a suicide. The man, wha was about forty-five years old, came to the hotel November 6 and engaged a room by the week. He did not eat at the hotel, but took his meals elsewhere.

The maid who had charge of the upstairs part of the hotel had not seen him since last Thursday. She reported this to the proprietor and also that the room door was locked. The proprietor, however, supposing the man was away, paid no attention to this. Two men called at the hotel Monday night and asked for a furnished room. The proprietor remembered then that Robinson's week had expired and thinking he had left the place gave the girl a key and told her to open the room.

His lodger was found lying dead across the foot of the bed and partly undressed. From the condition of the body the man had been dead at least three days. The body was removed to Marten's morgue and word sent to the county physician at Fanwood, who will make an investigation. In the dead man's pocket was found a letter addressed to Samuel Killough, 253 Morris avenue, Elizabeth. The letter was dated February 17, 1904, and was from William Killough, a brother of Samuel.

There is no such person at that number given as Samuel Killough, but a man of that name is a gardener on Salem avenue, in Union township. The letter, however, threw no light on the mystery as to where the dead man belonged. Nothing was known about him at the hotel, nor have the authorities as yet been able to learn anything.

FOR FAIR DISTRIBUTION.

Congressmen Asked to Support Bill for Change.

Adjutant General R. Heber Breintnall yesterday wrote to the ten New Jersey representatives and two United States senators calling their attention to the new bill drafted by the executive committee of the Interstate National Guard association for presentation to Congress at the next session.

The proposed act seeks to rectify the manifest unfairness of the distribution of moneys to the national guards in the different states upon representation in Congress, and provides that the moneys shall be divided according to the strength of the national guards in the different states. Under the bill New Jersey would get much more money than at present, and under the proposed $2,000,000 appropriation instead of the present $1,000,000 distribution this State would be materially benefited.

The manifest unfairness of these moneys being distributed according to the congressional representation of a State is easily seen, when New Jersey, with twelve congressional representation, get $26,000, as does North Carolina, with the same congress representation, yet New Jersey has nearly 5,000 men, has $1,250,000 of the people's moneys invested in armories and appropriates $150,000 annually for the support of the national guard, while North Carolina, getting just as much money under the Dick law, has but 1,800 men in its national guard, has no money invested in armories and appropriates but $10,000 for the support of the guard.

Texas has eighteen representation in congress, gets $45,000 under the Dick law, has no moneys invested in armories and appropriates but $15,000 for the support of its guard.

In other words, the distribution of moneys under the Dick law according to a state's congressional delegation means that states having few men in its guard, no moneys invested in armories and appropriating but a nominal sum for the maintenance of its guard, get more money than a state which properly supports its guards.

The new bill is being pushed in the interest of the national guard in states where local pride gets money for its support.

$1,100 FOR BROKEN JAW.

Carl Weck, of Elizabeth, Wins Suit Against Brother-in-Law.

Elizabeth, Nov. 23.—The jury in the $5,000 damage suit brought by Carl Weck, of this city, against his brother-in-law, Hugo Baum, charged with breaking Weck's jaw with a blow of his fist and which case was tried Monday in the Union County Court, came in with a verdict of $1,049 for the plaintiff, which, with the costs, will amount to more than $1,100.

It developed in the trial that after Weck had spent seventeen weeks in the hospital he was discharged uncured, as when the physicians tried twice to set the broken jaw the patient was attacked with heart failure and nearly died on the operating table. The operation in consequence had to be given up.

Charles H. Schermerhorn, manager of the local Western Union Telegraph office, has been detained at home a few days by illness.

Frank Kean, of Dunellen, who was injured in the trolley accident on West Front street, last week, is steadily improving at the hospital.

Football may be a dangerous sport, but a glance at the statistics will show that it is a tame pastime compared to hunting.

The people who want to see a statue of Quay placed in the Pennsylvania State capitol grounds can find precedent in the statue of a devil recently erected in Ohio.

Because a number of voters were "disfranchised" at the recent election owing to their failure to properly cut their ticket on the voting machine, an exchange cries that the device must go. It will be admitted, however, that the trouble was with the voter and not with the machine.

They take their recreation seriously in Plainfield. John W. Griggs, John E. Parsons, R. V. Lindabury and William B. Hornblower have been called in to rule on the proper interpretation of the golf club's by-laws. The Federal Supreme Court may be appealed to and the Hague Tribunal will be invoked as a last resort.—Perth Amboy Chroncile.

According to Amboy's standards, Plainfield's way of engaging expensive lawyers to settle difficulties is most strange. As the evangelistic propaganda of the State includes our sister city, there is still hope that it will become civilized sooner or later.

Mr. Harrow spoke in strong condemnation of tobacco smoking and chewing. He said it was no cleaner for men to smoke or chew than for women. He thought that a good many men would stop using tobacco if their wives and mothers began a general indulgence in it. He painted a pleasant little picture of a wife shifting the frying pan to clear her mouth of tobacco juice into the fire.

Collection, a resolution of thanks for the entertainment of the delegates, and benediction by Dr. McCrea brought the meeting to adjournment.

JERSEY CLAY LOOKING UP.

South Somerville Farmers Approched by Capitalists.

South Somerville, Nov. 23.—There is a well founded rumor afloat in this vicinity to the effect that one of the largest brick industries in the East will soon be located here, and that several acres of land hereabout has been purchased by a big syndicate now located at Patton, Pa., manufacturing brick and tile. The land throughout this section contains an abundance of clay, which is said to be the best quality for brick and tile purposes. During the past week several farmers have been approached by Philadelphia and New York real estate men and have been made good offers for the purchase of farm land that heretofore has been of but little value.

An official of the Lehigh Valley Railroad told a reporter that surveys for side track facility were being made in this vicinity, but for what purpose he did not know. He said, however, that it was very likely some industry had located here, as the company would have no other reason for providing side track facilities except for the accommodation of an industry of some kind. The clay belt covers an area of four or five miles from a point near Hillsborough. It goes as far west as Roycefield on the Central Railroad, then extends quite a distance south of here.

MANY SPECTATORS TO SEE JUDGES IN GOWNS

FIRST TIME IN HISTORY THAT COURT APPEARED IN FLOWERY GOWNS.

New Jersey's Court of Errors and Appeals made its debut at Trenton yesterday in black silk judicial robes. It was the opening of the November term, and the fact that for the first time in the history of the State the justices were to don the long flowing garments had been heralded broadcast. As a result, the opening was the most formal in the history of the court. There was a crush of spectators present, including a number of ladies, mainly relatives of the justices.

The court proceeded at once to the call of the calendar, which, with some cases added today, had more than 130 cases for argument. When fifty-seven cases had been called Chief Justice Gummere moved that the call of the calendar be suspended. He pointed out that the court now has more than forty-five cases undisposed of from other terms, that answers had been received from as many more on the present list, of which twenty-three had been marked ready for trial, nineteen submitted on brief and eight to be tried after a certain date.

The court, he said, had more on hand than it could dispose of, and no good purpose would be served by undertaking additional work at this time. Justice Dixon objected to dispensing with the call. Admitting that the court was far behind, he did not think there were sufficient cases for oral argument to consume the thirteen days comprising the present term. He added that, in his judgment, the entire thirteen days should be spent in hearing cases.

Chief Justice Gummere replied that he failed to see how litigants would benefit by having cases argued which could not be decided for a year. The motion was lost by a 2 to 1 vote, and the call was continued.

SUFFRAGE DELEGATES.

State Organization to Be Represented at National Meet.

Newark, Nov. 23.—Delegates to the annual convention of the National Woman's Suffrage Association were elected Tuesday afternoon by the New Jersey branch, which met in Union Hall, Orange. The national body meets in Baltimore next February, and those who will represent the State officially are Mrs. Francis Bariqht, of Cranford; Mrs. Phoebe Wright, of Sea Girt; Dr. M. F. De Hart, of Jersey City; Mrs. James M. Meeker, of Newark, and Dr. Mary D. Hussey and Mrs. George W. Blackwell, of Orange. The alternates are Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Plainfield; Dr. Laura M. Wright, of Ocean Grove; Mrs. Anna B. Jeffrey, of South Orange; Mrs. Joseph Surtees, of Manasquan; Miss Gertrude Heulings, of Trenton, and Mrs. F. S. Hunt, of Newark.

The convention pledged itself to contribute $77 to the National Suffrage Association as its share toward the $3,000 needed to carry on a woman's suffrage campaign in Oregon. The work has been undertaken by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, the national treasurer, and it is necessary to secure the names of 8,000 votes in order that a petition may be presented asking for an amendment to the constitution, allowing women to vote.

MINING COMPANY ORGANIZED.

Plainfielders File Articles of Incorporation with Secretary of State.

Charles Bullman, J. Fred MacDonald and George F. Opdyke, all of this city, are the incorporators of the Colombian Mining Exploration and Trading Company, which filed articles with the Secretary of State yesterday. It is capitalized at $100,000, divided into 100,000 shares at a par value of $1 each. The object for which the corporation is formed is mining and quarrying in all parts of the United States, Colombia, Panama and other countries.

Mr. Bullman is a miner of many years' experience and only recently returned from the Southwest, where he had been engaged for a long time.

An All Star Vaudeville.

Manager Counihan has booked Dickson's All Star Vaudeville show for appearance at the New Plainfield theatre early next month. The numbers on the bill include Charles Dickson & Co., Charles Wayne, Troja, Leah Russell, Wood Brothers, Gracelyn Whitestone, The Great Zeno, Beckey & Lester and as an extra attraction, Mrs. Goldfinch and company of five in "For Society's Sake." The company has been meeting with great success throughout the East.

Is Your Bedding in Healthy Condition?

If not, see our mattress man and have him renovate and make over your old hair mattress, so that it will look like new. Many think it all right to have their mattresses cleaned at home, because they feel sure they'll get back their own hair. But a mattress cannot be made healthy by simply picking the hair apart and allowing the dust and dirt to remain. By our improved sanitary method it comes in contact with heavy blowers that force out every particle of dust and dirt.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Rev. J. A. Cubberley has resigned his pastorate of the South Plainfield Baptist church, to take effect the coming spring or sooner, completing a period of more than ten years. After graduation at Colgate University he was pastor a few years in New York State. Then followed a pastorate of eight years at New Market, after which he was pastor of the Memorial Baptist church of Toledo, Ohio, coming from there to South Plainfield in 1895. A number of the ablest members of this church have died in recent years, while other have moved elsewhere, leaving the church in a weak financial condition. Mr. Cubberley's plans for the future have not yet been made.

John Higgins has been employed as baggagemaster at the Lehigh Valley Railroad station.

TRUTH IN BUSINESS.

Amos H. Van Horn's Latest Move Proves that Truth Is More Profitable Than Fiction.

There appeared lately in the press the announcement of Amos H. Van Horn's personal and business plans for the incoming year, which for frankness and candor is unprecedented.

It seems that Mr. Van Horn, on account of his advanced years, decided to reduce his immense stock of furniture and carpets, and in consequence started out by selling his store property to the Chelsea Realty Company. He then inaugurated a "removal sale" to effect the desired stock reductions. This was found to be an utter impossibility in the meagre time allowed, and Mr. Van Horn was compelled to lease the property from the new owners for another year, which will allow Amos H. Van Horn, Ltd., to accomplish their object.

For forty-five years Mr. Van Horn and his associates have had the people's confidence and the recent announcement in no way lessened the respect and estee min which they have been held. It breathed frankness and truth from end to end, in fact, truth in business and advertising has been the success of his extremely successful business.

Needless to say that the great store at 73 Market street, Newark, is filled to its capacity with those taking advantage of the low prices on everything in the store, and holiday time being at hand, makes the price reductions very acceptable.

REAL ESTATE CHANGES.

Sales and Rentals Reported by Mulford Agency.

Through the agency of Armstrong, Mulford, real estate broker, of North avenue, these sales and rentals have been made since November 1:

Wilson, of North Plainfield, and will erect a fine house on the property in the near future. Mrs. M. B. Tennant has purchased the property now occupied by her at 750 Kensington avenue. Louis V. P. Wilson has purchased the property at 1007 Watchung avenue. Rev. E. E. Franke, of Burlington, N. J., has rented the property at 726 Kensington avenue. Mrs. de Maziere has rented the property at 78 Mercer avenue, and C. C. Morton, of Titusville, N. J., has rented the property at 48 Mountain avenue, North Plainfield.

Unique Evangelistic Parade.

New Brunswick, Nov. 23.—Two thousand school children paraded yesterday, led by the Rev. W. E. Biederwolf, an evangelist, who is conducting the revival services here. The children met at an open air service in Courthouse Park, and then, singing and led by a band, they marched through the business district of the city to the First Methodist church, where another service was held. At midnight a service for adults was held in the New Brunswick Opera House.

DIVORCE ONE WEEK, NEW WIFE THE NEXT

EXPECTING DECREE, FREED HUSBAND HAD INVITATIONS FOR 2ND MARRIAGE.

George W. Snell, of 3½ Eighth avenue, Newark, received yesterday notice from his counsel that Chancellor Magie had signed a decree granting him a divorce on statutory grounds from his wife, Mary Snell, on the advice of Special Master Alfred F. Stevens.

Immediately on receiving this news, Snell announced that he will marry Thanksgiving eve another young woman, whose name he withheld. Snell admitted he was prepared to receive the news that made him a free man, and said he had prepared the invitations for his forthcoming second marriage.

The Snells were married October 20, 1900, in Harrison, by a justice of the peace. Snell was at that time twenty-one years old, while his wife was seventeen. Nine months later Mrs. Snell, according to the undisputed testimony in the case, deserted her husband. Three weeks afterward she returned and ,on her promise to reform, she was forgiven by her husband.

Just two weeks after the reconciliation Mrs. Snell is said to have again disappeared, remaining away five weeks. During her absence Snell sold his household effects and broke up his home.

There was a second reconciliation, attended with fresh promises to err no more, and a new home was established on the ruins of the abandoned one.

Matters went smoothly enough, according to the testimony, until May, 1904, when Mrs. Snell again yielded to an impulse to seek other companionship. She was traced to Islip, L. I., where she had established herself in a family of that place. Still another reconciliation followed this escapade, and the couple took up their residence in Newark, where they remained until November, 1904, when Mrs. Snell lit out again, returning to Islip.

Snell's patience ran out with this last escapade, and his suit for divorce followed.

REVIVAL PARADE AT PATERSON

Evangelists to Carry the War Into "Red Light" District.

Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, leader of the evangelistic movement in Paterson, has planned a big religious demonstration for tomorrow night. It will include a street parade of men and women, beginning at 10:45 o'clock, to be followed by a meeting at the Bijou, a burlesque house. This meeting will be open to men and women.

At 6 o'clock a meeting for newsboys will be held at the Bijou.

Two saloon meetings were held last night by Rev. Dr. Asher and Mrs. Asher in the heart of the "red light" district on West street. The audiences were composed largely of men on whom the world has frowned, but they gave Mr. and Mrs. Asher a respectful hearing. Many of them professed to be converted to a new mode of living.

Big meetings were held at noon at the Rogers Locomotive Works and at the Opera House, the latter being for business men.

M'CURDYS GET COMPANY.

Acquire Control of Morris County Safe Deposit Company.

Morristown, Nov. 23—The Morristown Trust Company, of which Richard A. McCurdy, Robert H. McCurdy and Louis A. Thebaud are the heaviest stockholders, is now in control of the Morris County Safe Deposit Company.

This institution was formerly in the control of Vice-Chancellor Pitney and the Miller estate, but because of a change in the personnel of the directors there was disaffection among the former officers and directors, and enough of the stock was put on the market to enable the same interests that control the trust company to control the Safe Deposit Company.

The new board of directors of the Safe Deposit Company, with the exception of two, are also directors of the Morristown Trust Company. For the present, at least, the separate corporate existence will be maintained.

STANDARD OIL MUST PAY.

Mayor of Bayonne Rallies Council to Collect Bill.

Mayor Brady, of Bayonne, made it plain yesterday that he proposes to bring the Standard Oil Company to time and compel it to pay a long-standing debt to the city for extra water used at its big plants at Constable Hook.

The Mayor sent a communication to the Council urging prompt action to collect the money. He said the debt has been increasing for years and that numerous conferences have failed to bring a check from the corporation. The water is metred before it passes to the Standard's property.

When the Mayor entered office two years ago the Standard owed the city $12,435. The debt now is $36,577.81, and is still growing. The Mayor insists that the company pay without further loss of time.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 26.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—God's wonderful works.—Ps. xl, 1-11. (Thanksgiving service.)

The wonderful works of God are manifested on every hand about us in life. David looked into the heavens and was inspired to say, "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth His handiwork." He looked about him upon the earth and said, "Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge." And as he contemplated life upon the sea he declared: "They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters—these see the works of God and His wonders in the deep." "Many, O Lord my God, are Thy wonderful works which Thou hast done, and Thy thoughts which are to us-ward. They cannot be reckoned up in order unto Thee. If I would declare and speak of them they are more than can be numbered."

The works of God are wonderful in every realm of life. They are seen in the creation of the universe, in its preservation and in God's providential care over His people, and especially in the provision He has made for their redemption in Jesus Christ, His Son. He is blind indeed who does not see how wonderful is the work of God in creating and preserving the material universe in which we live. His providential care over His people is just as wonderful. No one can read the history of God's people without being impressed with the wonderfulness of God's works toward them. God has preserved them. In trouble He has heard and answered their prayers. In the hour of trial and danger He has defended them and brought them safely forth, often in the most marvelous ways. And of His works of grace the most wonderful is His redemption of the world through His Son. God's love for the world and the method of its manifestation are, after all, the most wonderful things about Him.

Oh, wondrous love, to bleed and die,
To bear the cross and shame,
That guilty sinners such as I
Might breathe that holy name!

God's wonderful works should deeply impress us. They should impress us with the absolute assurance of His existence. As Napoleon once said to a group of skeptical officers, "Gentlemen, if there be no God, who made the stars?" There is no rational, intelligent explanation of the universe except that found in Gen. i. 1, "In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth." He is a fool indeed who says in his heart, "There is no God." God's works should call forth our adoration and our praise. We praise the works of men, but what are they compared to the wonderful works of God? What artist ever drew a picture to be compared to the rising or setting sun, the works of God's fingers? Specially should we praise God for His wonderful works when they have been exercised toward us. The psalmist's ascription of praise was inspired by God's wonderful goodness to him. In answer to his prayer God had removed sorrow and put a song into his mouth, and this led him to contemplate and to extol God's wonderful works, and as we come to another Thanksgiving day season and recall the blessings, national, social, domestic and individual, that have come to us from God we should acknowledge His presence in them and exclaim, "Wonderful are Thy works, O God, and Thy thoughts are very deep."

An Exchange of Greetings.

President Roosevelt's message of greeting to the Baltimore convention was received with a heartiness characteristic of Christian Endeavor. This is what he wired:

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 4, 1905.

Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D., President United Society of Christian Endeavor, Baltimore, Md.:

I am very sorry that it has been found impossible for me to accept your invitation to address the Christian Endeavor convention. But will you permit me to send through you a word of greeting to those assembled and to heartily wish them continued success in the work in which they are engaged? The work of your society during the quarter of a century of its existence has been far reaching in its effect for good. To make better citizens, to lift up the standard of American manhood and womanhood, is to do the greatest service to the country. The stability of this government depends upon the individual character of its citizenship. No more important work can be done—important to the cause of Christianity as well as to our national life and greatness.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

A reply was sent by the convention in the following words:

Baltimore, Md., July 5, 1905.

President Theodore Roosevelt, President's Train, Lake Shore Railway, Cleveland, O.:

Thousands of Christian Endeavorers from many lands honor with you the memory of Secretary Hay. We thank you for your inspiring message. We beg you to stop at Baltimore on your way home and let us hear your voice in a plea for the nobler citizenship you exemplify. Any hour, day or night, will do.

WILLIAM SHAW.

A Lonely, Brave Endeavor.

Rev. G. W. Wright, Presbyterian missionary in the Philippines and a stanch Endeavorer, tells of a lame man in the hospital who heard of a community of people in the mountains who needed a teacher. "Carry me up there," he said, "and I will live among them and preach the gospel." So the lame man was carried up and began his lonely, brave endeavor.

Christian Endeavor.

Hearts warm as love,
Hearts true as steel,
A purpose noble ever;
For others toil,
For others feel;
Unselfish is Endeavor.

—John R. Clemens in Baltimore News.

Nov. 26: "God's Wonderful Works." Ps. xl, 1-11—Thanksgiving Service.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

It has been well said that ingratitude is the basest of vices. Appreciation of benefits received is an obligation that should never go by default. We place much stress on self reliance and talk about self made men and independence and all that sort of thing, but the real fact of the case is we are all very dependent on one another and are receiving numberless favors and benefits constantly. It is a shame to cloak our meanness and ingratitude or to refuse to recognize our obligations to others.

It may be somewhat humbling to pride to allow ourselves to see in what great measure we have been helped by others, but in place of the pride we shall get a better feeling of thankfulness and fellowship and a desire to pass the benefit along to others.

We ought to take time to realize to some extent the immeasurable obligations we are continually under to God, the Giver of all our best gifts. What is life itself worth, and life lived in a world of such beauty and opportunity as this world of His? It pays to sit down occasionally and take account of stock and see what we possess and what we value it all at. Physical health has some worth. Ability to think is an asset of value to all of us. Moral power and aesthetic taste make for enjoyment and betterment. Family, friends, social privileges, business positions and literary accumulations of all the past—what a world it is, stored with the vast accumulations of all the surplus work of all the ages! Then when we look at the great God made world of earth and sky and sea and the faroff worlds blending in the midnight heavens into misty light and think of the future worlds of promise, not of material things, but of personality and spiritual reality; when we think of God and all good, how we begin to appreciate things more, and God more, and our obligations to Him, then gratitude is born and praise grows big in the soul and crowds upon the lips for utterance.

"Bless the Lord, O my soul and all that is within me! Bless His holy name!"

Thanksgiving days are good institutions to have "lest we forget; lest we forget." Unless we give bold and frequent expression to our inner sentiments they die. We must talk if we are to maintain ability to think. We must praise or we will inevitably lose the grace of gratitude. We must give thanks or we will lose appreciation. A child who never says "Thank you!" soon lacks all feeling of obligation and comes to that ugly condition where all gifts are taken as matter of right rather than of courtesy. The soul that does not lift up eyes of praise and heart of prayer to God, the great Giver, lacks the finer and sweeter elements of human nature.

We of the league need to cultivate the inner quality of proper appreciation of the divine mercies and the proper expression of our gratitude. Service for others is now recognized as the deepest and one of the truest possible expressions of thanks for benefits received. If you truly are grateful, pass the gift along to another who also needs it. But there are other ways also of showing our heart life.

We no longer need to show our reverence for divine things and our allegiance to God by killing something as sacrifice, as was the ancient practice, but we do need to bring everything into subjection to His will and hold all as under His control. We do need to sing in soul and with the voice; we do need better than ever before to preach righteousness in the great congregation of the world of business and society and halt men in every career of fraud and evil.

God's most wonderful works are in the world of men redeemed from evil and saved to truth and right and goodness and beauty. Let us be thankful that we have part in that world and glorify Him by enlarging its boundaries.

A Prayer.

Give me, O Lord, that quietness of heart which makes the most of labor and of rest. Save me from passionate excitement, petulant fretfulness and idle fear, keeping me ever in the restful presence of Thy love. Teach me to be alert and wise in all responsibilities without hurry and without neglect. Tame Thou and rule my tongue, that I may not transgress Thy law of love. When others censure, may I seek Thine image in each fellow man, judging with charity as one who shall be judged. Banish envy from my thoughts and hatred from my lips. Help me to be content, amid the strife of tongues, with my unspoken thought. When anxious cares threaten my peace, help me to run to Thee, that I may find my rest and be made strong for calm endurance and for valiant service. In the name of Jesus Christ, my Lord. Amen.—Christian Work and Evangelist.

Tarry With Me.

Tarry with me, O my Father,
While the years are passing by!
In the west I see the shadows
Of the nighttime drawing nigh.

Tarry with me, gentle Father;
Do not leave me once alone,
For without Thy spirit near me
I should wander far from home.

Tarry with me, for Thy presence
Is far more than life to me;
For without Thy touch of healing
I forever blind should be.

Tarry with me, gracious Father,
For I need Thy constant care;
I cannot for one brief moment
Life's eternal burden bear.

Tarry with me, sweetly tarry;
Tarry with Thy helpless child
Then I shall be safe forever
On the dark and dreary wild.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," Etc.

Copyright, 1902, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

It is a sight never to be forgotten, that which greets their eyes as the Black Hats come popping up over the ridge. The westward forest is all alive with flashing bayonets aligned on the little red battle flags, the division of Heth in battle array, reaching almost from pike to pike, with one brigade thrown out "in the air" to the north, and pushing daringly forward to sweep the stubborn troopers, fighting dismounted, out of the way. It is barely quarter past ten, as Reynolds for the last time looks at his watch; his Doubleday, who has galloped forward for orders, to "back" Wadsworth in the seminary and extend his line to the west; then, calling on Meredith points to that forward grove at the brook side, "Seize it," he says, "before the rebels can reach it!" Then with the Sixth in reserve, with a full-lunged shout in its throat and fire in its eye, the old brigade breaks into a run, Fairchild with the Black Hats in the van—a 500-yard race for the goal—field, staff and commanders cheering them on, and Reynolds—noble Reynolds—spurring swift in the lead, riding down to his soldier fate.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE FIGHT FOR THE GUNS.

Of Heth's division, we have said, are these at the front—fellows that never yet have happened to "sample" this western command—Heth's division, with the brigades of Archer and Davis in the foremost line. The former has started his Tennesseeans down the slope, Alabama supporting, and is feeling his way to the front, for that wood looks ominous. Skirmishers say Gamble's dismounted troopers, who have held it two hours against their best shooting, are strengthened now by infantry, thrown forward by old Cutler's first line, which can be seen stretching out over the pike, relieving Devin's worn men, and letting them scurry back to their waiting horses. But Archer sees that in so doing, Cutler has thrust its right flank "into the air"—that Davis, with his Mississippi battalions, is sweeping upon and around it, and is already in turn far in advance of his own fellows; so, most eagerly, Archer orders forward, forward, and the gray lines leap at the word. Beautifully the battle opens for the cause of the south. Cutler's men, in their eagerness to relieve Buford's thinned and wearied defense, have rushed full 600 yards out into the open, and Davis catches them in flank with his yelling southerners; wheels his Mississippians to their right—Cutler barely having time to slip his skirmishers out of the clutch—then onward come the Johnnies, full tilt for the guns of Hall, unlimbered in place of Calef, on the Cashtown pike. Then two wonderful things happen and two new feathers go to the cap of the Iron Brigade.

It is Fred Benton's luck this day of days to be riding with Reynolds as the corps commander spurs to the front. Reynolds has borrowed him as an aide, and Benton, burning with joy and excitement, rides after him into the grove, just in time to see Archer's foremost line come gallantly sweeping down the opposite slope. "Hang on, men! Keep up your fire! Meredith's right behind you!" shouts Reynolds, as he darts swiftly in among the trees. "Hang on, men!" goes the word from center to flank, but things look risky out there to the right where Cutler's ranks are drifting back. Then, 1,400 strong, the charging ranks of the Iron Brigade come on with a rush. The east edge of the wood is reached by the leaders on the right of the line, just as the southern force bursts through the battle smoke and into the brook; but even as these latter reach the wood, and Archer is cheering them forward, he is amazed to see his wing reeling back, and a blue-capped, blue-bodied human wave curving round the southward end of the straggling timber. Before he can issue an order or strengthen a single battalion, Fairchild and the Black Hats have burst through the sheltering grove in his front, and sprung like tigers on his halted and astonished line; while Badger, Hoosier and Wolverine, swinging round him from the south, complete the demolition of the brigade. He and half his force, 600 at least, are prisoners of war, while the rest are chased to the rear by Meredith's men. First facer for Heth as he glares from the opposite woods, where Pettigrew and Brockenbrough are aligned in support. For him, however, there is comfort to the north of the pike, for there has Davis swept the field and is bearing down on the union guns. Now is the time to support him, but Wadsworth is too quick. Archer disposed of; the Iron Brigade halted and reforming under Reynolds' own eyes, the general commanding turns to succor the right. He has seen the trouble in a single glance; has seen, too, the way out of it; and in another minute the Sixth Wisconsin is "double-quicking" away over the fields to its right in support of the men from the City of Churches, now in sore need, for those lank Mississippians have swept forward [illegible] the railroad cut, and, flat on their bellies against the southward slope, are pouring their fire into Fowler's men.

A fatally good place is a railway cut to shelter a line, when the foe stands fast and contents himself simply with shooting. A fatally bad place it is when the foe won't stand at bay, but comes charging full tilt in spite of the fire, and that, to the amaze of Davis, is just what these infamous Badgers are doing this day. With an onward rush no mere muzzle loaders can possibly check when firing "oblique," the Sixth comes sprinting, taking the Mississippians in turn square in the flank and almost in a twinkling, doubling up and driving together, huddled, helpless, sheep-like, one astonished battalion. Down go the red battle flags. Down go the rifles in answer to shouts of surrender. Some dozen, perhaps, bending double and ducking, manage to scurry off to the west. But Gen. Joe Davis has lost two of his colors and all but a few men of two misguided regiments; and here, too, has the Iron Brigade done more than its full share. Wadsworth is almost weeping with joy at the sudden stem of the torrent and the magnificent stand of his little division, while Doubleday, seldom given to praise, is wringing that veteran's hand in hearty fashion. Doubleday's own men now are fast hurrying up in support of the First division and there is soldier triumph mingled with no little anxiety, as the war-tried leaders note through their glasses the long columns in gray stretching far back toward the horizon, all telling the coming of supporting thousands. A cavalry officer comes galloping in from the right, whither Devin's brigade has been sent to guard the flank of the line. "Where is Gen. Reynolds?" he asks. "Whole divisions are coming there to the north!" Where, indeed, is Gen. Reynolds? An aide-de-camp is spurring at swift trot through the maze of unlimbering batteries. His face is white, his lips are pale beneath the grimy mustache. He springs from his saddle and says: "Gen. Doubleday, you command, sir—Gen. Reynolds is dead."

And now, far out to the right and rear the boom of cannon grows incessant, and signal men are flagging desperately: "More men are needed! More men are needed!" Howard's corps, the Eleventh, is once more, at one o'clock, facing the very same veterans that swept it from the field at Chancellorsville, and that seem bent on doing the same thing here.

Then comes the crisis of the day for the men of the Iron Brigade. Nine field batteries are shelling the westward front of Seminary ridge. Nine brigades have been deployed across country and are now, at three o'clock, bearing down to envelop the grim "stayers" of Doubleday. Here, about the McPherson wood where Reynolds fell, raging old Meredith and gallant Roy Stone hang desperately to their ground. But Roy Stone is soon terribly wounded. Wistar, who springs to his sword, is shot in the face. Meredith is crushed under his falling horse.

GETTYSBURG IS PRACTICALLY LOST.

Fairchild's arm is smashed at the elbow; and Stevens, his lieutenant colonel, is instantly killed; so Mansfield, the major, takes hold of the Black Hats. Morrow, heroic colonel of the Wolverines, with every one of his field and staff officers, sooner or later, is shot. One after another five Michigan sergeants are killed while keeping aloft the sacred colors. Hoosiers, too, and the Seventh Wisconsin are fearfully pelted. Chapman Biddle's brigade, on their left, is hurled back. Baxter is fairly swamped out to their right, and, farther still to the north, Ramseur, Rodes and O'Neal, with a triumphant host of yelling confederates, have doubled Robinson's desperately battling division, swept its fragments away; and, with despair in his heart, Howard realizes that the day is lost, that only by the fiercest fighting and the best of luck can he hope to save the remnant of Reynolds' left wing that all the morning held so grandly.

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

FURS.

One of the changes in the fall costuming of wives and daughters will be the wearing of furs earlier in the season than ever before. Furs as white as the driven snow are the moment's novelty, and those who are adverse to wearing sombre hues early in the fall are warm admirers of white fox, that harmonizes with their delicate-hued gowns, and is used even for motor mantles. The furriers are now selling mainly big wraps and waist-length coats of the Eton shape, trimmed with velvet or leather vests, the collar and cuffs overlaid with silver, gold, or bronze tooling and embroideries. Round boas are more favored than flat ones, and these diminish in size from the great bulk around the throat to tapering ends. Snow-white fox ranks among the most precious furs, though its price is less than that of silver and black fox, for the scales are balanced by its poor wearing qualities. It is about half as durable as the darker varieties.—Exchange.

ABOUT BABIES.

It is difficult to treat the fingers of very young babies, because they are so tender that slight pressure causes pain, but the work should begin without delay, and by using warm water and soap, cold cream and cocoa butter, the chances of bruising either is greatly lessened.

Wash the hands in warm water and soap, and when thoroughly dry rub cold cream or cocoa butter around the sides, beginning at the right and working across, always with a downward pressure, so that the cuticle as well as the nails will be well covered. The cream should be put on with an old piece of soft silk or linen. If this is carefully done each night before a little one is put to bed, the nails should be strengthened and shaped to the fingers by the treatment.

As to massaging the fingers, it must be done very lightly. The skin should be covered with cocoa butter before the gentle rubbing is started. While the flesh is permeated with this oily substance, stroke each finger several times from the tip down and palm of the hand, using the thumb and first or index finger. Begin from the top and massage downward on either side of the nails, then repeat, smoothing the back and front of the fingers. The best time is just before the infant is put to sleep, so the oils will stay on all night.

When the tiny nails grow above the tops of the fingers break them off carefully to keep the infants from scratching and perhaps bruising their flesh. Tearing off the tender nails should be done slowly and gently, beginning at the right side and working across, following closely the shape of each finger. The nails are so brittle and delicate that it is difficult to prevent their splitting while working on them. Once a week is often enough to remove the ends that grow above the flesh.

Never cut babies' nails. A sharp knife or scissors will really ruin them by giving a coarse, heavy appearance that is not desirable, and once they become thick and broad, as cutting almost always makes them, they remain that way for life.

SINGER CO. ABSORBS ALL.

Sewing Machine Plants Under One Control.

It has been definitely announced that the Singer Manufacturing Company, of Elizabeth, has absorbed the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine Company. The deal involved millions and was effected chiefly through the efforts of Colonel William Barbour and several other influential stockholders in the Elizabeth plant.

For nearly a year there have been rumors about the contemplated consolidation of the two companies. It was stated further that all the sewing machine companies would form a gian trust to control the industry in the country. So far as the two largest companies are concerned, this has been effected by the absorption of the Wheeler & Wilson firm by the Singer Company.

It is said that in a few days the New Home Company and the company that manufactures the Demorest machine will be taken into the consolidation. In that event the joint company will practically control the sewing machine industry in the United States. This will destroy competition that has existed between the various companies. Especially in cities where the Singer and Wheeler & Wilson firms have stores the change will be felt, for the two stores will be combined into one. If the New Home and Demorest Company come into the combination it is said that uniform prices will be set on all the machines manufactured. The sale of them will be taken out of the large department stores, where cut rates now existing on the various makes have created such competition as to make the business almost unprofitable for the regular agents.

Of the factories mentioned in the consolidation, the Singer plant is the largest and most consequential. The Wheeler & Wilson comes next in importance. Its plant is located at Bridgeport, Conn. The New Home machines have considerable vogue in the New England states and Canada. The yare manufactured at Orange, Mass. The Demorest machines are made in Staten Island.

LAWYERS OPPOSED TO NEW JUDICIARY PLANS

CHIEF POINT OF CRITICISM IS PROVISION FOR THE COURT OF LAST RESORT.

Criticism of the proposed plan of the legislative judiciary commission for the reform of the State courts is already beginning to crop out. Several lawyers from various sections of the State brought to the State House in Trenton yesterday afternoon by the Errors Court opening, were outspoken in their protests.

The chief point of attack was the provision that the proposed new court of last resort be composed of five judges, the Legislature to have power to increase its number to seven. One or two of the lawyers were not sparing in their denunciation of this proposed change.

"That certainly looks like a colored gentleman in the woodpile," said a North Jersey lawyer. "Don't you see what it means?" he continued. "Suppose an important question like the Morris Canal abandonment was before the court of last resort under the proposed scheme, with the Legislature favorable to a decision a certain way. Then suppose the court of five members, by a vote of 3 to 2, should decide contrary to the wishes of the lawmakers. With a Governor siding with it, how easy it would be for the Legislature to select two candidates for the bench, pass a law increasing the membership of the Court of Errors and Appeals to seven, and have the willing candidates appointed and confirmed.

"Then the question already decided by the court could be opened for reargument, and by the addition of the two favorable justices be decided the way the decision was wanted."

Another fault found with the proposed reform is that it gives the Governor the appointing of the nineteen judges of which the new court would composed. At present the Court of Chancery is bi-partisan, and it is pointed out that under the new plan it is quite likely that in time the bipartisan feature would disappear and the personnel of the whole court, including the Chancery division, would be of the political complexion of the party in power.

The fact was also mentioned that the new plan would make the county courts more expensive. The present county courts are to be abolished under the proposition of the commission, and in their place new courts are to be created with presiding judges to be appointed by the Governor. The new courts will have all the powers and jurisdiction now exercised by the Orphans' Court, the Common Pleas, the Special Sessions, the Oyer and Terminer and the County Circuit Courts. On this account, it is claimed, men will not be found to accept the judgeships unless the salaries are largely increased.

FRESH AIR HOME SESSION.

Annual Meeting of Association on December 11.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Fresh Air Association will be held Monday night, December 11, in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. Alexander Morgan, of New York, one of the chief benefactors of this work, will be present and make an address.

There will also be reports of the past year's work by Miss Sara Curry, the matron, and Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, who is prominently identified with the work.

Picture Show a Revelation.

The Lyman Howe moving picture show at the New Plainfield theatre last night was a revelation to the audience. It was as far ahead of the ordinary "scope" exhibition as the railroad train is over the ancient stagecoach as a means of travel. The "Fall of Port Arthur," with its accompanying effects, was marvelous, twenty people being used to furnish sound and action. The attendance was good, but should Manager Counihan arrange for a return date the show would draw a packed house.

Past Grand Deputy Chancellor W. D. Quick, of Somerville, will visit Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., tonight. Mr. Quick is a candidate for grand outer guard.

The committee has held several meetings and it is hoped to make the second affair even more successful than the first.

The carnival will undoubtedly be held the same place as last year, and it is proposed to conduct it on a larger scale. Several minor mistakes of last year will be corrected and many new features introduced.

Burglars in New Brunswick.

Burglaries which have been startling because of their frequency as well as their boldenss at New Brunswick of late had a sensational climax Tuesday night when the store of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company was robbed. The big store, located in the Viehmann building on George street, occupies one of the most prominent positions in town, yet the thieves with a bravado that is impressive entered the building and after ransacking the place got away with between $50 and $60 in cash. There are very few minutes in the night when someone is not passing the store, the interior of which can be seen by pedestrians because of the electric light left burning all night. The thieves were after money and won out in their desperate chance taken to get it.

Workmen's Narrow Escape.

William Bohl, the contractor, who is making the alterations to Henry DeMott's building on Somerset street, and several of his workmen, had narrow escapes from injury this morning by the falling of the stairway in the center of the structure. The heavy mass dropped without warning, dragging a lot of big timbers with it. It fell a few feet from where Bohl and his men were standing and enveloped them in a cloud of dust, choking and almost blinded.

New Engine in Commission.

The borough's new chemical engine, having been formally accepted by the Common Council, has now been fully equipped and is ready for active service. Loaded with regulation hose and the necessary adjuncts, its complete weight is 6,900 pounds, or almost as heavy as the city's aerial truck. The Plainfield hook and ladder truck, which was loaned to the borough, has been returned to its old resting place in the West Second street house.

STATE TO PROBE GAME COMMISSION

MR.. M'CLELLAN WANTS ACTION IN ABOLISHING OFFICE OF SECRETARY.

Trenton, Nov. 23.—Since such a hue and cry has been raised in the Fish and Game Commission by the recent abolishment of the position of secretary, the Commissioners have been in doubt as to the best course to pursue in order that the public might fully understand the matter. Percy H. Johnson, of Bloomfield, was the secretary of the Commission up to the time of the October meeting, but by a resolution offered by Commissioner David P. McClellan at that meeting the position of secretary was done away with.

Immediately thereafter, there was much talk that all the offices of the Commission were being filled by one man, Benjamin P. Morris, President of the Commission. The plan of making a single-headed Commission has been proposed, which has caused the Commissioners to feel that they were being unjustly treated.

For that reason the Commissioners deem it expedient that some statement of their reasons for abolishing the position of secretary be made public. The Commissioners are each allowed $250 a year, which sum is given them to cover all expenses—as postage, telephone calls, railroad fares and so on that they may incur in the duties of their office. There was no position of secretary of the Commission until Mr. Johnson was appointed to the board some four years ago. Shortfly after his appointment the position was created on a resolution offered by him, and he was given the office.

Immediately after the appointment of Mr. Johnson as secretary he began rendering bills to the monthly meetings of the Commission. These bills were for telephone calls, stenographers' fees, stationery, postage, etc., and the bills each month ran from $30 to $40 in excess of the amount allowed each Commissioner by law.

At first the other Commissioners did not say anything about it, but as there seemed to be no diminution in the amounts nor in the number of the secretary's bills, Commissioner McClellan began to protes,t and at one meeting made the statement that he would sign no more vouchers for the secretary's bills. As the other Commissioners deemed it unwise that the secretary should be drawing money from the State to which he was not really entitled they at last concluded to abolish the office of secretary.

The Commissioners wish the former secretary to ask for an investigation or for a hearing that he might be vindicated, because then the matter would come before the proper authorities and would receive a thorough airing, something they greatly desire. Some action will be taken by the Governor or by the incoming Legislature. Some newspaper editors seem to think that President Morris was responsible for the change in the Commission, but Commissioner McClellan wants it distinctly understood that he and he alone is responsible for the abolishment of the position of secretary.

Taylor, pastor of Shiloh Baptist church in Elizabeth, has issued a call for a massmeeting to be held on December 3, at his church. Six colored preachers from all parts of New Jersey will be present. Mr. Taylor said today that he had heard of a movement being on foot to petition the Board of Education to place the colored children in different class rooms in Elizabeth. He struck on his side and bruised himself so severely that he required assistance to reach home.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS GRAND CHANCELOR

ISSUES OFFICIAL CIRCULAR REGARDING DEATH OF GRAND INNER GUARD.

Grand Chancellor William T. Cowgill will issue the following official circular to the subordinate lodges of the State in reference to the death of Grand Inner Guard John I. Main. It is reproduced here for the benefit of our Pythian readers, who will not receive it officially until their next regular conventions:

To the Officers and Members of the Grand Lodge and of the Subordinate Lodges, Knights of Pythias of New Jersey:

Brother Knights—The order of the Knights of Pythias especially the Grand Domain of New Jersey, has suffered a great loss in the death of Grand Inner Guard John I. Main. Brother Main had been in declining health for more than a year, and on Monday morning, Nov. 13, death came to relieve him of his suffering.

We have not only lost an official, but we have lost also a Knight of Pythias in the fullest sense of the term, one who exemplified in his daily life the great principles taught by our noble order. He was ever kind and courteous, and devoted a most active life, up to the hour of his death, to Pythian work, ever striving for the elevation, the happiness, the betterment of mankind.

While the loss falls heavily upon the Knights of Pythias of New Jersey, it falls most heavily upon his bereaved wife, who has the sympathy and prayers of the thousands of New Jersey Pythians.

My brothers, let us emulate the noble example set by our departed brother—like him be true to our homes and loved ones, true to our God, so that our lives, like his, shall be such "that when we come to the river that marks the unknown shore, our hands may be filled with deeds of charity, the golden keys that open the palace of eternity."

I recommend and request that the charter of each lodge in this Grand Domain be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days.

The funeral will be held from his late residence, 97 Fabyan place, Newark, N. J., Sunday morning, Nov. 19, 1905, at 10:30 o'clock.

Yours fraternally,
W. G. Cowgill, G. C.
Elmer E. Margerum, G. K. R. S.

PAROLES REVOKED TO COURT OF PARDONS

LEROY APPLEGATE WILL HAVE TO COMPLETE SENTENCE IN TRENTON PRISON.

H. Leroy Applegate, of Trenton, under sentence of fifteen years in the State prison for forgery, and who was paroled from prison by the Court of Pardons April 9, 1902, has had his parole revoked by that court under the new law passed by the Legislature last winter.

Applegate was a local lawyer and was convicted of forgery in Mercer county in December, 1898, and was sentenced to State prison for the term mentioned. His downfall created a sensation, as he had given promise of success in the legal profession. He was paroled because of ill health.

After his release he went to South Jersey, where he was charged with swindling operations. Later a similar charge was made against him in Philadelphia. He was convicted on that charge, and is now serving a three-year sentence in that city.

His parole was revoked because of his misdoings since his release and the revocation is in accordance with the provisions of the new law. The result will be that Applegate, after the expiration of his Philadelphia term, will be taken to Trenton to serve the balance of his sentence at the State prison.

The Court of Pardons also revoked the paroles of Alonzo Butler, convicted in Sussex county of misdemeanor April 21, 1903, and sentenced to State prison for three years. He was paroled July 20, 1904. Another parole revoked was that of Jeremiah Harkins, convicted in Salem county in February, 1904, and paroled December 27, 1904. His sentence was for four years.

The court also inquired into the status of the parole of Thomas, alias "Red," Dugan, a notorious burglar of Hudson county, but found that this parole had been revoked under Governor Murphy's administration. Dugan is now serving a sentence in New York State on a charge of burglary.

The court closed yesterday's session by appointing the six lay judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals, who are members of the Court of Pardons, the committee to visit the State prison and examine the petitioners for parole and pardon at the hands of the court this trem. Those composing the committee are Judges Vroom, Green, Gray, Bogert, Vredenburgh and Dill.

He Comes for Bride.

Atlantic City, Nov. 23.—On a New York express train there blew into town last night John Hager, of Cape Nome, Alaska. Eight years ago, almost penniless, he left his home on a farm near Bridgeport, and, with thousands of others, rushed to the new discovered Klondike to seek his fortune in the land of snow and ice. Yesterday, with enough money in his pocket to purchase the train which brought him from the metropolis, with his check good for a quarter of a million and owning an unpurchasable interest in one of the Klondike's richest mines, he returns to claim his bride, Miss Eliza Featherer, the pretty country lass who, prior to his departure, gave him her heart and hand.

Paul Barnett, the actor who sustained a broken leg during a local performance, is doing nicely at Muhlenberg Hospital and will soon be able to get about on crutches.

William DeMyras, of this city, will speak at the Grove Street Rescue Mission this evening.

MONEY TO 24TH CHILD.

Myers Bequeathed Wealth to Last Offspring.

An Ocean City case in which a decision is expected shortly from the court of errors and appeals at Trenton, is attracting considerable attention because of its peculiar human interest features. The suit is that of Joseph Hamscher and others against Charles G. Myers, and is No. 193 on the March term calendar of the court. When it was reached by the court during the reading of opinions Monday afternoon, Chief Justice Gummere announced it would be decided soon.

Charles G. Myers was a Philadelphia politician and late in life made his home at Ocean City. There he married a young woman who was his fourth wife. By his former wives he had twenty-three children and in due time the twenty-fourth baby arrived. He had also a number of grandchildren and the complainant in this suit is one of them.

Myers matched his large family with large wealth and when he died was possessed of an estate worth $100,000. To the surprise of everybody he left his whole fortune to the child of his fourth wife, the baby of his old age.

One of the other children filed a caveat against the probate of the will, but later, on what is now claimed to have been a misrepresentation, this caveat was withdrawn and the will was probated. Later Hamscher, one of the grandchildren and the complainant herein, made application to the orphans' court of Cape May county to have the decree of probate reopened and Judge Voorhees granted the application. The object of this move was to begin proceedings to break the will.

The representatives of the legatee under the will of Myers appealed from Judge Voorhees' decision to the prerogative court, where Chancellor Magie, as surrogate general, set aside the decree for a reopening.

Then Hamscher appealed to the court of errors and appeals, and it is this phase in which a decision is pending.

LAWYER GEORGE BALL BRINGS SUIT FOR $10,000

CLAIMS THE AMOUNT FROM P. S. C. FOR INJURIES AND MONEY SPENT,

Suit has been instituted in the New Jersey Supreme Court by Counsellor Craig A. Marsh on behalf of George Ball, of Scotch Plains, and whose law offices are in the First National Bank building, of this city, for $10,000 damages for injuries received in an accident that happened to him on August 1st last on the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central New Jersey Railway Company, at the head-on collision near Leland avenue.

From the complaint made by Ball it appears that he got on the car at Plainfield to proceed to his home in Scotch Plains and that near Leland avenue he was made to change cars, getting into another one ahead; that it proceeded a short distance when still another car coming in the opposite direction plunged into the car Ball was on and greatly injured him and has caused him to be ill ever since and has prevented him from following his daily business and has caused him permanent injuries, and he also charges that he has expended $500 trying to get cured.

This is the second time that Mr. Ball has been injured by the trolley on his way home, but it is understood that the first time he was hurt he made a settlement with the company.

Mr. Ball asks for $10,000 damages for injuries he has received and for the moneys lost by him by reason of his not having been able to properly care for his law business.

Other addresses during the evening were made by Lieutenant J. Stephen Higham and Guide F. Philip Jahn and vocal solos were contributed by James Armstrong.

The affair was arranged by Captain John Hall and Lieutenant Higham.

COURT RAILROADS THESE FOUR CROOKS

MEN CAUGHT WITH GOODS ON LAST WEEK GO TO STATE PRISSN.

Before Judge Schenck in the Somerset County Court this morning, Robert Fisher, Frank Clark and Frank Johnson were sentenced to two years in State prison and Richard Dunn to one year and six months.

The gang was captured by Detectives Laverett and Gaffney, of the Jersey Central Railroad, and Detective Totten, of Somerville, after a fight in the woods near Lincoln last week. The members had gathered to divide the plunder stolen during the two previous nights from freight cars on the New Jersey Central. They were arraigned yesterday and pleaded guilty to the charge of robbery.

The men were wanted on charges of similar crimes in Union and Middlesex counties, and there was some question as to where their recent crime was committed, whether in Somerset, Middlesex or Union county. This question was cleared yesterday when Fischer, who acted as spokesman for the quartet, sent for Detective Totten and said that he and his pals would plead guilty to a charge of robbing cars in Somerset county.

The prisoners said it was at Bound Brook where the cars were broken open and that the reason for taking the stolen goods to Lincoln was that the dense woods there afforded a hiding place for the gang while dividing the plunder. Judge Schenck was immediately notified of the prisoners' request and accepted their plea of guilty to robbery.

FIGHT TO RECOVER ON TOWNSHIP BONDS

PLAINFIELD LAWYERS MAKING STRONG EFFORT AGAINST NEW PROVIDENCE.

Before Judge Cross in the Supreme Court at Trenton this morning, the suit of Roland M. Smythe, of New Providence township, against the township, was commenced. He seeks to recover $12,500 for bonds that he holds and were issued by the township at the time of the intended construction of the Peapack, Passaic and Delaware Railroad. The plaintiff is represented by Isaac P. Runyon and W. S. Angleman, of this city, and the defense by Attorney General McCarter.

When the jury had been selected the defense said the case might be settled without coming to trial, as there had been no seal on the bonds and that they thus became an ordinary debt. A non-suit was granted and the jury was dismissed. Counselor Angleman applied for the discharge of one juryman, and to begin trial again with the bonds reformed. This was granted and the trial went on. It will probably be finished this afternoon, and there is little doubt but what the verdict will be for the defense.

Felicci Hit Angelo.

Angelo Waramo and Flicci Dulucci, brothers-in-law, paused in their work in a P. S. C. ditch in Dunellen a week ago to maul one another. Felicci ended the argument by whacking Angelo over the head with a shovel. Angelo's head was broken and Felicci ran away. Angelo swore out a warrant before Recorder Campbell, of Dunellen, and the latter turned it over to the police here, who were better equipped to locate Felucci than the Dunellen cops. Detective McCarthy nabbed Felicci yesterday and shipped him to Dunellen. Chief Kiely received word from Recorder Campbell this morning that he didn't want Felicci any more; the complaint had been withdrawn.

Drunk Fined.

PRAISES THE CHINESE

Rev. Dr. Scudder Says They are More Industrious in Hawaii Than America

ORIENTALS WELCOMED

Shamefully by U. S. He Declares—Do Not Want War—Cant' be Led by the Nose.

Rev. Dr. Doremus Scudder, who has been engaged in mission work in Hawaii for several years, spoke before a large audience in the Congregational church last night. His work in the Hawaiian Islands has been under the direction of the American Missionary Union of the Congregational church, and he described in detail the conditions in the islands.

Dr. Scudder considered the great influence of Asia upon Hawaii as the "yellow peril," and he said that it would only be a question of a short time when the Americans would be out-voted in the islands unless greater effort was made on the part of the Americans. The spirit of the Puritan, he said, was still strong and is now waging a strong social battle in Hawaii.

Referring to Buddhism, the speaker said that it had never been whipped as a religion and the followers of the Christian faith must put forth every effort to get in the lead. The speaker paid a great compliment to the Chinese and Japanese in Hawaii, where they are cordially welcomed and given every advantage. He thought that the United States had used the Chinese shamefully. Experience had shown these people to excel the Americans in the industrial race. "They do not want war, neither do they favor militarism," said Dr. Scudder, "their ambition being to acquire prominence in the industrial world. In Hawaii we are not afraid of the Chinese politically. They cannot be led about by the nose and voted in gangs, as people in the United States are. The members of the Christian faith in the islands are far outnumbered by the followers of other religious and it is time that the American Missionary Union awake from its slumbers and support the efforts of the American missionaries."

In beginning his talk, he said that fifty years ago a naval officer was sent to the islands to inspect conditions, and when he returned he reported that the commercial and naval advantages could not be estimated too highly. And Dr. Scudder thought this would apply also to the work for the King of God. He expressed the belief that the islands would rival Hong Kong as a shipping center.

The speaker told how God had preserved the islands and its people and permitted the gospel to be preached and prepared them for noble destiny under "Old Glory." He described the people as being lovable in disposition and anxious to learn about Christ, and having an abhorrence for war. He then told how, in 1863, the islands were transformed from slavery to liberty and a constitutional form of government adopted.

Dr. Scudder told of the lack of support of mission enterprise on the part of the American Missionary Union. He referred to the great sacrifice on the part of the native Christians and how hard they are working for the cause of Christianity.

In conclusion, Dr. Scudder made a strong appeal for support from the Congregational church, adding that it is in a position to accomplish great things in the islands, where it owns many houses of worship, which cannot revert to other denominations. If given up by the Congregational church, this property will go to the Government.

Dr. Scudder, who is a brother of Rev. Dr. Scudder, of the People's Palace, Jersey City, recently returned to this country from Hawaii for the purpose of stimulating greater effort on the part of the Congregational church.

This is the first attack of this nature that Mr. Hooley has suffered since a young man. At that time he won the interscholastic championship of the State for 200 yards, running match, and his exertion in the race brought on hemorrhages.

COP M'GINLEY WAS PROFITABLY CURIOUS

HIS DESIRE TO KNOW MORE OF A WAYFARER DISCLOSES A ROBBERY.

Officer Arthur McGinley noticed a strange young man walking along Park avenue at 2 o'clock this morning, and asked him where he was going. The young man's replies didn't satisfy the cop and he took the youth to the station house.

When the young man was searched McGinley patted himself on the back. Three gold watches, a gold bracelet, a strong screw driver constructed on the lines of a jimmy, and two boxes of matches were disclosed.

"Back to the coop for yours," said McGinley.

Chief Kiely rushed the young man through the third degree this morning, and he weakened. He described himself as Herman V. Dill, nineteen years old, of South Amboy. He said he stole the jewelry from his mother's house yesterday.

Chief Kiely telephoned to South Amboy and the police there confirmed the youth's story. He had pried open a drawer in the mother's room and decamped with the watches and bracelet. He is being held for disposition by the Amboy authorities.

They will be permitted to go through the woods, make short cuts, or, in fact, play through any part of the course to cover it, so long as they remain on the links. There are indications of a large entry list for this event.

RANSACK HOUSE OF FREEHOLDERS' DIRECTOR

AS RESULT OF BURGLARS WORK, MR. KING APPEARS IN ODD APPAREL.

Director Benjamin King, of the Union County Board of Freeholders, being late in arriving at the monthly meeting held at Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon, aroused the suspicion of his fellow-members. The genial director has the habit of being extremely punctual and his absence could not be explained.

When Mr. King walked into the meeting a half hour late, wearing his last summer's suit and a spring overcoat, the members were more puzzled than ever and an explanation was asked for.

The member from Clark Township declared that late Wednesday night burglars entered his home, while he and his wife were asleep, and made a clean sweep of everything of value, including his new winter suit and overcoat, a valuable watch, all his money, while the larder was emptied of everything. It was necessary for Mr. King to borrow provisions from the neighbors for the morning meal.

The thieves were very considerate in leaving Mr. King's summer suit and spring overcoat and he was compelled to wear these clothes to Elizabeth. Being without his faithful timepiece, he was unable to reach the meeting on time and did not realize that he was so late until he got to the court house. The members of the board had considerable fun at the director's expense, but afterward expressed their heartfelt sympathy in his loss. As soon as the meeting was over, Mr. King hastened to a nearby clothing store where he had his wardrobe replenished with seasonable clothing. He is now thinking of equipping his house with a burglar alarm system to prevent a re-occurrence of Wednesday night's robbery.

MUST EXPLAIN WHY HE ASSIGNED $700

WALTER SMALLEY ACCUSED OF TRYING TO DEFRAUD CREDITORS.

Walter G. Smalley, of this city, has been ordered to appear before John H. Van Winkle, Sr., special master in chancery, on November 27, to explain an assignment made by him to his brother-in-law, Elam Perrine. The order was obtained in the Court of Chancery by the Plainfield Ice & Cold Storage Company, who hold a judgment and an unsatisfied writ of attachment against Smalley.

It appears from the bill of the ice company that Smalley owed them $249. Last October Smalley recovered a verdict of $700 from the Pennsylvania Railroad, and this verdict was sustained on appeal. On November 16 the ice company alleges that it asked Smalley to settle its claim out of this judgment. Smalley, it is said, informed the company that the judgment had been assigned to Perrine, his brother-in-law.

The company contends that the assignment is not bona fide, and that it was made with intent to defraud creditors. Smalley claims that he owed the money to his brother-in-law; that the latter loaned him $200. The order will compel him to explain the transaction fully. C. M. Dolliver is lawyer for the ice company.

"SUNDAY GOLFERS" LOSE

Country Club Stands Firm Against Sabbath Playing on the Links.

ANTIS GROW STRONGER

Sunday Openers Do Not Muster Even a Bare Majority This Time—Second Amendment Reacts.

Sunday golf playing was again voted down by the Plainfield Country Club last night. The proposition was more emphatically defeated than at the last meeting at which it was submitted. Of the total of 264 votes cast, 138 were against it and 126 for it. At the last meeting the Sunday openers had at least a clear majority, the vote being 140 to 108 in their favor. A two-thirds vote being necessary for the change, the Sunday openers lacked fifty votes last night.

The shrinkage in the Sunday opening vote is said to have been the result of the attempt on the part of those who led the fight for it to bring about a change in the constitution doing away with the two-thirds vote requirement for constitutional amendment. They posted an amendment to cut the vote down from two-thirds to a majority at the same time the proposed amendment for Sunday opening was announced. It is said that this action lost them a number of supporters, who felt that they were carrying their campaign too far. The Sunday openers' leaders may have sensed something of this before hand, because A. H. Atterbury, who has been in the forefront of the campaign for the change, attempted to withdraw the two-thirds amendment before it was put to a vote.

The Casino hall was crowded with members, active and associate, and their friends when President George R. Mellick called the meeting to order at 8:30 o'clock. Active members, the only ones permitted to vote, were massed in the front of the hall, and the others were crowded at the rear. The meeting was canvassed like a political gathering by both sides. Every voter was listed and workers had certain groups under ward. Watchers at the door kept all voters from leaving until the questions had been decided. The liveliness of the fight was manifested all through the meeting.

There was absolutely no debate on the two amendments. H. L. Hall, one of the chief Sunday openers, moved the previous question without delay as each proposition was put, and the members voted overwhelmingly to take the questions without discussion. As Mr. Hall said, in moving the question, it was felt that enough had been said for and against. The shutting off of debate was a surprise to some of the members, however, and a half a dozen bulky manuscripts were left unused in inside pockets. Former Senator Reed caused a laugh, after the possibility of debate had been finally removed, by announcing that one of the disappointed orators requested leave to print his remarks.

As soon as the meeting opened Mr. Atterbury and W. D. Murray had a little skirmish for possession of the floor. Mr. Atterbury wanted to withdraw the two-thirds amendment and Mr. Murray wanted it before the house. Mr. Murray had been advised that the amendment had wrecked the Sunday opening craft and he wanted the weakness of pros shown in the white light of a test vote. Both men sprang to their feet at the same time. The chair recognized Mr. Murray.

"I was on my feet first," protested Mr. Atterbury.

"I heard and saw Mr. Murray first," said Mr. Mellick.

Mr. Atterbury protested again, but the chair was firm and turned to Mr. Murray. The latter promptly moved the amendment, which was seconded in a half a dozen places at once. Mr. Atterbury then got his recognition.

"Mr. President," he said, "as one of the signers of the call for the amendment, I wish to withdraw it."

"It cannot be withdrawn," ruled Mr. Mellick. "The motion is before the house."

H. L. Hall moved the previous question before the other side of the house had a chance to open debate. After points of information and order over the style of battling had been disposed of the chair ruled that the vote be taken by roll call. Before the vote wos one-third over the preponderance of sentiment in favor of the question was so apparent that Mr. Mellick changed it to a viva voce. About twelve members wanted debate.

Just before the ballots were distributed Craig A. Marsh arose.

"I do not intend to debate the question," he said, "I merely wish to serve notice of objection. Brother Lindabury has said that a majority vote is all that is necessary; if you want law in this thing, I may as well give you a little. The constitution requires a week's notice to each mem-

MRS. TOLLA TO BE SENTENCED.

Court Sustains Murder Verdict Against Her and Jerry Rossa.

Hackensack, Nov. 24.—The Court of Errors has sustained the convictions of Mrs. Antoinette Tolla and Jerry Rossa on indictments of murder, and on December 12 Judge Garretson will resentence them to death.

Mrs. Tolla deliberately murdered Joseph Sonta in her home in Kingsland by shooting him in the head from behind. She never denied the shooting and her stories varied as to the motive. She has a husband and two small children.

Rossa was originally charged with shooting two men in a fight in an Italian boarding house at Lodi. He was twice convicted for the murder of Demetrio d'Onofrio, but the Court of Errors reversed the first conviction. He stoutly denies the charge. There were no eyewitnesses of the actual shooting, but he was seen, gun in hand, hunting for victims just before the shots were heard.

WOMAN FOUGHT BACK.

Tried to Wrest Pistol from Man Who Held Her Up.

Mrs. Simeon Morris, living near New Brunswick, was held up Wednesday night by a fairly well-dressed young man, who pointed a pistol at her head. The hold-up occurred near the French street terminus of the New Brunswick trolley. Mrs. Morris was on her way to town.

Although she was carrying a baby Mrs. Morris seized the revolver and almost wrested it from the man's hand. When he aimed a blow at the child she let go of the weapon, whereupon the man took to his heels. She aroused a number of men who had heard her screams and they tried to capture the man, but he escaped.

Charles Romph Sues Abraham Gulick, Who Thrashed Him in Fight.

J., for $2,000 damages that Romph claims to have sustained by reason of an assault that was made upon him by Gulick last June, at Lincoln. In his complaint against Gulick, Romph charges that Gulick seized hold of him and beat him and kicked him and knocked him and threw him on the ground all with such force that he was greatly injured and bruised and damaged internally and that he has been sick ever since; and that it has cost him $100 to try to get cured and that he will have to expend more money to get properly cured.

Gulick filed an answer to the bill yesterday, through his lawyer, W. L. Hetfield, Jr. G. W. Moy is the lawyer for Romph.

AN ORDINANCE

for the improvement of Sherman Avenue from the center of Grant Avenue to a point 700 feet southwesterly therefrom.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the roadbed of Sherman Avenue, extending from the center of Grant Avenue to a point 700 feet southwesterly therefrom, be forthwith repaired and spread with broken stone for a width of twelve (12) feet, and a depth of four (4) inches, at the general expense of the city, to be paid for (after first applying the direct contribution of property owners) out of money raised by tax for the improvement of streets as provided by the Act of the Legislature, entitled "An Act to authorize cities to make permanent improvements in the roadbeds of streets at the general expense," approved May 12, 1884.

Section 2. That before any work shall be done under this ordinance, the property owners along the line of the proposed improvements, shall deposit with the City Treasurer the sum of One Hundred and Ninety-eight Dollars and Thirty-eight Cents ($198.38).

Adopted by the Common Council Nov. 14, 1905; approved by the Mayor Nov. 16, 1905.

J. F. BUCKLE, Mayor.

Attest: J. T. MacMurray, City Clerk.

ber of all amendments; the secretary's affidavit shows the notices were sent out on the fifteenth of the month. Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Whiton and others are in Europe and could not have been legally served. That will be one of the points on which I will fight Brother Lindabury if we get into court."

The objection acted like an explosive on the meeting. Cries of "Sit down!" laughter and hisses sounded all over the hall. Mr. Marsh did not appear to be ruffled by his reception.

Mr. Atterbury asked the chair for permission to say a few words "not of debate." Mr. Mellick granted it.

"I hope the friends of Sunday opening," began Mr. Atterbury, will either refrain from voting on this amendment or vote it down. We——"

Protests rose from every part of the hall and the chair shut Mr. Atterbury off sharply.

The vote was taken by ballot. While the tellers were counting it outside, the Sunday opening amendment was put. Mr. Hall again moved the previous question, and another overwhelming vote choked off debate. After that there was nothing to the meeting but balloting and counting.

The first amendment was lost 193 to 42, some of the members holding out thei votes as Mr. Atterbury had urged. There was only a mild satisfaction earned by the victory when the two-thirds amendment was lost, but a roof-raising explosion greeted the announcement of the vote on the opening proposition.

Loud cheers swelled the noise of general handclapping and tumult reigned for nearly a minute, actual time.

The result of last night's meeting probably kills the Sunday opening proposition in the Country Club for some time at least. Not only club, but public sentiment, has been registered so strongly against it that it is not believed the men who favor Sabbath playing will feel encouraged to urge their views very soon.

"In view of their decisive defeat," said President Mellick after the meeting, to the reporters, "it is to be hoped that those who favor Sunday playing will, in justice to the trustees, who have the best interests of the club at heart, refrain from pressing the matter upon us again for some time. It is a disturbing factor in active propagation, and frequently recurrent attempts to bring about the change can only harm the club."

PERSONAL.

Mrs. W. G. Besler, of North Plainfield, has recovered sufficiently to be able to go out again.

Miss Elizabeth Manning, of Grant avenue, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Luther Anthony, of Kingston, N. J.

Mrs. William H. Abbott, who is ill at the home of her mother on West Eighth street, is slowly improving from an attack of scarlet fever.

Mrs. A. D. Edgar, of West Front street, has received word that her sister living at Lebanon, Hunterdon county, who has been seriously ill, is now improving.

$25,000 for a Story.

Think of it! Twenty-five thousand dollars for one story! The highest price that has ever been paid in America to any author for the serial rights of any story. And conisder the quality of merit, the intensity of interest this story must possess to command this extraordinary price. The "White Company" has ever been accepted as the greatest work by any author, and by far superior to his own "Sherlock Holmes" tales—but "Sir Nigel," says Conan Doyle himself, supasses them all.

Do not fail to buy "The Philadelphia Press" for Sunday, December 3, as this great romance by the world's greatest writer of romantic fiction will be the sensation in the literary world for months to come.

Cheers for Italy's Queen.

Rome, Nov. 24.—King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena yesterday visted the village of Bratico, Salabria, the centre of the region desolated by the earthquake of Sept. 8. Their majesties, though unexpected, were received with enthusiasm, and many touching incidents occurred, the women sending kisses to the queen and exclaiming, "Thou are our Madonna!" From Briatico the sovereigns drove to Monte Leone, where the queen insisted on visiting the poorest quarters, consoling and helping everybody. She inspected the hospitals, caressed the children, and encouraged everybody, saying: "I am your friend and have children myself. I know what you suffer."

Mayor Won't Accept Salary Increase.

Trenton, Nov. 24.—Frederick W. Gnichtel, Republican, Mayor-elect of the city, has come out with a public statement to the effect that he would not accept an increase in salary now being discussed and urged by the public and press. He declares that when a man is elected to an office at a fixed salary he should not expect an increase during his administration.

Bent on Probing Mercer Freeholders.

Trenton, Nov. 24.—Former Judge Robert S. Woodruff announced Wednesday that he would apply to the Supreme Court in a few days for the appointment of a commissioner to investigate the affairs of the Mercer County Board of Freeholders.

SCORES JERSEY COURT.

Attorney Crandall, of Atlantic City, Wants the Judiciary Simplified.

Trenton, Nov. 24.—An open letter in reference to the proposed revision of the judiciary in this State has been addressed by J. J. Crandall, a lawyer, of Atlantic City, to former Governor Griggs, who, with former Governor Murphy, former Supreme Court Justice Van Syckel, Charles L. Corbin and John R. Hardin, compose the commission to do the work. Mr. Crandall opens up on the "ponderous judicial system of New Jersey," says it is behind the times, and asserts that the last session of the Supreme Court was "an absolute waste of effort, costly lost motion, denial of justice to the poor and the murderer of everybody's time." He urges that the scope of the county courts be widened to take in the matters which the Supreme Court at Trenton deals with, and states where this is done with advantage to the people, justice to all and at a moderate cost. Mr. Crandall says:

"Supreme Court justices, judges of the Court of Errors, Circuit Court judges, Common Pleas judges, district judges, chancellor, vice-chancellor—why not condense the whole into District Court judges for the several counties? If a lawyer can be found so feeble minded as to put up sickly parley to oppose this change, put him in a convent.

"Friend Griggs, do get the right start in the performance of your job. Start out with the idea that the courts are the servants of business, not business the servants of the courts or judges. Give us the local courts and we will furnish the judges. Eliminate the idea that a Governor can pick out a better judge than the people. No man should be judge who has not caliber enough to be judge and at the same time be in touch with the people."

FIFTY MAPS BEFORE COURT.

Brought Out During Suit Against the Central Railroad.

Trenton, Nov. 24.—Arguments were continued before the Court of Errors and Appeals at the State House Wednesday, the main case up for consideration being No. 70 on the calendar, which had been advanced by consent. This is the case of Attorney General McCarter and the State at the relation of the city of Elizabeth, against the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey and others.

It is brought by the city to enjoin the railroad company from setting up in ejectment proceedings against the company a riparian deed made by the State Board of Riparian Commissioners to the company for certain lands below low water mark on Staten Island Sound, at the foot of Elizabeth street, Elizabeth. The contention of the city is that the deed was obtained by the railroad company by misrepresentation and fraud.

The suit was brought in the Court of Chancery and Vice Chancellor Emery gave a decision against the city. The city then appealed to the Court of Errors and Appeals and the argument yesterday was on this appeal. An array of about fifty maps figure as an exhibit.

The argument in the case of the State against Arthur C. Mount was completed, but no decision was given.

SALE OF CITY BONDS.

Of $12,500,000, Two Firms Get All but $500,000.

The sale of $12,500,000 worth of 3½ per cent. New York city bonds took place yesterday. Some twenty bids were received, but the greater part of the issue went to Harvey Fisk & Co. and Farson, Leach & Co. on a combination bid at par with accrued interest. The issue is date yesterday.

These two firms obtained all except about $500,000, which went in small sums to firms bidding around 101. Controller Grout seemed well satisfied with the sale. He said:

"Taking everything into consideration, the condition of the money market, and the mortgage tax law, I think it is one of the best sales the city has ever had."

Mandamus to Mayor and Council.

New Brunswick, Nov. 24—A mandamus issued by the Supreme Court directed to the Mayor and Common Council of the city of New Brunswick, and directing the reinstatement of Randall McCann upon the police force as a patrolman, has been served upon City Attorney Theodore B. Booraem. McCann was a patrolman and was promoted to roundsman. The Board of Aldermen repealed the roundsman ordinance and declared McCann dropped from the force. He appealed and the Supreme Court decided the proceedings in his favor. Action on the mandamus will not be taken until the Board of Aldermen has come to some conclusion as to whether the case is to be further contested.

Fine Keepers for Convict's Break.

Trenton, Nov. 24.—Deputy Keepers John Macon, Robert Provost and Albert Rue have been fined ten days' pay each by the Board of State Prison Inspectors because of the recent attempted escape of three convicts, who cut through two feet of stone wall and were captured in the prison yard. There was no evidence that the keepers were guilty of negligence, but the board determined it would best serve the discipline of the institution to make an example of them.

FORGER DEAD.

Figured in More Than 160 Claims and Netted About $200,000.

Washington, Nov. 24.—News has been received at the Interior Department of the death in New Orleans of the notorious pension forger, Joseph R. Dupart, whose work, it is estimated, netted him about $200,000. Pension Commissioner Warner says he has evidence showing that the man had forged thousands of signatures to declarations, affidavits and vouchers.

At the time of his death Dupart was awaiting trial for forgeries alleged to have been committed for a large claim in Louisiana. Dupart had figured in more than 160 claims. In one of them he committed 215 forgeries and made 129 false affidavits. He had twenty-five signatures which he used, the most notorious being "John G. Seldon." Seldon's name appears thousands of times as witness to declarations. His forgeries first became known in 1894. Dupart is understood to have served a three year term in the Kings County Penitentiary, in Brooklyn, having been committed in 1897.

OLD SOLDIER'S LAND RICH.

Descendants of Mexican War Veteran Learn Property is Oil Bearing.

Trenton, Nov. 24.—The members of the Saltmer family, of Trenton Junction, have learned that the estate of their great-grandfather, Henry Slack, located in Ritchie county, W. Va., has been found to be bearing oil and the owners will be made rich by its development. H. M. Saltmer, of South Bethlehem, has just returned from a trip to the property, which contains upward of 2,600 acres.

Slack, who lived in Yardley, Pa., served in the Mexican War, and, like many other soldiers, received his pay in land which was exempt from taxation. The share that was allotted to him he increased by buying other lands from soldiers.

REPORT DEC. 15.

Board Displeased at President's Attitude in Favor of Lock.

Washington, Nov. 24.—The majority and minority members of the board of consulting engineers of the Isthmian Canal will not be ready to submit even a preliminary report of their deliberations before December 15, according to a statement made by Chairman Davis, of the board. Acting on this information, Mr. Shonts, chairman of the Canal Commission, has telegraphed Chief Engineer Stevens not to come to Washington for consultation with the President before December 6. Accordingly Mr. Stevens, who had already been sent for, will delay his departure from the Isthmus until about that date.

ITO WOUNDED.

Corean Throws Stone Through Window of Marquis' Car.

Tokio, Nov. 24.—Marquis Ito, the special Ambassador of the Mikado in Corea, was slightly wounded Wednesday night while travelling by rail near Anyang, Corea. A stone was thrown through a window of the car in which the Marquis was riding, and his left cheek was cut by broken glass.

Two Coreans were arrested, and they confessed that one of them threw the stone.

Marquis Ito was returning from Seoul from a hunting expedition when the incident occurred.

CHINA OBJECTS.

China will present to Japan counter proposals with regard to the placing of Japanese guards along the route of the Manchurian Railway. The Chinese Government objects to the guards.

Baron Komura is still in poor health.

IN JACKSON'S MEMORY.

Monument to Be Erected Where Old Hickory Was Born.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 24.—The Daughters of the American Revolution have placed a marker on the spot where stood the house in which President Andrew Jackson was born. This is in Union county, near Waxhaw, N. C. The Daughters placed the mark only after years of careful inquiry and research, being fully satisfied that they had made no mistake. A fund is now being raised, and when this is complete a handsome monument will be placed where the iron marker was set.

WOMEN RAISE $400.

Closing Session of State M. E. Missionary Society.

At the closing session of the nineteenth annual meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the New Jersey Methodist conference, held yesterday afternoon at the State Street M. E. church, Trenton, $480 was raised by pledges for the work of the different departments. Mrs. Anna Mosher, of the Bancroft Rest home, Ocean Grove, made an address upon the work and the needs of similar institutions conducted by the society.

In the morning, the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. C. F. Garrison, of Stratford; first vice president, Mrs. H. L. Camindate, of Camden; second vice president, Mrs. G. M. P. Wells, of Trenton; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. A. Lilley, of New Egypt; recording secretary, Mrs. A. H. Chance, of Vineland; treasurer, Mrs. S. J. Turner, of Philadelphia.

The following changes in the constitution and by-laws were adopted: The creation of the office of second vice president; the selection of the First M. E. church of Camden as the headquarters of the society; a decision to hold quarterly meetings, and that the membership of the executive board will hereafter compose the presidents, corresponding secretaries and treasurers of all the societies of the district, together with secretaries of departments and the general officers of the conference organization.

It was decided to hold the next annual meeting at Camden.

STUDENTS TO THE RESCUE.

Princeton Men Chase Man Who Had Attacked a Girl.

Princeton, Nov. 24.—Late last night, as some students were walking up Prospect avenue, screams were heard coming from the direction of Professor Sibbins' house. The students rushed across the street and through the yard of the Campus Club to the Sibbins house.

At the rear of it a housemaid was found suffering from a violent case of hysteria. She was helped into the house and soon recovered enough to say she had been attacked by an unknown man. She stepped out of the house for a moment, when she was seized by a man, who attempted to assault her. Her screams frightened him and he made off through the fields.

Pursuit was made, but no trace of the man was found.

It is said that during the last two months several women have been pinched and sometimes kissed by an unknown man on Bayard lane, but until last night no serious attack had been made.

P. S. C. After Franchise.

Orange, Nov. 24.—There are persistent rumors that the Public Service Corporation is about to apply for a franchise to operate a trolley line in Central avenue. The company made the attempt to obtain this franchise, for an unlimited term, about two years ago, and the resulting public agitation was the most strenuous that the city ever saw. Charges of graft were handed around, and indignation meetings were held, at which the aldermen were soundly berated, and threats of grand jury investigation made. This time, it is understood, the company will try to get a fifty-year grant, but it is doubtful if the people of Orange will stand for anything more than a twenty-five year franchise, and adequate compensation will also be asked.

SPAIN STILL BITTER SAYS REV. HERRING

MINISTER'S INSTRUCTIVE LECTURE BEFORE MEN'S ASSOCIATION.

The Men's Association of Trinity Reformed church gave on of their delightful "ladies' nights" in the Sunday-school room last night, the feature of which was a lecture on Spain by Rev. Charles E. Herring. The attendance was large and the efforts of the members at entertaining was greatly appreciated.

Mr. Herring's lecture dealt mainly with Cadiz, Seville, Cordova and Grenada, in which cities he spent most of the time while abroad last summer and where he obtained many fine photographs. His stereopticon views where made from these and he showed about forty in all. Famous old cathedrals, the most widely known buildings, the squares, streets and people were shown with a vividness that impressed his descriptions upon the audience.

The speaker referred at some length to the difficulty experienced in getting fresh water in the country and frequently alluded to Plainfield's good fortune in having such an inexhaustible supply of aqua pura. He also referred to the national sport, bull fighting, and declared that the people grow wild over the big events when six or more of the animals are slaughtered. One of the pictures showed a matador in full fighting costumes and Mr. Herring said these fellows were followed by an admiring crowd of small boys whenever they appeared on the street, much like the American baseball pitcher is worshipped by devotees of the game.

Because of the Spanish-American War, Mr. Herring said the feeling in Spain against Americans is quite bitter, especially in Seville, where he was advised not to mention the fact that he was a "Yankee" if he wished to be accorded a friendly reception. The customs of the people and many peculiarities in the building of the cities were thoroughly explained by the speaker and his hearers were wraptly interesed for over an hour.

Before the lecture, Mrs. Theodore Mantz gave a well rendered solo and was obliged to respond to an encore. She was accompanied on the piano by Miss Cornelia Sampson.

At the next monthly meeting officers will be elected and a nomination committee to consist of F. E. Smith, T. R. VanZandt and W. H. VanArsdale was appointed by President Frank P. Storr.

The entertainment was arranged by the regular committee composed of W. F. Oliver, Fred E. Smith, John Hoffman, P. A. Buell and P. A. Vroom.

BROAD VIEW OF AUTOS.

Farmers Accept Them as Progress' Inevitable Result.

Atlantic City, Nov. 24.—There are still a number of important matters to be settled by the national grange, which continued its convention here yesterday. A broader and more tolerant view of the automobile than owners of the machines had expected is taken by the farmers of the nation as expressed by the grange. The grange recognized the mcahine as an innovation in modes of travel, which must be accepted, but decided that the farmers should join in creating uniform legislation of a wise nature, which should be vigorously and relently enforced and the penalties should be sufficient to serve as a warning against violation by others. There were members who bitterly denounced the motorists for having made it unsafe for women and children to drive over roadways, and they would have been willing to support a more drastic declaration in favor of a curtailment of the rights of autoists in farming sections, but the conservatives won.

Western influence, where the cigarette is more detested than in the east, brought about a protest by the grange against the manufacture and sale of the materials which enter into them as well as the cigarette themselves, and a demand to outlaw them.

Reports of a forthcoming bill in Congress to remove the tax of 10 cents a pound on oleomargerine prompted the adoption of a resolution directing the State granges to urge upon their representatives in Congress to oppose any movement in that direction.

The convention unanimously favored a proposed amendment to have the farmers organize independent telephone companies in their various localities as a means of securing reasonable rates and better service.

Another resolution endorsed the efforts of President Roosevelt to secure justice for the consumers and producers of the country in relation to interstate carriers, and the grange favored an amendment to the interstate commerce law, which will allow the commission to hear complaints against unjust and unreasonable rate regulations.

M'KINLEY CLUB OFFICERS.

Charles A. Trimble Named for President.

The regular nominating committee of the McKinley Club, of Elizabeth, has decided upon the following candidates for office: President, Charles A. Trimble; first vice-president, Everard K. Tucker; second vice-president, George R. Rowland; secretary, Harry C. Furt; member of the board of governors for one year, S. Merchant Meeker; member of the board of governors for two years, George P. Matthews. The committee which made these nominations consists of Robert M. Kellogg, John J. Stamler, George T. Parrot, C. S. Kiggins and Herbert Younglove.

Besides these regular nominations there may yet be an opposition ticket. Anyone who has a desire to run independently is given till Monday night to post his name on the bulletin board of the club. The election will take place on December 4. Only members who have paid their dues up to date are privileged to vote.

Mr. Trimble has already run twice for the office of president of the McKinley Club, once against Robert M. Kellogg, and last year against Robert Cissel. But each time he ran independently, his name not having been presented by the nominating committee. This is the first time he runs as a regular candidate. Two years ago Mr. Trimble issued a letter stating what he would do if he were elected president. If elected this time, he intends to pursue the policy then laid out, and give the club an economical, conservative administration. He says it is his intention to do all he can to enlarge the membership of the organization.

Chief of Police Murphy, of Jersey City, is the president of the association. After a short business meeting the veterans had a banquet.

ORATORIO EVENING AT FIRST M. E. CHURCH

GIVEN BY TWO CHOIRS UNDER DIRECTION OF J. E. SKIFF.

Before a good sized gathering in the First M. E. church, last night, an oratorio was presented by the combined choirs of that church and the Presbyterian of Westfield. It was given under the direction of J. Edmund Skiff and was thoroughly enjoyed, every number receiving long applause.

The soloists were Miss Bertha van-Nuis Willis, soprano; Mrs. Stephen H. Tugwell, contralto; Miss Florence Wohlfert, violinist. Miss Jessie Utter presided at the organ and Mrs. Harry N. Taylor was at the piano. Miss Wohlfert's selections were given in her usual finished manner, while Mrs. Tugwell and Miss Willis have seldom been heard to better advantage. Old Governors' Home in Jeopardy.

Perth Amboy, Nov. 24.—The home of the Colonial Governors of East Jersey narrowly escaped destruction by fire Wednesday night, when boys built a bonfire of dead leaves half a block away. The flames spread to the leaves on the property surrounding the old mansion, and a bucket brigade, hastily formed, was unable to check their progress. The Fire Department was called out, and it was necessary thoroughly to wet the ground in every direction to extinguish the fire. The building is now occupied by I. P. Holm, the Danish vice-consul here.

BRIGGS' BOOKS AND BANQUET.

His Boom for Governor at the Feast.

The Legislature's joint committee on treasurer's accounts examined State Treasurer Briggs' books yesterday morning in Mr. Briggs' office at the State House, Trenton, certified that they were correct, and complimented the treasurer on the conduct of the State's finances for the fiscal year that ended October 21 last. With all claims against the State paid, the amount in the treasury at the end of the year was $2,858,398.-13.

Yesterday afternoon, after the investigation had been completed, Treasurer Briggs gave a dinner to the committeemen, and his office assistants and friends, at Hildebrecht's, East Hanover street, Trenton. Speeches of more or less importance in State politics were delivered and there followed an informal discussion of general kuestions.

The launching of a pronounced boom for Treasurer Briggs for Governor was the feature of the banquet.

Treasurer Briggs, in responding to the introduction delivered by the toastmaster, Charles N. Codding, of Westfield, deputy clerk of the Supreme Court, said that he could not express his deep sense of the respect and loyalty that his friends had declared for him. There were good words from the different speakers as to the faithful manner in which the treasurer's department had been directed by the chief clerk, L. Kensil Wildrick, of Essex county.

Mr. Owens was at court yesterday morning attempting to reduce the bail to $3,000. Scaduto was originally held on $5,000 bail. The case will probably come up again in June.

Special Musical Service.

Under the auspices of the choir of the First Baptist church a musical service will be held at the church on Tuesday night, December 5. The choir, augmented by several voices for the chorus, will render Gaul's "Holy City" and a few other selections. William Holmes, baritone; Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto; Miss Louella C. Harris, soprano, and George Smith, tenor, will take the solo parts.

G. A. Grand Regent Here.

Grand Regent James Rogers and other state officers of the order visited Plainfield Lodge, No. 711, R. A., last night, to see how things are going. They were cordially welcomed by a good-sized turnout. They made the usual nice speeches, and received full measure of applause. No special features of entertainment marked the visit. The speakers made no reference to the rate trouble.

Women in Slander Suit.

Miss Alma Boyle, of Westfield, was plaintiff in District Court at Elizabeth yesterday in a suit for $300 damages against Miss Lena Hamburger, whom she charged with having on October 12 last made slanderous statements about her. Counsel for the plaintiff was Paul Q. Oliver, and William Newcorn appeared for the defendant.

Vote of Thanks.

At a meeting of the Auxiliary Board of the hospital this morning a resolution was passed extending a vote of thanks to all persons who aided in the affairs and who contributed to its success. A cordial invitation is extended to all who wish to do so to visit the hospital on Thanksgiving Day.

WORK OF SNEAKTHIEF.

Watchung Avenue Robber Got in House by Prying Door Open.

Details of the robbery of John Huntsman's house at 1402 Watchung avenue, which was reported in The Daily Press yesterday, were given out by the police this morning. The crook was a sneakthief. He gained entrance to the house early Wednesday night by prying open a side door, and rummaged the house for silver and small articles of jewelry. He got a number of pieces, but the value of the haul has not been estimated. Chief Kiely said it was probably not great. The loss is covered by burglar insurance.

There was nobody in the house when the thief made his visit. The family was out of town and the servant girl, who had been left in charge, was out. She reported the robbery at 9:30 o'clock.

Commend New Almshouse Plans.

Jersey City, Nov. 24.—The Hudson county branch of the State Charities Aid Association met Wednesday and examined the plans for the new almshouse which is to be built by the freeholders, at a cost not exceeding $200,000. Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, president of the State organization, was present, and with the members of the local body and Dr. Wight, State superintendent of Charities and Corrections, commended the plans. The new almshouse will be of brick, three stories high, and will accommodate 700.

Conducted Vault Test.

The Manganese Steel Safe Company conducted another of its vault tests at the Mobus stone quarry on upper Somerset street, yesterday afternoon. Bread
Legal and Illegal

The Royal Baking Powder is a pure, grape cream of tartar powder. Its greater healthfulness and absolute superiority over other powders are shown by the United States Government official tests, and are so universally recognized that its use is approved and encouraged by health officers at home and abroad.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Guard your food against the alum baking powders.

Alum baking powders are considered so injurious to health, and their promiscuous sale a source of such danger, that their use is universally condemned by physicians and health officers. In many States the law requires that they shall be branded to warn consumers that they contain alum.

In the District of Columbia, under the laws of Congress, the use of alum in bread, biscuit, cake and other food is a misdemeanor.

Alum baking powders may be known by their price. Powders sold from ten to twenty-five cents a pound, or twenty-five ounces for twenty-five cents, are not made of cream of tartar.

HEARD THAT HUSBAND HAD MARRIED ANOTHER

MRS. LAMBLEY, SURPRISED BY TESTIMONY IN HER DIVORCE SUIT.

Mrs. Anna Bell Lambley put on the war paint when she heard that her husband, Howard John Lambley, whom she is suing for divorce on the ground of desertion, had established a home in Bayonne and was living there with another wife and two children. This was a new feature in her case, and as soon as it came out in evidence heard before Francis Child, as a special master, she left the office vowing that she was going after her recreant spouse.

Mrs. Lambley, who was a Miss Hyer, became Mrs. Lambley in New York, October 6, 1892. After this marriage they lived in New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, the husband, it is alleged, deserting his wife in Newark on Christmas Day, 1900. They have one son, now 12 years of age. Since her husband left her Mrs. Lambley has been living with her father, 59 Pennsylvania avenue, Newark.

At the hearing Mrs. Lambley exhibited a photograph of two women which she had found in her husband's trunk six months before he left her. He had at that time told her one was of a relative, but Mrs. Florence Scharrer identified it as a picture of Lillie Minster, of Bayonne, whom she said Lambley had married since leaving in wife in Newark. She also testified that the couple had two children. When Mrs. Lambley heard of this conduct of her husband she said she was going after him, and that he would have to face a more serious charge than desertion. She is represented by William H. Parry.

TIFFANY BUILDING SOLD.

Firm Sells Structure It Had Occupied Continuously Since 1870.

Tiffany & Co. have sold for a sum said to be between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 their building at the southeast corner of Union Square and Fifteenth street, New York, to the Moss Realty Company. The sale involves the famous Tiffany Building itself, a five-story iron front structure on a plot fronting seventy-seven feet on the square and 142 feet on the street, and the lease of the land for nineteen and one-half years. The land is Hoffmen leasehold. In the transaction Tiffany & Co. were represented by Whitehouse & Porter, Charles T. Cook, president of Tiffany & Co., signing the contract for the company. The buyers were represented by Benjamin S. Wise.

The purchasing concern is a new corporation, with offices in the Transit Building, its members being Harry E. Moss, Mortimer Schleestein, and George W. Korn. The Moss Company will probably lease the building as a whole, or will lease the ground floor and basement, with the storage vaults formerly used for the safekeeping of the Tiffany diamonds and jewelry, to a banking house.

The Tiffany Company has occupied the building continuously from 1870 up to two months ago, when the firm moved to its new store at Fifth avenue and Thirty-seventh street.

WOMAN HELD UP IN STREET.

Scares Off Well Dressed Stranger Who Stops Her.

New Brunswick, Nov. 24.—Mrs. Simeon Morris, wife of a milkman living on Somerset street, a short distance beyond the city limits, was held up by a well dressed man when near her home Wednesday evening. Mrs. Morris, who is a young woman, had her young baby with her and was walking to the French street terminus of the trolley line. When near a hedge skirting St. Peter's cemetery she saw a man walking in an opposite direction.

As he came up to her he put the muzzle of a revolver in her face and ordered her to stop. She seized the weapon with her free hand and tried to wrest it from him, at the same time shrieking for help. The man aimed a blow at her, and in evading it she let go of the revolver. The man took to his heels, and Mrs. Morris hastened home and notified her husband. The police were notified by telephone, and volunteer posses searched the woods, but found not trace of the man.

Rahway Takes No Action.

Rahway, Nov. 24.—A meeting of the present Mayor and Common Council, together with the incoming officials, was called Wednesday night by the Water Board, for the purpose of building a water filter for the city. The Water Board wanted the Council to guarantee the payment of $40,000 needed, which Councilmen-elect Drumpelman and Mershon did not feel like pledging themselves to do without more time to look into the matter. Once before the matter came up, but as the Water Board could not guarantee the payment of the bonds, and the city being full to its charter allowance of financial responsibilities, could do nothing, hence the contracting firm refused the job. Judge B. A. Vail now states that the city can guarantee the bonds if needs be. The meeting was adjourned one week.

REVIVAL MAY CLOSE STORES.

Montclair Tradesmen Will Be Asked to Suspend Business.

Arrangements have been made by the general committee having charge of the evangelistic services in Montclair for an overflow meeting Saturday evening, at Leach's Hall, that town, which will be addressed by the Rev. Dr. Henry Ostrom. The crowds have been gathering in such numbers each evening in the First Presbyterian church, that town, that larger quarters had to be sought, and a very large crowd will probably attend tonight.

A movement is on foot to request the stores and business places of the town to close at least half a day next week, the time to be named later, in order to give everyone a chance to attend a special service that will be held. The general committee met at luncheon last evening in the library of the Y. M. C. A. and discussed plans for the campaign.

Tonight the subject on which Dr. Ostrom will preach in the First Presbyterian church will be "The Gospel and Human Sorrow." Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock there will be a special service in the Methodist Episcopal church, of whic hthe Rev. Dr. A. B. Lucas is pastor. Dr. Ostrom will speak and the meeting will be for women only. A woman's choir will sing. In the evening at 7:45 o'clock he will address the men in the First Presbyterian church, and the singing will be by a men's choir. The meetings will continue all next week.

Douglas for Congress.

Boston, Nov. 24.—Unless Congress this winter accomplishes something in the way of reciprocity and revision of the tariff, and at least removes the duty on hides, Gov. Douglas will run for Congress in the Fourteenth district, as the candidate of the Democratic party against Congressman Lovering. The visit to President Roosevelt by the party of manufacturers headed by Gov. Douglas has resulted only in a feeling of discouragement. Gov. Douglass is constantly in correspondence with a large number of manufacturers interested in the subject so vital to the shoe industry.

A One-eyed Washington.

Washington, Nov. 24.—Superintendent Woods, in charge of the Capitol and grounds about it, will ask Congress this winter for permission to remove the Greenough statue of Washington, which stands on the esplanade east of the Capitol, to a suitable place indoors. From the inroads of time and weather upon the statue, one eye is gone, a large section of the nose has disappeared, and altogether the counterfeit presentation of the "Father of His Country" has assumed a battered appearance.

Paterson and Sewage Problem.

Paterson, Nov. 24.—At a meeting of the joint committee on investigation of sewage purification Wednesday night it was decided to ask the Board of Aldermen next Monday night for a $10,000 appropriation for the purpose of engaging an engineer of standing, who will assist the committee in solving the problem that confronts it. Allen Hazen, a New York engineer, has been invited to meet the committee tomorrow afternoon and discuss the matter.

Prof. Peabody With Kaiser.

Berlin, Nov. 24.—Prof. Francis Greenwood Peabody, of Harvard, who is delivering a course of lectures at the Berlin University under the plan for an international exchange of professors, dined with Emperor William at Potsdam Wednesday evening. Lieutenant-Commander Howard, American naval attache, has expressed to the emperor President Roosevelt's sympathy upon the loss of the torpedo boat off Kiel Nov. 17 with thirty-three men.

Bayonne's Mayor-elect Takes Oath.

Bayonne, Nov. 24.—Pierrre P. Garven, who on January 1 next will be installed as Mayor of this city for a term of two years, took the oath of office yesterday in the office of City Clerk Hamilton, who has been in the service of the city for thirty-four years. Clerk Hamilton has administered the oath of office to every Mayor of Bayonne. Mayor-elect Garven is a Republican.

Belmar's Postmaster Resigns.

Asbury Park, Nov. 24.—Postmaster Samuel L. Gillen, of Belmar, has resigned. The postmaster has decided to remove to California, where he will make his permanent home. Former Councilman William L. Bergen is spoken of as Mr. Gillen's probable successor. Postmaster Gillen was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of former Mayor Jackson.

Bishop O'Connor's Appointments.

Rev. John A. McDonald has been appointed by Bishop O'Connor as curate at the Church of Our Lady of Sorrows, South Orange. Father McDonald has been a professor in Seton Hall College. Rev. Daniel M. Higgins, who has been assistant to Rev. James J. Hall, rector of the South Orange church, has been appointed temporarily to St. Henry's church, Paterson.

SCANDAL HURT HIM.

Beatty Divorce Case Co-respondent Was Beaten for Office.

Vice Chancellor Stevens' court room was filled yesterday morning with Elizabethans who were interested in the divorce suit of John Benjamin Beatty, a prominent architect, of Newark, against Clara May Beatty, whom he charges with infidelity. The case was continued until November 29 at the request of counsel for the co-respondent.

The Beattys were married July 15, 1896, and lived together till August 9, 1904. Mrs. Beatty was the daughter of Benjamin Strauss, until recently a wagon manufacturer in Elizabeth. The couple have one daughter, Marian Elizabeth, aged five years. Former Governor Foster M. Voorhees is counsel for Mrs. Beatty and Samuel Schleimer for the petitioner. Former Prosecutor William R. Wilson, of Union county, counsel for the co-respondent, stated that he had but recently been retained by his client and was not prepared to go ahead with the case.

The bill names Samuel L. Carne as co-respondent. Mr. Carne is a foreman in the Singer Manufacturing Company's plant. He is a prominent lodge man and active in politics, and it is said that his connection with the Beatty divorce scandal was responsible for his defeat for councilman in the Ninth ward of Elizabeth a year ago. Carne was the Republican candidate to succeed another Republican. The petitioner is also an active Republican and his friends stood at the polls all day and caused the usual Republican majority to be transformed into a Democratic victory.

PAPERS IN BIG SUITS FILED.

Millionaire Mine Owner Defendant in Jersey City Case.

Jersey City, Nov. 24—Papers have been filed in the Hudson county sheriff's office in two mysterious suits for $300,000 each, in which David H. Moffatt, millionaire mine owner, president of a national bank of Denver, Col., and a director of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, of New York, is named as defendant. One is an action in tort and the other on contract.

The plaintiff is Charles R. Myer, said to be a wealthy hotel owner of Atlantic City, who brings both suits, as an executor, through Attorney E. B. Leaming, of San Francisco, Cal. The summons field here gives no particulars as to the basis of either action. The papers are returnable before the New Jersey Supreme Court at Trenton on December 20 next.

It is understood that Moffatt is now in New York, having lately returned from a European trip, said to have been made for the third time with a man of the name of Gay, who is a head waiter at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York. He is expected to leave for his home in Denver in a few days, and the papers in these suits will probably be served on him before he leaves.

Staats—Shields.

South Bound Brook, Nov. 24.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Shields, on the banks of the Raritan river, in this place, was the scene of a pretty wedding Wednesday, when their daughter, Miss Alice Maude Shields, was married to Abram V. D. Staats, of this place. The bride wore a blue broadcloth suit, with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The bridemaid, Miss Mae Shields, sister of the bride, wore pink silk and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. Harry Begrebing, of New York, acted as best man. The ring ceremony of the Reformed church was performed by Rev. C. T. Anderson, pastor of the Reformed church of this town. Mrs. Howard Garretson played the wedding march and also entertained the guests with music during refreshments. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Peter J. Staats, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Staats, Rev. and Mrs. C. T. Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. W. Howard, of South Bound Brook; Miss Helen Parks, of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Staats, of Plainfield; Mr. Garhardt and Mr. and Mrs. Bowie, of New York; Mr. Cornell, or Toronto, Canada; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Brokaw, of Philadelphia; John Shields, of Washington, D. C.; John Reed and John C. Somers, of Bound Brook.

Send $400 to Help Jews.

Perth Amboy, Nov. 24.—The local committee, appointed to solicit contributions for the sufferers from the massacres has sent to Jacob H. Schiff, the American treasurer, a check for $400. It is expected that another remittance of nearly as much will be made soon. H. Shragovitz is chairman of the local committee. Mr. Goldman is treasurer, and Leo Schwartz is secretary. Money is being given by Jews and Christians alike. Many Russian Jews here have relatives in the stricken parts of the Czar's empire, and no letters have been received from any of them since before the first Odessa massacre.

Smalley May Go to Reformatory.

Elizabeth, Nov. 24.—Speculation is rife here as to what sentence will be meeted out to Alfred P. Smalley, the Clayton, N. J., burglar, who yesterday pleaded non vult to two indictments in the Union County court for robbing residences in Elizabeth. A reporter learned yesterday from a usually reliable source that there is very strong probability that Smalley will be consigned to the Rahway Reformatory. He is only twenty-eight, while the age limit for reformatory prisoners is thirty-five.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Freyne," Etc.

Copyright, 1902, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Then it is that the Iron Brigade, still clinging to the McPherson wood, gets the word to fall back to its right rear, covering the Cashtown pike. There it is that they find their comrades of the Sixth Wisconsin sternly facing the coming storm despite the fact that everything seems sweeping away beyond them; and Dawes, their acting colonel, pointing backward into the low ground, shows to the brigade commander's astonished gaze that even Gettysburg is practically lost, and through that town lies their line of retreat—the only way to save those precious guns.

Four o'clock, and still the batteries of Hall and Stewart, with three hard-pounded brigades, hold their ground on the ridge, while the valley behind them is fast filling with Ewell's madly exultant men, driving Howard's beaten divisions before them. To hang on longer is simply madness. Beginning at the right, therefore, stern and silent, the devoted brigades give ground slowly, still facing the foe, still firing low and well. The crush comes as the streams of wounded thicken at the outskirts of the town, merging with the fugitives of the Eleventh corps, and the roads and streets are blocked by batteries, ambulances, stray caissons and ammunition wagons, all in full retreat. The pinch of the fight, the crowning hour of the day, the bloodiest battle of all the 40 hours of thrilling combat, is here on the slope to the north of the seminary, where, from the teeth of the foe, from the midst of their slaughtered horses, the men of the west essay to drag and save their pets, their comrades in every fight and field, the black-mouthed, smoking, heated, still thundering guns of battery "B."

Davis and Daniel—two fighting southern brigadiers they—are riding madly among their powder-stained men; driving them on in the face of those stubborn wild westerners; pointing their swords at the crippled guns, where men are straining at the wheels and slashing at the harness of the slaughtered horses. "Get those guns!" shriek the leaders. "Square accounts for the battle-flags lost in the cut!" But, between the surging rush of Carolina, Mississippi and Georgia, with the supporting Virginians at their back, and that battle-scarred battery limping slowly away down the pike, there still interposes that stern, indomitable, magnificent line in blue—all that is left of the Iron Brigade—as, front to the foe, closing ever on its colors, volleying steadily, defiantly, unflinchingly into the very face of its outnumbering, yet respectful, pursuers, it backs away over the ridge, leaving over a third of its membership strewing its tracks, another third having already been borne bleeding away toward the town, and so, as the sun goes down on the tremendous day, so, slowly, steadily, wrapped in clouds of its own battle smoke, the eastern brigade descends to the plain, the Sixth last to halt in the streets of the town and to cheer to the echo the cause of the flag, while the guns once more unlimber, on the rise of Cemetery Hill, as though daring the foemen to come on and take them. No wonder the Badgers grip hands with the Wolverines, they that remain. Almost 500 of the Michigan men went into the fight by the side of the veterans. Only 100 are left in line when at last the day is done. Fully 300 have been shot down on the field; some few have been captured. In officers alone their dead outnumber those of the rest of the brigade. Of the Black Hats surviving there stand now but 70.

"And they might have cut you off entirely," says Doubleday, as he rides among the remnants, halting along the wooded hillside, east of their rescued guns. "Buford saw, what you couldn't see through the smoke, that two brigades were sweeping down south of the seminary to intercept you. He formed his squadrons to charge. They saw it, by jove! and halted and formed squares to resist him, and that saved you. Capt. Benton, I wish you would ride over and present my compliments and thanks to Gen. Buford. He's just moving off past that stone farm house yonder down in the valley." And so ended the day.

CHAPTER XXV.

LADUE'S LAST RETREAT.

In the two great days that followed there was little to do for the little left of the Iron Brigade. Sore-hearted over the loss of so many cherished comrades, yet confident that their valor had not been vain, the survivors hung silently to their assigned position, and awaited developments.

And, when the morrow came, Benton was early in saddle and away to the left of the line. He was bitter and chafed in spirit over his wrongs. He realized that under existing conditions nothing more than half-hearted acknowledgment of error could be looked for, but he had determined that the moment things settled down and the department had time to attend to something besides the momentous affairs of the nation, he would demand justice. And now both Wadsworth and Doubleday had spoken in heartiest praise of his behavior throughout that heroic battle of the first day. So far so good. What he longed for, on one with McKinnon. What he hoped for, on another, was opportunity to teach that disdainful girl how deeply she had wronged, as well as affronted, him.

He would have known better had he had time to analyze the chagrin and pain and jealousy which possessed him all the long hours that followed his morning talk with some staff comrades of the Second corps. It seems that three days before, on the 29th of June, while they of the Second were pushing cautiously northward through Maryland, they were made aware that a column of cavalry was passing around them from the south, and that while they were swinging through Uniontown the cavalry were trotting through Westminster, only five miles from their flank. "Gregg's division, of course," said they who saw through glasses the far-distant column. "Gregg, not much!" said Haskell, who had ridden out toward Union Mills on a scout of his own. "It's Jeb Stuart with his whole outfit and not a little of ours. He must have been helping himself every mile of his way from the Potomac." And this, indeed, proved to be the case; for, as they lay in the fields about Uniontown that night, there reached them a rueful, crestfallen little party of officers, gathered in by Stuart at the crossing of the Baltimore pike. Two were field officers who from convalescent hospital were striving to overtake their regiments; the third was Maj. McKinnon, ordered to report without delay to the commanding general, Army of the Potomac; and McKinnon, it seems, had also been convalescing in Baltimore, but not from wounds. These three, with their light luggage, had been pounced upon at a wayside tavern by a roistering troop of Stuart's flankers and dragged before this cavalry commander. One of the parties presented the three captured officers. Stuart invited his captives to be seated while an aide took their names, regiments, etc., and as McKinnon gave his there was sudden sensation. The young cavalryman sprang forward, seized McKinnon's hand, shook it effusively, and, to the amaze of every one present, exclaimed: "Gen. Stuart, I am sure, sir, you will treat this gentleman with every possible consideration. It was he, sir, who so nobly defended my father at Washington when Secretary Stanton would have sent him to Fort Warren—and Rosalie, too, for that matter. It was Maj. McKinnon, sir, who pleaded their cause with the secretary and had them returned to Charlottesville. It was he, sir, who in other ways most generously aided them."

"I am glad to hear it, Jack," said the bearded general, evidently warming toward the westerner who had so befriended his kith and kin. "Of course you're—sure of it?"

'Sure of it, sir?—I had it from father and Rosalie both! They had supposed that they were indebted—or rather that their helper was a very different person, a man whom they had befriended; but that all turned out to be an error." And the upshot of it all was, said Haskell, "that Stuart sent the three to our lines, the two other officers paroled until exchanged, but McKinnon, by Jove, released with Stuart's compliments, and it's my candid belief, damn him, that Mac would a heap rather be in Washington on parole than out here on duty. Shouldn't wonder if Stuart took his measure before he let him slide." Manifestly Haskell didn't fancy McKinnon.

One thing for Benton to ponder over, therefore, was the question how on earth had McKinnon in so short a time been able to persuade that usually clear-sighted girl to the belief that he had used such powerful influence in their behalf.

But there was still another thing to add to his chagrin and perplexity. Col. Kennard, one of the paroled pair, told Haskell all he had seen of Stuart and his devil-may-care command, and much about this young confederate officer—Chilton. "Because," said Kennard, "I heard Chilton say to McKinnon he was praying that he might yet meet Capt. Benton. There was a union man he'd shoot on sight! And Winston said Amen!" "Now, Fred," said Haskell, as he called for his horse, "I've got to ride the lines and get the reports; but, we've got McKinnon up with the army at last, and soon as we're through with this business we'll nail him." But evidently it was business first in Haskell's eyes.

So Fred Benton had two burning desires as he threaded his way through the swarm of arriving batteries and rode slowly back to Wadsworth; one was to meet McKinnon and brand him as the author of the slanders and the other was in some way to wring from Chilton an explanation of his violent threat. Little did he dream how soon he should be spared the need—and through what sad, strange circumstance.

STARTLING CHARGE BY EXCISE COMMISSIONER

SAYS PRESSURE WAS BROUGHT TO HAVE HIM VOTE FOR SALOON

Dover, Nov. 24—After telling that unusual pressure had been brought to bear upon him to induce him to vote in favor of granting an inn and tavern license to Richard O'Connor, lessee of the Central Hotel, owned by L. D. Schwarz, Commissioner W. L. R. Lynd, at Wednesday night's meeting of the Board of Excise Commissioners, voted against licensing the hotel in question. Another commissioner voted a like ballot and the application was denied by a vote of one for to two against.

Mr. Lynd is superintendent of the Richardson & Boynton Stove Works, which concern has a twenty years' contract with the town, by which it pays $100 a year in lieu of the regular town tax, the saving to the company this year on a valuation of $75,000 amounting to something over $500. The contract contains a clause which declares that the annual rebate shall be allowed only as long as the contract is legal.

When the O'Connor application came up Mr. Lynd made this statement:

"I wish to say that great pressure has been brought to bear upon me to get me to vote for this license. An agent of Mr. O'Connor, in fact, Mr. Schwarz himself, called on Mr. Richardson, the president of our company, in New York, and told him that the Republican candidate for Mayor of Dover, Mr. Sturtevant, had been defeated because of the refusal of the board to grant this license, and that the same influences which had defeated him would be brought to bear to raise the taxes on the plant with which I am connected. What success Mr. Schwarz had I do not know.

"He called on me at the works today and told me practically the same thing. I said to him: 'That is very much like a threat.' He got mad and I got mad and I ordered him out of my office. I think there are enough saloons in Dover; in fact, too many. I wish to say these things so that if the Board of Excise Commissioners is to be intimidate the public may know."

"Am I to understand," Commissioner George Singleton asked quizzically, "that if we vote against this application our taxes are to be raised?"

To this Mr. Lynd answered: "No, not yours; only ours."

The Central Hotel has been unable to get a license for the last three or four years, and Mr. Schwarz, several years ago by quo warranto proceedings, attacked the constitutionality of the law providing for the appointment of excise boards in towns. He got a decision in his favor from the Supreme Court, but before that opinion was recorded the court reversed itself, and it revised decision has since been upheld by the Court of Errors.

STATES WILL PROTECT FISH.

New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania for Uniform Regulations.

Easton, Nov. Pa., 24.—Better protection for the game and food fish in the Delaware River and Lake Erie was the object of a meeting here Wednesday night of commissions appointed by the Governors of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York. Delaware and Maryland were invited, and expressed their intention to aid in the undertaking, but were not represented.

The representatives decided to urge the adoption of laws in conformity with the decision of the Detroit conference of March, 1904, which includes a closed season from November 15 to March 15 for the taking of commercial fish from the lake, fixing a license on nets and boats and the registry of boats.

It was agreed that game fish should be taken from the Delaware River only with rod, hook and line, and food fish by eel pots, fykes and set nets.

A resolution was adopted directing State Fish Commissioner Meehan, of Pennsylvania, to confer with the State fish commissioners of New York and New Jersey in an effort to have a tri-State bass hatchery located on the Delaware at or near Easton. It was agreed that the weekly close of shad fishing should be from Saturday noon until Sunday midnight.

In celebration of the thirteenth anniversary of their wedding, Mr. and Mrs. John Carney, of East Fourth street, entertained thirty friends at their home, last night. Several hours was passed pleasantly with games and music, after which refreshments were served.

Gas Victim Identified.

Elizabeth, Nov. 24.—The man who was found dead in Sigmund Welt's hotel, on Elizabeth avenue, here, on Monday night, and whose real name, it has been ascertained, was Samuel Killough, it has now developed, was a member of the Independent Order of Foresters, and had a life insurance policy in that organization. The man, who registered at the hotel as S. S. Robinson, was by occupation a gardener, single, and the last place he worked was at 808 Salem avenue, in Union township. The body was identified by his brother John, who lives at Elizabethport. The county physician, who investigated the case, gives as his opinion that the man's death was accidental. His body was found lying on the bed partly undressed, and a gas jet in the room was open. The Forester officials, however, are not satisfied with this theory of the county physician, and are making a searching investigation on their own account.

Lawyer and Juryman Nearly Fight.

Atlantic City, Nov. 24.—John J. Crandall, formerly county judge of Camden, was the principal in a sensation at May's Landing Wednesday night, when his attack on a jury that convicted Alfred Keene, a letter-carrier, accused of stealing a watch from a fellow-employe in the local office, started the jurymen from the box and necessitated interference to prevent the aged lawyer being attacked by a young juryman. The juror almost reached Crandall, and the two men would have fallen upon each other in their anger but for the interference.

MISS THATCHER WEDS.

Daughter of Actor George Thatcher is a Bride.

Miss Mary L. Thatcher, daughter of George Thatcher, the well known minstrel man and former Plainfielder, was married Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Thorn, Westfield, to Joseph K. Parker, of Shrewsbury. It was a very quiet affair and only a few relatives of the young people were present. Rev. F. E. Greenwood was the officiating pastor.

Mr. and Mrs. Parker will make their home in New York. The bride was very popular during her residence in Plainfield and enjoys a wide local acquaintance. Mr. Thatcher is at present in the West with "The County Chairman" company.

Rahway Takes No Action.

Rahway, Nov. 24.—A meeting of the present Mayor and Common Council, together with the incoming city officials, was called Wednesday night by the water board, for the purpose of building a water filter for the city. The water board wanted the Council to guarantee the payment of $40,000 needed, which Councilmen-elect Drumpleman and Mershon did not feel like pledging themselves to do without more time to look into the matter. Once before the matter came up, but as the water board could not guarantee the payment of the bonds, and the city being full to its charter allowance of financial responsibilities, could do nothing, hence the contracting firm refused the job. Judge B. A. Vail now states that the city can guarantee the bonds if needs be. The meeting was adjourned one week.

Former Councilman's Plight.

Phillipsburg, Nov. 24.—Former Councilman James Gearighty, of this place, is in trouble. It is charged that Wednesday night, while intoxicated, he went to the home of his aged parents, armed with a butcher knife, and threatened to kill both. They succeeded in escaping from the house before being harmed. Gearighty was arrested and locked up. Too excessive drinking is attributed the former councilman's plight. A few years ago he was regarded as a respected citizen, residing with his family and owning his own home. Recently he separated from his family, his home was sold by the sheriff and he is now said to be a member of the "Push gang."

AMUSEMENTS.

"A Yankee Circus on Mars" and "The Romance of a Hindoo Princess," the great dual programme which has won the paludits of countless thousands at the New York Hippodrome, remain on the boards less than a month longer, Thompson & Dundy having arranged for the production, on December 11, of an extravaganza new throughout, the title of which is "A Society Circus." On a scale of magnificence never before attained the new piece promises to be the dramatic and artistic sensation of the American stage. It is in five scenes and three acts, the climax being a water carnival of wondrous grandeur. Owing to the necessity of preparing for the production, "The Raiders" will replace "The Romance of a Hindoo Princess," that wonderful picture of East Indian life which has been the most successful creation of the dramatic season. "A Society Circus" is the conception in scene, plot, and general detail of Frederic Thompson. Manuel Flein has arranged the music and Sydney Rosenfeld produces the lyrics. The scenery has been entrusted to Arthur Voegtlin. Alfredo Edel, of Paris, designed the costumes and Landolff, of Paris and Dazian, of this city, executed them. They cost $160,000. The other outlays will bring the disbursements preliminary to the presentation of the piece to a sum near $500,000. The climax of "A Society Circus" in the fifth scene Thompson & Dundy declare, the most entrancing stage scene ever witnessed here or abroad. The great reservoir will form a lake into which thousands of fountains play their streams. Four hundred thousand candle power of electric light will shed its refulgence upon the scenes. Two dolphins, with twenty foot tails, conch shells sixteen feet square, an eighty foot sea serpent with staring electric eyes, griffins, mermaids, pond lilies with electric blossoms are some of the "properties" whose novelties, beauty and magnitude are expected to mark an era in stagecraft. And back and forth will glide a fifty-foot barge in which dozens of girls are seated. The new Hippodrome ballet will be the "Song of the Flowers," executed by the 144 girls whose steps made the "Dance of the Hours" world-famous. Their costumes are already here from Paris, and no such elaborate, gorgeous and unique examples of the art of the modiste have ever reached this country.

"When the World Sleeps" will be the offering at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night and it comes with the endorsement of capable judges from other theatrical points where its success is said to have been almost instantaneous. The story centers around two brothers whose love for the same girl has led to an estrangement between them, but nothing serious has ever come of this apparent breaking off of brotherly ties. Everything in their home goes on as usual until one night during a severe storm the body of Ernest Carlisle is found murdered. Virginia Grey, the girl with whom the brothers are in love, is known as a somnambulist and on this fatal night she is found standing beside the slain man and Robert Carlisle, in order to save the girl from the accusation of murder which he is sure will follow, takes upon himself the blame for his brother's untimely end. The many interesting events that follow make up one of the most exciting narratives that has yet found its way to the dramatic stage.

To all those who enjoy a thrilling, sensational, startling melodrama a treat will be in store for them if they will witness the brilliant sparkling gem of modern stage craft in "When London Sleeps," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre tonight. It is from the pen of Charles Darrell, the famous English writer and has the distinction of being the only play of its kind that has had a run in London, England, for three consecutive seasons and is still playing there. The story is intensely interesting with a new and original plot which is cleverly worked out by a company of acknowledged merit. The mechanical effects are up-to-date and the stage settings are beautiful.

Yorke & Adams in the new musical comedy, "Bankers and Brokers," is underlined for a second appearance at the New Plainfield theatre December 8. The company numbers sixty-five people and delighted a big audience last week.

There is the true ring about the new play which George Klimt chose to star himself in this season, under the management of Klimt and Gazzolo, and which will be seen here Thanksgiving afternoon and night. The title, "Big Hearted Jim," gives the keynote and the fine though rough personality of Jim Saxon, the sheriff of Medicine Lodge, Montana, is a fitting central figure for such a story. Just as out in the great west there is life, so the play is full of life and action with the characteristic western broad free scope. Jim is in love with a pretty school teacher who has a secret, having been the victim of a mock marriage and the one man who knows is threatens exposure if hse don't help him steal Triska, an Indian maiden and heiress. Romance, humor and pathos are dextorously interwoven through the four acts and strongly played by an excellent company.

Few plays of recent years have attained the popular vogue in so short a time, as is enjoyed by Chas. A. Taylor's enormously successful pla, "The Child Wife," which will be seen here at the New Plainfield theatre, Friday, December 1. It is a story of life as it is found today in every city in the land.

In the widely heralded play of "Sherlock Homles," which William Gillette has so deftly prepared, from interesting material furnished by Sir Conan Doyle, there is such a diversified range of scenic environment as to obtain a glimpse of many sided London under a number of peculiar aspects. From the outlying districts of the world's foremost metropolis, the audience is next shown one of those numerous underground dens of vice with which the great city abounds. Then after a peep at Sherlock Holmes' Baker street apartments, where the detective of fiction finds solace and comfort in his pipe and cocaine, comes to view; the Stepney gas chamber at midnight, and here it is that the marvelous light effects are produced, through the agency of the most powerful and unique electrical appliances ever planned for stage use. The last act reveals Dr. Watson's consulting room and those who are familiar with elaborate settings will find much in the nature of furnishings to surprise. All in all it may be said with impunity that the entire production, aside from its general effectiveness is rich in genuine novelty, concerning matters of furniture and other appropriate fittings. It is positively assured that all the details of this fine production will be in full evidence at the New Plainfield theatre, Saturday afternoon and night, December 2, when "Sherlock Holmes" will be presented by a company of superior ability and in precisely the same manner as has been the custom ever since the first performance of this exciting play.

Frequently people wander why one play makes a success and another a failure, more especially when the unsuccessful production seems the superior of its more favored contemporary. The secret lies in this, while the play that has failed to "make good" has the greater literary merit, it lacks the necessary requirements to make it palatable to the masses. The author has sacrificed the tastes of the public at the shrine of art, and failure is his penalty. Herein lies the strength of Elmer Walters' successful production, "A Thoroughbred Tramp." The public has been given what they want, and have responded so thoroughly that it stands today at the head of its class of attractions. This excellent attraction is booked at the New Plainfield theatre Monday night, Nov. 27.

Klaw & Erlangers' great Drury Lane production, "The White Cat," now the attraction at the New Amsterdam theatre, is proving the greatest success of the long list of massive entertainments this firm has presented. "The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast," which created such a sensation at the Broadway theatre four years ago, with its wonderfully beautiful ballet of "The Four Seasons," is completely eclipsed by this spectacle with its three marvelous ballets, "The Enchanted Orchard," "The Palace of Hymen" and "The Christmas of All Nations." Nothing like these in gorgeousness of scenery and costumes has ever before been staged. But scenery and costumes do not make up an entertainment and "The White Cat," in the merit of its book and musical features alone, would prove a big hit. It is really three great entertainments in one. Seats may be secured four weeks in advance.

George Edwardes' company in "Vernique" at the Broadway theatre has created a sensation in musical circles and is playing to audiences which test the capacity of this spacious playhouse. Nothing so artistically refined and beautiful, both in story, lyrics and music, has been seen in New York in years. The piece is staged exactly as it was presented at the Apollo theatre in London for 500 nights, with the original cast intact, including Ruth Vincent in the title role.

George M. Cohan began his fourth engagement within eight months at the New York theatre last Monday evening and repeated his former successes, opening to a capacity audience and playing to all the house would hold at each performance since. The success that Mr. Cohan and his bright play have achieved is wonderful and nothing like it stands recorded in the history of the stage. Mr. Cohan is supported by the same players who appeared with him at his former appearances here, including Tom Lewis as "The Unknown."

Joseph Cawthorn, in Klaw & Erlanger's big production of "Fritz in Tammany Hall," is now in his last two weeks at the Herald-Square theatre. His engagement at this house will end Saturday evening, Nov. 25. This musical play has made a splendid impression during its New York run and has been most flatteringly patronized by large audiences. Mr. Cawthorn is one of the funniest, yet most refined, comedians on the American stage and his work appeals especially to people who delight in comedy devoid of horse play and coarseness. The musical features of this piece are superb. The departure of Mr. Cawthorn and his company from the Herald-Square theatre will be a distinct loss to the roster of attractions now playing in New York.

Marie Cahill has made the hit of her career in "Moonshine," at the Liberty theatre, where, owing to a contract which calls for the appearance of Thomas W. Ross in "A Fair Exchange" at this house, she cannot remain longer than Saturday, Dec. 2. "Moonshine" has proved the greatest musical novelty of the season and gives Miss Cahill opportunities for the display of that dry humor so peculiar to her and which has made her so popular in New York. During the action of the piece Miss Cahill renders several musical numbers which have at once become deservedly great favorites among those who delight in catchy lyrics and brilliant airs. Miss Cahill is supported by a large company headed by well-known players. Her chorus is made up of a number of very attractive young women, who excel as singers and dancers. Seats may be ordered by mail or telegraph.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S FAMOUS PROCLAMATION

ISSUED BY THE FATHER OF HIS COUNTRY, ON JAN. 1, 1795.

The first national observance of the day followed the proclamation of President George Washington, issued in January, 1795. It will be read with interest, as it was the first real "crow" that our forefathers permitted themselves after the stirring times of the Revolution. It was as follows:

"When we review the calamities which afflict so many other nations, the present condition of the United States affords much matter of consolation and satisfaction. Our exemption hitherto from foreign war, an increasing prospect of the continuance of that exemption, the great degree of internal tranquility by the suppression of insurrection which so wantonly threatened it, the happy course of our public affairs in general, the unexampled prosperity of all classes of our citizens, are circumstances which particularly mark our situation with the indications of the Divine beneficence toward us. In such a state of things it is an especial manner our duty as a people, with devout reverence and affectionate gratitude, to acknowledge our many and great obligations to Almighty God, and to implore Him to continue and confirm the blessings we experienced.

"Deeply penetrated with this sentiment, I, George Washington, President of the United States, do recommend to all religious societies and denominations, and to all persons whomsoever, within the United States, to set apart and observe Thursday, the 19th day of February next, as a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, and on that day to meet together and render sincere and hearty thanks to the great Ruler of nations for the manifold and signal mercies which distinguish our lot as a nation; particularly for the possession of constitutions of government which unite, and by their union, establish liberty and order; for the preservation of our peace, foreign and domestic; for the reasonable control which has been given to a spirit of disorder in the suppression of the late insurrection and generally for the prosperous conditions of our affairs, public and private, and at the same time humbly and fervently beseech the kind Author of these blessings graciously to prolong them to us; to imprint on our hearts a deep and solemn sense of our obligations to Him for them; to teach us rightly to estimate their immense value; to preserve us from the arrogance of prosperity, and from hazarding the advantages we enjoy by delusive pursuits, to dispose us to merit the continuance of His favors by not abusing them, and by corresponding conduct as citizens and as men to render this country more and more a safe and propitious asylum for the unfortunate of other countries; to extend among us true and useful knowledge; to diffuse and establish habits of sobriety, order, morality, and piety, and finally to impart all the blessings we possess or ask for ourselves to the whole family of mankind.

"In testimony whereof, I have caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed to these presents, and signed the same with my hand, done at the city of Philadelphia the first day of January, 1795.

"GEORGE WASHINGTON.

"By the President:

"Edward Randolph."

ONCE WAS ENOUGH.

A piano tuner in an uptown apartment had just settled down to his work when the woman of the house came into the room, dressed for the street.

"Are you going out?" he asked.

"Yes," she answered, with some surprise. "Why do you ask?"

"I heard you tell the maid when she went out a few minutes ago to be sure and be home by 10 o'clock."

"I did. It is her evening out."

"And there is nobody else in the apartment?"

"Certainly not," replied the woman, showing some irritation. "Are you afraid to stay here alone?"

"Sure, I am," answered the piano tuner, gathering up his tools, "and I don't mean to either. The firm does not ask us to unless we wish. I had my lesson two years ago. After I had worked in an apartment alone a man called to polish the furniture. He worked alone, too. Next day several valuable articles were reported missing and I was visited by the police. I knew I hadn't taken them. The furniture man swore he hadn't, and I believed him. It was a week of suspicion and misery for me and my family that I'll never forget. I take no more chances. I'll come back tomorrow when the maid is here."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Pittsburg, Nov. 23.—At yesterday's session of the American Federation of Labor the committee on President Gompers' report endorsed the eight-hour day for union printers, and the executive council was instructed to continue aid, if necessary, after January 1. SOFTNESS OF SEALSKIN.
Is Rivaled by Human Hair Where Dandruff is Eradicated.
Sealskin is admired the world over for its softness and glossiness; and yet the human hair is equally as soft and glossy when healthy; and the radical cause of all hair trouble is dandruff, which is caused by a pestiferous parasite that saps the vitality of the hair at its root. Newbro's Herpicide is the only preparation that is fatal to the dandruff germ. Without dandruff there is no falling hair, but a luxuriant growth of glossy, soft hair is certain. Scouring the scalp won't cure dandruff. Kill the dandruff germ. Thousands of women owe their beautiful suits of hair to Newbro's Herpicide. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

A WOMEN'S IDEA OF MAN'S IDEAL WOMAN

Have you ever heard, oh, reader! the average man descanting on his notion of the ideal woman? If you have you know what a glorious creature she is. But does it ever occur to you to wonder whether he would actually fall in love with her if he met her?

Perhaps he never does meet her, for the ideal woman of most men's imaginations is too perfect to exist in this imperfect world. She is more angel than woman—a lovely, ethereal creature, too good to live with, fit only to worship, says the Philadelphia Bulletin.

She is divinely unselfish, never gossips, never losses her temper, is always tactful, thinks nothing but good of everyone, is never jealous, is lovely to look upon, is intelligent and accomplished, and is, moreover, a splendid housewife and manager, withal economical. She has all the qualities of the cherubim and seraphim and one can only reflect upon the misery the poor angelic lady would have to endure if she really existed in the flesh and were compelled to dwell in the midst of the rest of us faulty creatures! She would be pitiably lonesome.

For there is nobody on earth who could match up to the virtues of this highly impossible She. Certainly no man could.

It may be noticed that while a man demands a great deal of his ideal woman, he is rather impatient if she returns the compliment by demanding things of him. He likes to monopolize the market in demands. He expects a woman to be all patience and gentleness, serene and self-controlled under all provocation, and ever ready with the healing balm of forgiveness and forgetfulness where his back-slidings are concerned. She must be good and sweet, and like Caesar's wife, "above suspicion."

All this he asks of the faulty every-day woman he marries.

Suppose he should marry his ideal, his perfect woman? Ten chances to one he'd be tired of her in a month. He would be so worn out trying to live up to her that he would seek the divorce courts to find some one a little more human and approachable.

And what is he prepared to offer the perfect woman, if he marries her? Is he perfect himself, as he expects his ideal to be? He would like her to live up to his conception of an ideal woman, but would he be ready to live up to her conception of an ideal man? Ah, how seldom!

For we are all of us so constituted that we cannot live in too rarified an atmosphere. The man or woman who gets too far away from our level is apt to get out of the orbit of our human affections.

It is as well to stop prating about impossible ideals and to make the most of each other just as we are—ordinary men and women, full of faults and unrealized aspirations. If we can love each other in spite of the failings common to us all we may find out what real love is.—Newark Advertiser.

ABOUT ICE CREAM.

Strawberry Ice Cream.

Put a pint of cream in a saucepan with half a pound of sugar, and set over the fire to heat. When the sugar is dissolved stand aside to cool; add a pint of cream. Mash a quart and a half of ripe strawberries with three-quarters of a pound of sugar and let stand one hour, then strain the juice off, pour into the cream, mix well, turn into a freezer and freeze.

Plain Vanilla Cream.

To make a nice, plain vanilla cream, large enough for dinner for a small family, take one quart of fresh cream, sweeten it with two cupfuls of powdered sugar, and add two teaspoonfuls of extract of vanilla. Stir this mixture rather gently with a patent egg beater, or with a small cream whip, till the sugar is quite dissolved, then put it into the freezer and freeze it.

Cherry Ice Cream.

Put one pound of granulated sugar and one-half pint of water in a saucepan over the fire. Stir until the sugar is all dissolved, then let the syrup come to a boil. Drop in gently one quart of white cherries, pitted, and let simmer fifteen minutes. Strain carefully, and when the syrup is cold add one quart of sweet cream and freeze. When it gets rather thick remove the dasher, beat well with a wooden paddle, and stir in the fruit. Pack and let stand three or four hours to ripen. Another very nice way to serve cherry ice cream is to stone and crush the cherries, and add sugar to make them sweet. Chill on ice, and put a spoonful of the crushed fruit in small glasses, and heap over vanilla ice cream. Raspberry, peach, apricot and banana ice creams can be made and served with the same directions as strawberry or cherry ice creams.

Chocolate Ice Cream.

LITERARY.

One function of the up-to-date magazine is to reflect the moving spirit of the time, and this is the striking thing about the December McClure's. As befits a holiday number, it is filled with good, strong fiction, there is a Jack London story, one of his best, and six other short stories; but first in importance are the contributions of William Allen White, Ray Stannard Baker and the Rev. Charles D. Williams. William Allen White, who, as a judge of public men, has become almost the national oracle, cool, incisive, unerring, fixes the place of Folk in national affairs. He tells of his great accomplishments in Missouri, measures the man, and finally shows that he is not big enough yet for Presidential timber.

"Railroad Rebates" is Ray Stannard Baker's second paper on the railroad question. He explains what rebates are, how they are paid, who pays them and how they affect industry; illustrating the whole process by specifice instances, little human stories picked out from railroad men and shippers and gamers and the sufferers by the system.

Jack London's "Love of Life" is a harrowing tale of human endurance, pitting against nature and against each other a starving man and a starving wolf. Blumenschein has illustrated it wonderfully, in color. In contrast to this tale of primitive strength is a delicate, fanciful Irish folk tale full of the nimble wit of the race in which Herminie Templeton introduces again Darby O'Gill, and the King of the Fairies. Then there is the "Courtship of the Boss," the heart-history of a ringster, an amusing and true story; "The Deepwater Debate," a wholesome little tale of the excitements and the love-making of an old home town and stories by Jean Webster and Adeline Knapp.

Editorially appears a character sketch of Charles Evans Hughes, who has been lifting the lid from insurance in New York, and a critical estimate of Christianity in practice, "The Final Test of Christianity," by the Rev. Charles D. Williams.

We certainly have lived in a groove as far as telescopic sights go. For years they have been looked upon as a sort of underhand advantage, and riflemen of rigidly correct ideas would not condescend to use them. Yet, in target shooting we have allowed palm rests, Schutzen butts, hair triggers, abnormally heavy barrels, spirit levels, wind gauges and vernier sights, though we turned balky immediately the telescope was proposed as an additional fitting. It looks as though the telescope were to emerge from its long night. Last spring the Zettler rifle club permitted the use of the sight at its indoor championship. And this famous club has followed up its initial action by permitting the use of the telescope at its thirty-first annual festival and tournament recently held at Union Hill, N. J.—Recreation for November.

Hall Caine, who looks like Shakespeare even if he doesn't write like him, came over to these shores some weeks ago to see the American production of his dramatized novel, "The Prodigal Son." He was good enough to allow himself to be interviewed on American Millionaires, The Food of Manxman, The Future of Fiction and "Why I Am a Novelist," and now he is hard at work upon a fictional rendition of the Book of Job. Mr. Caine is most serious as an author, but is personally very jolly. He has a very infectious laugh and harbors convictions on many subjects, including life. The portrait of "the Manx Shakespeare" shows a man with a large nose and much hair. He has a remarkable frontal development and a pair of gimlet eyes—eyes which look far out into the future—eyes which can count at a glance rich royalties on popularity. He is red-headed and red-bearded. He has a way of smiling in his beard. He writes a beautiful hand and prefers standing collars. He is a rare talker, and of all his books he favors "The Christian," and never tires of reading it. Mr. Caine is the male Corelli of the literary world, but disclaims the distinction. He is the most modest author in the Isle of Wight, where he writes all of his extraordinary books, using an American fountain pen and plain white paper. Mr. Caine's annual visit to this country has an influence upon affairs which cannot be overesteemed. It is interesting to speculate upon the inverted conditions of modern life if Mr. Caine had been exchanged in the cradle with Thomas W. Lawson. Then we might have had an author who exploited his speculations, instead of a speculator who merely exploits his authorship.—The Christmas Metropolitan Magazine.

—The American Cameragraph Co., of New York, will give a moving picture entertainment under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. on the afternoon of Thanksgiving Day. A silver offering will be received at the door.

—John Wanamaker, in writing of Ellwood, the magician, who will appear with other talent in the Y. M. C. A. Star Course on Thanksgiving night, says: "His magical marvels and picture sketchings were gracefully done and exceedingly attractive."

KEPT TIME 200 YEARS.

Clock That Has Passed Along Trough Seven Generations.

S. S. Peters, of 572 South Twenty-eighth street, Omaha, is the owner of a calendar clock which is 194 years old and still running. It has come down in direct line of descent from the original purchaser through the oldest male member of the Peters family through the two centuries of its existence. There is no flaw in its pedigree. The clock was built by Felix Owen in the famous town of York, England, in 1711, and was purchased by Newtown Peters. Seven years afterward Newton Peters came to America, settling at Jamestown, Va. A few years later he, with William Byrd, founded the town of Petersburg, Va. On the death of Newton Peters, in 1725, the clock became the property of his son, Absalom, and on his death, in 1760, Absalom's son, Zachariah, came into possession. Zack Peters was an officer in the American navy and when he died his son, Tunis—evidently named in memory of the scene of actual naval service—got the timepiece. In 1787 Tunis Peters became a member of the colony moving to Ohio and brought the clock with him to that then new country. On his death, in 1802, his son, also Tunis, became the owner of the old clock. He was one of the pioneers of Ross county, O., where helived until 1855. His successor in the ownership was Jonathan L. Peters, of Columbus, O., who died in 1883. The clock then became the property of Jonathan's only surviving son, Samuel S. Peters, now on the Bee staff.

It will thus be seen that the Peters clock has counted the hours of seven long lived generations of the Peters family.

The body of the Peters clock is of cherry, the works of brass. So well did ancient Felix Owen do his work that the only repairs ever made on his handiwork have been in the nature of occasionally renewing the cords that support the weights. It is an eight-day clock, and must be wound once a week. The face of the clock shows the phases of the moon and also indicates the ebb and flow of the tides. It shows the days of the month also. The face of the dial is of enamel and shows marks of its great age in the shape of cracks, honorable scars of a useful life. The figures are Arabic characters, an inch and en eighth in length. The corners of the face protecting the dial are painted with quaint old English figures. The second hand is three inches in length, the minute hand six inches and the hour hand five inches. The clock frame is eight feet high and eighteen inches wide. The pendulum rod is four feet and ten inches long, and the two weights tip the scales at thirty pounds. It is still in excellent running order and correctly records the time of today as it did the sedate days two centuries ago.

This old clock was on exhibition at the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia in 1876, with no other veteran of its kind to dispute its precedence for age. Subsequently it was exhibited in the Curtis Press Club rooms at Columbus, O., for several months, when the Ohio Historical Society tried in vain to secure it for the State collection of antiquities.

Persons in Virginia, Philadelphia and New York have repeatedly made flattering offers in money for the clock, and other branches of the Peters family have been anxious to get possession of it. Samuel S. Peters has steadily refused to part with the honored timekeeper of the lives of his ancestors. He brought the clock to Beatrice, Neb., from Ohio in 1885, and has frequently loaned it for exhibition at gatherings of old folks. For several years, however, this has been stoped for fear of possible injury in moving.—Omaha Bee.

Decorations for Generals.

Washington, Nov. 24.—Lieut.-Gen. Adna B. Chaffee, chief of staff of the army, has received from France the ribbon and other things that go to make up the decoration of Grand Commander of the French Legion of Honor. The honor was given Gen. Chaffee by President Loubet when the General was in France in September attending the annual manoeuvres of the French army. Brig.-Gens. Bell and Crozier and the three aides who accompanied the officers were honored in a similar manner. Gen. Chaffee sent his decoration to the State Department, where is has been laid away with many others which have been received by American soldiers and statesmen. Unless Congress passes a special act Gen. Chaffee cannot accept the decoration.

THAT QUAY STATUE.

Pennypacker May Give Up His Cherished Plan.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 24.—Gov. Pennypacker is being showered with letters and petitions from all over the State, urging his to abandon his project for the erection of a statue of the late Senator M. S. Quay in Capitol Park. Some writers even go so far as to threaten that if the statue project is carired out the unveiling ceremonies will be attended by incidents very humiliating to the family and friends of the dead Senator.

Most of the protests are based on the assumption that the overwhelming defeat of the remnant of the old Quay Republican organization in the recent State election was in the nature of a popular repudiation of the men and methods for which Quay stood, and that therefore an attempt to immortalize him in stone or bronze at this time would be inappropriate.

The act of the last Legislature in appropriating $20,000 for a statue of Quay in Capitol Park was at the personal request of Gov. Pennypacker. Now it is believed that the Governor will reluctantly permit the appropriation to revert back into the State Treasury. Members of the dead Senator's family are said to be privately advising such a course.

IN INTRODUCING OTHERS.

Avoid Elaborate Phrases—Pronounce Names Distinctly.

It is understood, of course, that a man is always presented to a woman, an unmarried woman to a married one, and a young man always to the older members of his sex. In introducing people pronounce both names distinctly. If one name has ecaped the introducer's memory it is safest and best to excuse oneself and ask for the forgotten name. The most delicate sensibilities should not be wounded by such a slip of memory, for who is there who has not at some time forgotten a well known name?

The debatable question as to whether a woman should shake hands with a man who is being introduced to her has been solved by makinfl it only obligatory for the woman to offer her hand to the man when the occasion is informal and the man is being introduced to one person at a time. When he is meeting a group of people it makes it embarrassing and awkward to shake hands with all. A hostess must rise and shake hands with each of her guests. A woman only rises when presented to older or more distinguished women, to her host, or an elderly and distinguished man. When being introduced to a group of people it is only necessary to bow slightly or repeat their names. When being introduced to a young woman it is the young man's place to express pleasure at their meeting. When two people are formally introduced, excepting in the foregoing case, they are supposed to murmur each other's names or express some conventional phrase of pleasure at the introduction.

It is sometimes necessary to introduce onself. A guest must introduce himself or herself at once to the hostess, if the ceremony has been overlooked by their mutual friend. A woman cannot introduce herself to a man unless she is a matron or the hostess of the occasion. People meeting on the street or shops do not introduce casual acquaintances whom they may see by chance. When two people are talking to each other, with a group of persons standing near and known only to one or two, the latter introduces the others by merely mentioning the names. Such an introduction calls for a slight bow, and no further recognition of the acquaintance need be taken.

At a formal or informal dinner all the guests should be made known to each other before going into the dining room. At afternoon teas the members of the family and ladies in charge of the refreshments should endeavor to make as many of the guests known to each other as possible, asking names where it is necessary. Guests at public and private receptions are also privileged to speak to each other without an introduction.—New York World.

LEST YOU FORGET!
That Thanksgiving is coming, we gently remind you that gala attire is the order of the day. Everybody wants to look his best and turn out spick and span in honor of this most American of all holidays. No need of new clothes either when those you already possess can be made by an expert cleaner to look "better than new." Not an empty phrase that, but a fact, for the garment that's turned out by an up-to-date cleaner looks as if it really belonged to the wearer and loses the too-too apparent "newness" of the "just out of the shop" suit or gown.

TO THE POINT.

Woman's Good Intentions That Went Wrong.

"You've known plenty of people who never could tell how their money got away from them, haven't you?" asked a Denver man of a friend as they lunched in a downtown restaurant yesterday. "Well, I'm one of that kind. I earn a good salary, but try as I will to prevent it, my money slips away and I never know just what becomes of it. My wife calls it a disease and I guess she's right. Monday she tried to effect a cure in my case. 'Will,' she said to me, 'women know how to keep hold of money better than men do. I'm going to try saving yours. Today I'm coming down to your office and get your week's pay. I'll show you how to save it. I'm going to cure you of your money losing disease.'

"'All right,' I replied. During the morning she came in and I gave her all my money but a couple of dollars. Monday evening I found her looking very grave. 'What's the matter, dear?' I asked. 'Does saving money make you sad?'

"'Will,' she said, 'I'm sorry—awfully sorry.'

"'About what?' I asked.

"'About your money,' she replied. 'After leaving you I went to a store and bought a dime's worth of candy. When I reached home I found I'd lost all the rest of the money.'"

"Did you get mad?" asked the man who was listening.

"Well," said the other after a pause, "would you have lost your temper?"—Denver Post.

YOUNG FRIENDS CONFER

General Convention of Society Being Held in Local Meeting House Today.

OVER 200 DELEGATES

Representatives from All Parts of the Country—Dr. Trueblood Among the Speakers.

Friends to the number of over 200 are gathered today at the Watchung Avenue meeting house attending the annual general conference of the Young People's Society of Friends, "Hicksite" branch. The association is represented by delegates from Baltimore, Wilmington, Washington, Virginia, New York and as far west as Richmond, Ind., and while the gathering is not quite as large as some previously held, it is considered one of the best and most interesting.

James S. Hiatt, of George School, Newtown, Pa., is the president of the association, and Miss Emily W. Ingrame, of Philadelphia, the secretary. Mr. Hiatt presided at the morning and afternoon sessions.

This morning the subject under consideration was "The Training for Service in the Society of Friends," and was introduced by Miss Eleanor Wood, of the George School, and Arthur M. Dewees, of the Philadelphia Ledger, two former students of the Woodbrook Settlement of Friends, near Birmingham, Eng. This is the only Friends training school in the world. It was founded by Mr. and Mrs. George Dabury, two wealthy and influential Friends.

After the introductio nof the subject, there was a general discussion, in which President W. W. Birdsall, of the Philadelphia High School for Girls; Miss Elizabeth Stover, principal of the Brooklyn Friends School; Daniel Willets, of Trenton; Miss Florence Tittensohn, Mrs. Cora H. Carver and Mrs. Grace Bond, of Philadelphia, took part.

As a result of this discussion, R. Barclay Spicer, one of the editors of the Friends Intelligencer, of Philadelphia, offered a proposition that the conference send one or more students to the Woodbrook Settlement. The matter was referred to the executive committee and will be decided at this afternoon's conference.

This afternoon an address of more than usual interest was delivered by Dr. Benjamin F. Trueblood, of Boston, secretary of the American Peace Society. He recently returned from attending the peace conference held at Luzerne, Switzerland, and the subject of his address was "The Present State of International Arbitration." As this was the chief feature of the afternoon session no attempt was made to allow time for a discussion of the subject afterward. Dr. Trueblood is a Friend of the "Orthodox" branch, and is a neloquent and frocible speaker. His remarks regarding the peace conference was intensely interesting, as were also his views on the present status of international arbitration.

Following the morning session dinner was served to all at the meeting house by the local Young People's Society of Friends, of which Margaret Jackson Shoemaker is the president. She delivered the opening address of welcome to the representatives from other societies. The members of the local Society of Friends in charge of the entertainment comprised Clara Rushmore, chairman; Sarah C. Hutchinson, Edith Cooley, Mabel Vail, Mercy Vail, Alveretta Vail, Cornelia Gavett, and they were assisted by Mrs. Charles Palmer, Mrs. Henry Palmer, Mrs. J. W. Poole and other members of the Plainfield Society.

While a majority of the visiting Friends will return home after the conference, several will remain over tomorrow and will attend the service at the Watchung Avenue meeting house in the morning. Among the prominent visiting Friends besides those mentioned is Charles F. Jenkins, of the Farm Journal, and assistant clerk of the Philadelphia yearly meeting.

Dunellen Special Meetings.

Another union meeting for men only will be held in the Dunellen Presbyterian church tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Frederick H. Andrews, of this city, will be the speaker. Union meetings will be held tomorrow evening at 7:30, in the First Baptist church, where Rev. W. W. Casselberry will speak, and in the Methodist Episcopal church, where Rev. Frank Fletcher will speak.

Paper on African History.

Miss Margaret W. McCutchen read a paper on "Important Events in African History" at the meeting of the Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the First Baptist church yesterday afternoon in the lecture room of the church. This paper was prepared for the Woman's Society and read before them at its meeting early in the month.

SOMERSET COUNCIL A BOUNTEOUS ENTERTAINER

LONG PROGRAMME AND MUCH TO EAT TO HONOR FEMININE FRIENDS.

Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., entertained its women friends last night. The affair was very largely attended and was as big a success as any lodge social event of the season; and the season has not been deficient in notable affairs.

There was a long programme, a potpourri of fun, elocution and music. Two farces were presented, "Rooney's Restaurant" and "Rival Tenants," in which the following took part: "Rooney's Restaurant," Ellis Emery, George Cratsley, Mrs. A. E. Willard, J. A. Dow and Wallace D. Morton; "Rival Tenants," F. M. Slater, Jr., Wallace Morton, Ellis Emery and George Cratley. There were songs by George F. Watts and Harold Willard; the latter is only ten years old.

David Dreier played violin selections and Mrs. Dreier recited.

After the entertainment refreshments of sandwiches, cake, ice cream and coffee were served in a measure of bounteousness that staggered strong appetites.

The committee in charge of the affair was made up of William Creveling, F. L. Soper, G. F. Watts, Wallace D. Morton, F. M. Slater, Jr., J. A. Dow, Ellis Emery and George Cratsley. Mr. Slater was stage manager and director.

AUTOIST GUILTY OF INJURING WOMEN

CONVICTED OF RECKLESS SPEEDING AND KNOCKING DOWN TWO.

In the Union County Court of Common Pleas at Elizabeth, before Judge Vail, a jury returned yesterday a verdict of guilty as charged in the two indictments found against Peter Cron, an automobilist.

Cron was charged with reckless speeding of an automobile on the streets of Elizabeth, Saturday afternoon, October 21, as a result of which two women were knocked down and injured, one of them seriously.

On the day of the mishap Mrs. Minnie L. Whedon, of 315 Elizabeth avenue, Elizabethport, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Maria Louise Whedon, attended a theatre performance and after it was over walked down Jersey street to Madison avenue. They were standing on the crossing a few feet from the curb, accompanied by another woman, when Cron came along in his auto.

Before Mrs. Whedon and her daughter could get out of the way they were struck by the machine. Miss Whedon was knocked into the gutter, while her mother was knocked down and run over. The other woman escaped unhurt. Mrs. Whedon is still confined to her bed by her injuries. It was alleged that the auto was running sixteen to eighteen miles an hour.

Cron had Joseph Phillip, an employe of the Singer Machine Company, riding with him in the auto when it struck the woman. The plea of Cron's counsel was that his client was not exceeding the speed limit and that Mrs. Whedon and her daughter had no business to be standing in the street when the machine came along.

The evidence was that they were three or four feet away from the curb.

MISS NEILSON A BRIDE.

Daughter of Rev. Dr. William H. Neilson Quietly Married.

Miss Katherine B. Neilson, daughter of Rev. Dr. William H. Neilson, of East Ninth street, and Bernhard Gustafson were quietly married at the bride's home this afternoon. Dr. Neilson performed the ceremony.

The wedding was simple. No invitations were sent out in Plainfield, as the family connections in New York and vicinity is large. Among those present from out of town were Alfred Neilson, of the New York Stock Exchange, and wife; Rev. Abbott Brown, son of the late Stewart Brown, of Brown Bros. & Co., of New York, and wife; Mr. and Mrs. John Neilson Carpender, Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Neilson, and Rev. and Mrs. Dale, of New Brunswick, and Lewis H. Redner, of Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Gustafson will live in Boston for the present.

Revival Bearing Fruit.

Fred Kurz, of New York, will speak at the special services to be held at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church tomorrow night. These services will be continued next week. Last night Rev. George Mooney, the pastor, was in charge. There was one convert, making four in all since the services began.

WANTS ESTATE TIED UP

Widow of C. M. Luckey, of Dunellen, Would Restrain Executors.

LAYS CLAIM TO $7,833

Charges That Husband Failed to Keep Ante Mortuary Agreement and Asks Court to Help Her Recover.

A bill of complaint has been filed in the Court of Chancery by Matilda W. Luckey, of Dunellen, against Albert Winters and Benjamin F. Luckey, executors of Charles M. Luckey, deceased, her husband, in an action to compel the fulfilment of an alleged ante mortuary agreement made by the husband.

In her bill Mrs. Luckey recites that her husband died October 30, 1903, at Dunellen, and that he left as his heirs, Benjamin M. Luckey, of Paterson; Charles M. Luckey, of this city, and his grandchildren, in Edwin, Ralph and Hamlet Jutter, of Philadelphia. Under the will, which has been duly probated, he left her certain properties and moneys.

Mrs. Luckey charges that after making the will, her husband was the owner and possessor of the buildings at 546 West Forty-second street and 271 Bleeker street, New York, and that her husband sold these properties for $23,500, and deposited the money in the First National Bank of Plainfield. At the time of the making of the deeds, she charges, her husband, in the presence of witnesses, "as an inducement in consideration" of Mrs. Luckey signing the deeds "he agreed to give her one-third of all the money he received from the sale." She charges that he died without fulfilling his agreement, and that he did not deliver to her any of the moneys, but put them intact in the bank.

She charges that the executors refuse to give the one-third of the money to her, and that they are about to pay them out to the other heirs. She asks the court to restrain the executors from paying the money out to anyone until she has established her claim.

She declares in the bill that after her husband's death she retained counsel to look after and protect her interests but that they failed to do anything in her behalf and that the time has elapsed when she could exercise a remedy at law "for the carrying out the intentions and agreement of her deceased husband." She does not state the name of counsel she employed.

William Newcorn is the solicitor for Mrs. Luckey in the present action.

W. R. C. INSPECTED.

Local Corps Found to Be in a Satisfactory Condition.

Mrs. Emma Durell, of Trenton, one of the national officers, conducted the annual inspection of Winfield Scott Relief Corps, No. 10, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., last night. The corps was found to be in an excellent condition and Mrs. Durell praised the members for efficient work. The department president, Mrs. Decker, of Jersey City, was present, and she made an address in which she complimented the local corps.

During the evening three candidates, Miss Virginia De Vine, Miss May Edgar and Miss May Smith, were initiated. At the close of the inspection refreshments were served. At the next meeting of the corps officers will be nominated.

Plenty of Oysters.

Gilbert Murray, of West Fourth street, has received a barrel of oysters from Capt. Sutton, of Barnegat, a well known waterman. Capt. Sutton sends some such Thanksgiving remembrance to Murray every year. He usually remembers Frank Hedden, who is a "regular" at Barnegat in the fishing season, but he seems to have cut him off this year. To salve Hedden's feelings Murray has divided the barrel with him.

Hurrying Macadam Work.

The macadamizing work under contract by C. M. Meeker on Monroe avenue, Randolph road and Spooner avenue is progressing more favorably than a few weeks ago. A large gang of men is employed by Mr. Meeker and he hopes to complete his task within a short time.

School Pupils' Dancing Class.

The pupils in the North Plainfield High School are forming a dancing class to meet at the Casino every two weeks. Tuesday night has been chosen. Mrs. Westcott will be the instructor. Thus far sixty pupils have joined the class.

Sermon on the Sailor.

Rev. G. M. Hunter, of New York, will speak in the Congregational church tomorrow evening; subject, "Our Debt to the Sailor."

NEW SUIT STARTED TO RECOVER ON BONDS

NO LET-UP IN FIGHT AGAINST NEW PROVIDENCE TOWNSHIP

There was an unexpected turn in the suit of Roland M. Smythe, of New York, against the township of New Providence, tried before Judge Cross, in the Supreme Court, yesterday. After all of the evidence was produced, the attorneys for the plaintiff moved for a voluntary non-suit, and it was granted, despite the vigorous protest of Attorney General Robert H. McCarter, who represents the township with Township Attorney Van Schaick. Isaac P. Runyon and Winfield S. Angleman represent the plaintiff.

The suit is brought by Mr. Smythe to recover on bonds issued by the township for the intended construction of the Passaic Valley and Peapack Railroad. These bonds were sold in the open market and are now held by the plaintiff. The amount involved at present is $69,000.

The plaintiff was forced to go to trial yesterday without sufficient witnesses to prove the signatures to the bonds, signed in 1869. Both commissinoers are now dead. Counsel for the plaintiff succeeded yesterday in taking valuable testimony of several old witnesses, which is one advantage in case of death.

Mr. McCarter claimed that the defendants should have a verdict, that the plaintiff had not proved his case or the signatures on the bonds, and opposed the motion for a voluntary non-suit. Judge Cross denied this and immediately a new suit was started. As Summit and New Providence were a part of the township at the time the bonds were issued, they are both liable in the suit which has been brought.

TRIED TO HIDE IDENTITY

"Frank Johnson" Sentenced to Prison, Proves to be Richard Walden, of This City.

ONE OF BAD GANG

Captured After He and Others Had Robbed Jersey Central Freight Car—His Family Highly Respected.

Instead of being "Frank Johnson," as he claimed when arrested, one of the four Jersey Central car thieves who starts for Trenton tomorrow to begin a two years' sentence in State prison, was revealed today as Richard Walden, a Plainfield young man whose home is on West Third street. The prisoner sought by every means to hide his identity and would have succeeded but for the clever work on the part of County Detective George Totten, of Somerville. Satisfied that the young man was giving an alias and misleading the officials as to his residence, Totten devoted three days to following up slight clues, and success crowned his efforts this morning. When confronted with the true facts, Walden broke down and admitted who he was.

The young man is but twenty-two years old and has a bad record with the local police. He has been more or less wild ever since leaving school, and not long ago narrowly escaped going to prison for robbing West End henneries. He was tried for the offense in the Union County Court, but was let off on parole.

For the past year or more he has been traveling up and down the Jersey Central on freight trains, but though he was known to be frequently in the company of "Dutch" Ides and Fred Rose, the Elizabeth desperadoes, he always gave his name as Johnson, and claimed Newark as his home. This was what he told Detectives Laveratt, Gaffney and Totten when he and four others were run down at Lincoln after breaking open a freight car and stealing a lot of sweaters, gloves and other merchandise. Fred Rose, one of the quintette, was turned over to the Union county authorities, not having participated in the actual robbery, while Walden, Robert Fisher, Frank Clark and Richard Dunn were taken to Somerville. The first three were given two years at hard labor and Dunn got eighteen months.

Walden's family is highly respected and none of the members were aware of his plight until informed by the police. He will be taken to Trenton tomorrow. His father is a painter.

PLAINFIELD YOUTHS ARRESTED AS BURGLARS

WENT TO NEW BRUNSWICK ON "BUSINESS" AND GOT PINCHED.

A member of the New Brunswick police force, gum-shoeing around after burglars who had entered a laundry, Thursday night, fastened his clutches on "Willie" Mullen and James Ennis, two Plainfield boys, as suspects and "ran 'em in." Both are known from one end of town to the other but the Brunswick sleuth was sure they were not just what they ought to be and refused to believe them when they protested innocence. At police headquarters, Mullen acted as spokesman and gave his pedigree and that of his companions without the least sign of hesitation.

As a clincher, the erstwhile "man eater" said: "Hey Sarge, if you don't think I'm tellin' the truth, call Ted Clevely on the telephone and he'll set you right."

The officer thought it would be a good idea and when the local restaurant man was rung up, the reputations of the boys received such a boost, both had visions of suing the city and getting thousands of dollars for defamation of character. Ted also advised the cop to release them at once and they were quickly let go, with profuse apologies.

"Gee," said "Willie" yesterday, "It was a fierce deal. Me an' Ennis went over to fix a football game and were waitin' for a car when the cop pinched us. No more New Brunswick for mine."

VETERAN CONDUCTOR OF CENTRAL DIES

CAPT. O. H. DAY A VICTIM OF PNEUMONIA AT 69.

Capt. Owen Huntington Day, a veteran conductor of the Central Railroad, died at his home in Dunellen yesterday forenoon. He was sixty-nine years old and had been in the Central's service for over thirty years. Death was caused by pneumonia, after six days' illness.

Captain Day won his title in the Civil War. He went to the front as first lieutenant of the Fifteenth New Jersey Volunteers, from Flemington, and his captaincy followed hard service at the front. He entered the Central's service shortly after the war, and his long connection with the road has made him familiar all along the line.

Capt. Day became a resident of Dunellen six years ago. His death leaves his wife alone. He drew a pension of $20 a month and was well-to-do.

The funeral service will be held at the house Monday night, at 8 o'clock. The body will be interred, privately, at Trenton Tuesday morning.

THIEF OF LOW DEGREE.

Humble Member of the Grafting Craft Steals Horseshoe Nails.

All sorts and conditions of thieves seem to be working in this city. One of the humble and unassuming kind helped on the epidemic of thievery early yesterday morning at Michael Quinn's blacksmith shop.

This little brother of the craft stole fifty pounds of horseshoe nails. To be sure, they were the very finest of nails, and worth in the neighborhood of fifty cents a pound; but it seems like a very unaspiring sort of robbery. The thief gained entrance to the shop by cutting out a rear window. He touched nothing but the nails.

GOFF GETS LIGHT FINE

Judge Vail Sentences Alleged Speak-easy Man to Pay a $50 Fine.

IN COURT YESTERDAY

Mild Punishment is a Surprise Here—Judge Makes no Comment—Politicians Have Nothing to Say.

John Goff, whose speak-easy was raided by Councilmen Tyler and Bullock, was brought before Judge Vail for sentence yesterday morning and fined $50.

The arraignment followed a sudden change in the court's plans. According to the announcements made by Judge Vail Goff was to have been brought up next Wednesday. Originally his case was down for final disposition on last Wednesday, but the date was moved ahead a week.

The change that brought Goff up yesterday was quietly made. Nobody except those directly interested seemed to know anything about it, even the newspaper men leaving the court in ignorance of the fact that Goff was to be sentenced. No explanation of the move could be obtained this morning, and those who have been following the case are surprised over it.

None of the politicians here who were seen this morning, appeared to have any inkling of it, and they were as much interested in the case as anybody outside of Goff himself. They had no explanation of the change to offer; they said Judge Vail was the only one who knew what induced it. They scouted the idea that there was any political wire-pulling at the bottom of it, but the simple-minded citizenry showed an annoying tendency to place their fingers to the sides of their noses and wink.

The penalty inflicted on Goff is high as such things go in the Union County Court. This is Goff's first conviction, and first convictions have rarely, if ever, brought forth more than a fifty-dollar fine.

Judge Vail made no unusual comment in passing sentence. A good many ears were pricked up to hear what his remarks to Goff would be like.

COURT'S DECISION MAY FREE CONVICTS

FAVORABLE VERDICT IN THAT WILL AFFECT FIFTY FELONS.

Trenton, Nov. 25.—An application for a writ of habeaus corpus, on the decision of which may depend the liberty of half a hundred of the inmates of the New Jersey State prison, was made before Justices Fort, Reed and Bogert in the Supreme Court yesterday. After hearing the arguments for and against the writ, the court announced that it would render its decision in a short time.

The case is that of John Mahaney, alias Jack Shepherd, who was sentenced from Hudson county. The point raised by Mr. McGinnis, of Ward & McGinnis, counsel for Mahaney, was that of the right of a court to impose successive sentences. Mahaney was convicted on two charges of breaking and entering with intent. On the first charge he was sentenced to seven years in the State prison, and on the second charge to five years. He has served the first.

Mr. McGinnis held that when the court imposed the second sentence to begin on the expiration of the first it exceeded its authority, according to the statute which provides that a defendant must begin his sentence in the institution to which he is sentenced within twenty days after sentence is pronounced. The authority for the second term was the indorsement on the back of the commitment that the term was to begin upon the expiration of the first.

Prosecutor William H. Speer opposed the application for the writ. In the course of his argument Mr. Speer said the case was of unusual importance, State Prison Keeper Osborne having informed him that there was close to a half hundred convicts serving successive sentences in the State prison, who are anxiously watching the decision which the court will render.

HERPICIDE PRODUCES MARVELOUS RESULTS

The lady whose photograph is here reproduced—writes the following letter about

Newbro's Herpicide

"the original remedy that kills the dandruff germ."

The Herpicide Company,
Detroit, Mich.

I am sending you my photograph to show what Newbro's Herpicide has done for me. Since I first tested it thoroughly on my own hair, I have used it exclusively in giving scalp treatments, and with wonderful success. I would not think of trying to get along without it.

Yours sincerely,
Hair and scalp specialist, MRS. ANNA CONNOR.
No. 2807 Archer Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

The natural beauty and abundance of this lady's hair is a striking illustration of what Herpicide will accomplish, and this is only one of the thousands of letters that the Herpicide Company have on file from people all over the world who are pleased to tell of the marvellous results obtained by the use of Herpicide.

The Only Positive Safeguard Against Baldness is in the Use of

known throughout the world as "the original remedy that kills the dandruff germ." Herpicide is a new, scientific non-irritant germicide and prophylactic for the scalp—and positively cures dandruff, stops falling hair and prevents baldness. No one wants to lose their hair, and it is a mighty serious matter to contemplate. Well, why trifle with unknown or so-called Hair Growers, when you are absolutely guaranteed that Herpicide will not only save what hair you have, but will restore it to its natural luxuriance? It is the dandruff germ, which infests the scalp, that causes the hair to fall out. Herpicide will eradicate this microbic disease of the scalp and protect it against re-infection, and your hair will then grow as nature intended. NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE has reached the pinnacle of fame as a hair preparation and enjoys a distinction strictly its own. As a Hair Dressing—Herpicide is truly exquisite on account of its dainty and refreshing odor, which is characteristic—it beautifies the hair and leaves it soft, glossy, light and fluffy—it contains no oil, grease or sedimentary substance, neither does it stain nor dye the hair.

Stops Itching of the Scalp Almost Instantly.

Destroy the cause—you remove the effect.

Mrs. Anna Connor,
2807 Archer Ave., Chicago, Ill.

DANDRUFF IS AN ACTUAL DISEASE

and a very serious one, for it leads sooner or later to chronic baldness, which is incurable—the disease must be treated in a thoughtful, persistent and scientific manner. The dandruff germ must be destroyed and kept out of the scalp with NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE, because it is the only remedy that will actually kill the dandruff germ.

LEST YOU FORGET!

That Thanksgiving is coming, we gently remind you that gala attire is the order of the day. Everybody wants to look his best and turn out spick and span in honor of this most American of all holidays. No need of new clothes either when those you already possess can be made by an expert cleaner to look "better than new." Not an empty phrase that, but a fact, for the garment that's turned out by an up-to-date cleaner looks as if it really belonged to the wearer and loses the too-too apparent "newness" of the "just out of the shop" suit or gown.

Suits, Overcoats, Gowns, Jackets—in fact, every article of personal attire, we cleanse "in your own time," and in a manner unequalled for beauty and finish.

All Evangelistic Churches But One to Unite As Usual.

Arrangements have been completed for the annual union Thanksgiving service held under the auspices of the evangelistic churches. It will take place Thanksgiving morning at 10:30 o'clock in the First Baptist church. The sermon will be delivered by Rev. Dr. C. W. Parsons, pastor of Grace M. E. church, North Plainfield.

All of the churches will unite in this service, except the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and that organization, as usual, is to hold a service of its own.

—During the early part of next year the New Jersey Central will locate a switch tower in this city. It will be placed in the east end of town.

LITERARY NOTES.

"Bondage," by Edna Kenton, is the title of the complete novel which opens the December Smart Set. It is a powerful story of a newspaper woman who marries a young and prosperous lawyer, not for love, but for the sake of the home he can provide for her. The heroine's awakening to a realization of her selfishness, her craving for a taste of her old life in the old surroundings, and her struggle against the influence of a man who had formerly loved her, form the chief elements of an intensely dramatic narrative. Miss Kenton's reputation as a short story writer has been steadily growing in the past two years, but in this sustained effort she proves conclusively that she has also the novelist's gift. The Smart Set has published no stronger piece of fiction in many months. Poems are contributed by Arthur Stringer, Clinton Scollard, Elsa Barber, C. F. Rooper, Virginia Woodward Cloud, Emma Bell Miles and Grace MacGowan Cooke, and there is the usual abundant supply of humor. A number of The Smart Set containing more variety and interest has never been issued.

"The cheap-labor scares of the past have been merely political arguments," says Harold Boice in an article entitled, "Japan, Our New Rival in the East," in the Christmas number of Appleton's Booklovers Magazine. "Many economists are convinced that American labor, when its product is measured, is the cheapest among Western nations. The workingmen of the United States turn out in our big factories as great a volume of goods as do all the employes of Germany, France, and the United Kingdom combined. In Japan and China, however, there is a labor with which neither America or Europe could or would compete. Official figures from Tokio show that shipbuilders in the 230 private shipyards of that empire receive fifty-nine sen a day; the highest rate of wages paid in all Japan to artisans. In textile industries, the maximum rate is twenty-nine sen." And later: "If the cheap labor of Japan were incompetent, there would be little if any significance in the above figures. But the labor of the Sunrise Kingdom is incomparably skillful. The farmers of that empire, for example, have developed a husbandry that is the admiration of practical men and scientific horticulturists the world over. The experts of the United States Department of Agriculture go to Japan to study Oriental triumphs of cultivation."

The Popular Science Monthly for December opens with an illustrated article by Professor C. H. Hitchcock in which he discusses the fresh water springs of the ocean. It appears that such springs may exist on nearly the whole eastern coast of the United States, and might concievably be used for the supply of steamships. Dr. Volney M. Spalding, of the Desert Botanical Laboratory at Tuscon, Ariz., explains how much water could be saved in irrigation if it could be directly applied to the roots of plants. Professor R. D. George, of the University of Colorado, gives an account of mining and the use of metals by the ancient Egyptians. Dr. Charles R. Eastman, of Harvard University, explains the interesting views on evolution held by Anaximander in the early Greek period. Professor Frank Thilly, of Princeton University, gives an account of the philosophy of Fredrich Nietzsche, whose use of Darwinian theories gives a certain scientific significance to his philosophy. Dr. Cephas Guillet, of Toronto, in a fully illustrated article, describes how children may be educated by out-of-door methods. Dr. George M. Gould, of Philadelphia, explains the nature and consequences of eyestrain, attributing to it many of the ills from which we suffer. Professor John J. Stevenson, of New York University, writes of the status of American college professors, urging that they and not the trustees should be made primarily responsible for the administration of the university. There are editorial articles on "President James and the University of Illinois," "A Conference of University and College Trustees," "The International Congress of Tuberculosis and Professor von Behring's Announcement," "The Distribution of the Stars" and "The Proportion of Children in the United States."

"Soldiers of the Common Good" is Charles Edward Russell's term for the brave and thoughtful men who, in every modern civilized country, are striving to promote the greater welfare of the millions; dramatic and profoundly moving are the tales of these sociological pioneers, which he tells in the opening chapters of his new serial in the December Everybody's. How many Americans know the history of the Toad Lane weavers, who, by saving twopence a week, founded the great system of co-operation in England? Or how many of us realize, for that matter, the tremendous hold that co-operation has on the industrial life of Great Britain today? The citizen who has hope for the future will find this good reading. It is a splendid offset, as well, for the appalling disclosures made this month by Mr. Lawson in "Frenzied Finance." With his usual courageous candor, Mr. Lawson now makes public the ghastly plot whereby "Standard Oil" tried to make millions from the fatal illness of President McKinley. He also relates a memontous instance of treachery on the part of H. H. Rogers; and gives a remarkably convincing pen-picture of that sturdy buccaneer of finance, J. Pierpont Morgan. A narrative of peculiar interest is that of Ibn Jubayr Ali, who tells of the famous annual Moslem pilgrimage to Mecca, the holy city of the Mohammedans. The remarkable photographs accompanying this article, made by express command of the Sultan of Turkey, are unique in the history of magazine illustration. Two articles of profound interest to women are "The Autobiography of an Old Maid," and anonymous confession of singular forcefulness and truth; and the conclusion of Juliet Wilbor Tompkins' remarkable history of the career of "Ella Rawls Reader, Financier."

Secretary Shaw recently said our government must be one by party or mob. George Washington declared repeatedly that party fealty was the gravest danger that threatened the perpetuity of the American Republic. The elections in several States on November 7 last seem to indicate that the American people are growing rapidly to uphold the Washington doctrine rather than the more narrow Shaw declaration. Samuel E. Moffett, writing on "The Recovery of Free Government" in Collier's for November 25, says: Never in American history have local "off-year" elections produced such heart-searchings among politicians and given such promise of far-reaching results as in 1905. The meaning of the returns was mournfully recognized by Governor Herrick, of Ohio, who said: "The greatest danger now confronting the American people is the readiness, in response to some sudden whim or pretext, to desert party principles and follow some individual who claims, some times with sincerity, often with hypocrisy, to represent a cause that is higher than party fealty."

December Suggestion.

In the December issue of the New Psychology magazine for thinkers, Suggestion (Chicago), there is a valuable chapter on the Psychology of Habit and Character, taken from a work by Prof. James, of Harvard. This magazine deals with the practical problems relating to health, happiness and success, and the editor endeavors to show the importance of the mental or psychic forces in the affairs of life. Other subjects discussed are drugless methods of healing, nature cure, psychic research, every day psychology, the formation of correct habits, practical hygiene, and in general the practical every day applications of the principles of the New Psychology for health and happiness.

—Vance C. McCormick, ex-Mayor of Harrisburg, Pa., in writing of Miss Bertha B. Herring, who will appear in the Y. M. C. A. star course on Thanksgiving night, says: "She has frequently recited in this city and has always delighted her audiences, and from personal observation I can heartily recommend her. Particulars will be found in the advertising columns.

CROSS AND NERVOUS.

Plainfield Sufferers from Kidney Troubles Often Become Very Irritable.

Cross, irritable people—the sort who fuss and mope and worry over trifles—are not always to blame for the annoyance they give to others. Frequently these traits are but the effects of kidney poisons on brain and nerves. Uric acid that escapes the kidneys irritates nerve centers and vital organs—causes backache, rheumatic and neuralgic pains—keeps you languid, all tired out—leads to Bright's disease and diabetes. Stop the trouble in the beginning with Doan's Kidney Pills. 'Twill cure the kidneys and remove the cause of all these ills. Recommended by friends and neighbors in Plainfield.

Mrs. K. C. Philpott, of 126 Plainfield avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Two years ago I suffered from rheumatism and also a severe backache or pain in the loins. I suppose it was all caused by an excess of uric acid in the blood, but at any rate, the medicines I was taking did not stop the pains. I therefore resorted to the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, and I must say, in gratitude, that they gave me complete relief from my rheumatism and backache. I had no occasion to use any medicine for my kidneys since that time, until July, 1905, when I had not been feeling just right, and had been suffering sharp twinges of pain in my back. My daughter got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's pharmacy, and on using them they relieved me as before. I have often recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to people suffering from backache and rheumatism, and I shall continue to do so."

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

DIAMOND DUST.

Arrangements are being made for a meeting to be held soon, at which the baseball representatives from Yale, University of Pennsylvania, Princeton, Harvard and Cornell will meet to discuss plans for the formation of a league to determine each season the supremacy in baseball among the leading colleges.

The proposition is for each college team to play two games, one at home and one abroad, making ten in all. The colleges mentioned are close enough to each other geographically to permit such a series being run off successfully, and it would not take the men too far away or compel them to cut their studies.

Aside from the recognized advantage of supremacy, such a league would put the game in the colleges on an organized basis, such as track and rowing athletics. This is argued as one of the strongest points in its favor, and no doubt would receive the endorsement of the heads of the athletic departments in each college.

If the colleges named make a success of the league, no doubt others will be formed in a similar way. There are many colleges in the West and South that could organize such a league, and thus determine among themselves that supremacy which every college longs for.

FOOTBALL.

The Orange Field Club football eleven will play the Atlas A. C., of Brooklyn, at the latter place this afternoon.

By engaging in the football game with Princeton a week ago, Ray Biglow, formerly of this city, and Howard Roome, of North Plainfield, both of whom played with Yale, won their "Y." The newspaper accounts of the great struggle on the gridiron give both Biglow and Roome high praise for their work. Roome was a "sub," but when the opportunity offered he made good. Biglow made one of the touchdowns in the game. Plainfield is well represented this year at Yale, for in addition to the football honors, Robert Abbott, of this city, enjoys the distinction of having won the intercollegiate golf championship.

The P. H. S., N. P. H. S. and Leal's School football elevens have completed their season schedules, and while there are some regrets, each team is quite well satisfied with its work, especially the P. H. S., which did not lose a single game and only had its goal line crossed once, and that by Rutgers 'Prep." team. Undoubtedly P. H. S. has had the strongest team in its history and the team is proud of its record.

Plainfield, N. J., November 25, 1905.

Complaints against bad ventilation in railroad cars may not be confined to the Jersey Central, but it is quite certain that the patrons of that road have good cause to protest. As a correspondent, whose communication is published elsewhere in this issue, rightly says, the company has furnished all necessary facilities for heat and ventilation, but the trouble is in the apparent neglect on the part of trainmen. Particularly is this the case with the express trains, where overheated and uncomfortably close cars seem to be the rule. We feel quite sure that by bringing the matter to the attention of the proper officials, the trainmen will be instructed to be a little more diligent.

The imposition of a fine of fifty dollars is not calculated to put a damper on the "speak-easy" business by any means. That and that only is the amount of the punishment meted out to John Goff by Judge Vail at Elizabeth yesterday. Of course everyone is surprised over the mild sentence and naturally so for the case is of much importance in the administration of public affairs here. John Goff's establishment was raided by members of the Councilmanic police committee. When arraigned the proprietor changed his plea of not guilty to one of non vult. There at least was a chance for the court to aid the police department here by making the punishment severe enough to have an effect on others who have been suspected from time to time of conducting disorderly places of this type. But the opportunity was not taken. Goff escaped by paying a trifling fine of fifty dollars.

EVANGELISTS' PARADE.

Streets Crowded as Singing Marchers Proceed.

Three thousand evangelists, led by Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman and accompanied by a brass band, paraded last night through Market and Main streets, Paterson, from the Market Street M. E. church to the Bijou theatre, where a midnight service was held.

It was the climax of the first week of the evaneglistic invasion of Paterson. Many more women than men took part in the parade. A light rain did not deter the women. The paraders as they marched through the streets sang "Oh, That Will Be Glory." Men and women who lined the sidewalks joined in the parade. They were supplied with copies and music of the hymn, which had been distributed earlier in the evening by the evangelists.

The Bijou was unable to contain one-half the throng that fought for admission, and a big squad of police was kept busy. A burlesque show had just been concluded when the evangelists arrived and took possession of the stage. The burlesque girls were invited to take seats in the boxes. They did so and joined in the singing of hymns.

Dr. Chapman led the service. He urged his hearers to resist the temptation of sin. Dr. Chapman said that the success of the evangelistic movement thus far had greatly exceeded his most sanguine expectations. The whole city, he said, semed to have joined in the movement.

Match Company Plant Burns.

Paterson, Nov. 25.—The Mutual Match Company's plant at Clifton was burned to the ground last night. The fire raged for about two hours and the firemen were unable to do anything with the flames. The factory was constructed of brick and built in sort of "L" shape, running about 100 feet in either direction. It was put up about three years ago after a fire had partly wrecked the original plant. About eighty persons employed there, mostly boys and Polacks from Passaic, are thrown out of employment.

THE JEWS LANDING.

The 250th Anniversary Being Observed in Synagogue Today.

To commemorate the 250th anniversary of the settlement of the Jews in this country special services will be held in the local synagogue today, at which prominent members will speak.

A small band of Jewish people landed at New Amsterdam in 1665, only twenty-five years after the Pilgrim Fathers. The Jews were prior to the Germans, the Irish or the Italians in their settlement in this country. Governor Stuyvesant at first was inclined to prohibit their landing until the Dutch West India Company gave orders to grant them privilege of dwelling in the city.

It is related of the Jews in contemporary writings that although few in number they performed good services in the Revolution, both as soldiers and as financial backers of the American troops. It is also said that a fifth of the cost of the Bunker Hill monument was defrayed by them. In the Civil War it is estimated that about 8,000 out of a population of 150,000 bore arms on both sides. In the Spanish-American War the first man to enlist was a Jew, as was the first man to fall in battle, their co-religionists claim.

Asks for Donations.

The Plainfield Relief Association asks for generous donations from the people of Plainfield for the Thanksgiving dinners to be sent out from the rooms. Checks made out to the treasurer, Miss Marion P. Bowen, 740 Watchung avenue, are always acceptable. Meats, poultry, chickens, preferably, and general groceries are solicited, and should be sent to the rooms, 544 West Front street, not later than Wednesday noon, November 29. It is hoped that the contributions will be liberal this year as the need is larger than usual.

Fire Kitty Came Back.

"Ikey," the blooded Maltese kitten that disappeared Wednesday night from fire headquarters, was recovered yesterday. It was picked up on East Front street by a young man, who was seen carrying it along Watchung avenue by one of the firemen. Thursday afternoon the kitten wandered into the City National Bank and was adopted into financial circles, but it slipped away from there a few hours later.

Infant's Shoulder Dislocated.

The six-months-old son of William Bechtel, of East Third street, fell from a high chair at the Bechtel house yesterday morning and dislocated its right shoulder. Mr. Bechtel, who was home at the time, pulled the shoulder back into place, and the child appeared none the worse from its experience. Dr. Browning examined it later and said he could find no indications of serious injury.

MARINE HEIR TO $10,000,000.

Private North Modestly Asks for Discharge.

Private David North, of the United States Marine Corps attached to the barracks in Flushing avenue, Brooklyn, was out on forty-eight hours' leave, which did not expire until late yesterday. Meantime his comrades are consumed with curiosity as to whether North will continue in the service or go back to Australia with a multi-millionaire, said to be his father, who found him Wednesday and took him out for a holiday.

A. C. Beale, a well-dressed man of middle age, with iron-gray hair and beard, whom the marines at the barracks describe as a manufacturer worth $10,000,000 and a former President of the Federal Council of Sydney, New South Wales, after telling Rear-Admiral Coghlan, commandant of the Navy Yard, that his son disappeared two years ago in Australia and was believed to be in the Marine Corps under the name of David North, was referred to Capt. Albertus Catlin, acting commandant of the barracks.

COLEMAN DIVORCE SUIT.

Husband Offers to Urovide Wife with a Fitting Home.

There was a sudden interruption yesterday in the trial of the suit for divorce brought by Mary Coleman against her husband, Harry Coleman, who is the proprietor of the Coleman House, at Orange and Broad streets, Newark. The charge was desertion, and when Mrs. Coleman was on the stand Thursday she testified she was willing to live with her husband, despite her allegations of abuse and neglect.

When the trial was resumed yesterday Samuel Kalisch, counsel for Coleman, told the court his client was ready to provide for his wife a suitable home for her station in life. Vice Chancellor Stevens announced that so long as Coleman had made the offer in good faith his wife could not expect the court to allow her alimony.

He adjourned the hearing for one week in order to give Coleman a chance to make good his offer.

Fire Destroys a Landmark.

Hickory Inn, in Maplewood, at which President Roosevelt during his boyhood was a frequent visitor, was burned to the ground yesterday afternoon. The building was a two story and a half frame structure, and the flames swept rapidly through it. Mrs. Le Roy occupied the building, which recently was used as a summer boarding house.

AMUSEMENTS.

The attraction coming to the New Plainfield theatre Monday night is none other than Elmer Walter's familiar comedy drama, "A Thoroughbred Tramp," a character play depicting incidents in the West. Elmer Walter's plays wear well and his audiences usually get a run for their money. The manuscript of "A Thoroughbred Tramp" has undergone an overhauling recently which practically makes a new play of the last two acts, the third act now showing the home of the feeble minded at the Colorado Asylum.

The attraction at the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight is "When the World Sleeps," an elaborately mounted melodrama by Langdon McCormick and Lawrence Marston. The piece is full of exciting moments and real comedy. The Mittenthal Brothers have given the play a splendid production and an excellent cast.

The coming of "Big Hearted Jim," George Klimt's new play, in which he takes the title part, ought to arouse special interest for Mr. Klimt is always associated with a dramatic offering that deserves to prosper. With his partner, Frank Gazzolo, he has given the new play, a comedy melodrama of Western life, an excellent company and equipment of scenery. As the title indicates, "Big Hearted Jim" has a big, hearty man for its central figure—a Montana sheriff of twenty years ago, who had the entire good will and deserved it, of everybody in his county, including the Indians. The character of this true Westerner is developed skillfully in many stirring scenes, and some good comedy situations, and Mr. Klimt meets all demands with his well known ability. The sheriff is in love with a pretty school teacher, but a man who tricked her with false marriage appears, searching for an Indian heiress, and trouble follows. Several comedy characters played by comedians of reputation furnish an abundance of humor. In fact, humor, trickery, pathos and romance alternate often and rapidly throughout the play and two ambuscade scenes and a blooded horse trained to act add interest. New Plainfield theatre Thanksgiving afternoon and night.

The new musical comedy, "Bankers and Brokers," in which Yorke and Adams are starring this season, is booked for a return engagement at the New Plainfield theatre Tuesday, December 8. This comedy has been very successful wherever it has been presented this season and will no doubt again meet with the approval of the patrons at the local playhouse.

Added interest is given to the performance of "The Prince Chap" company at Joe Weber's theatre, New York, this week by the appearance of Charlotte Walker as the eighteen-year-old Claudia in the last act. Miss Walker made her first appearance Monday night. Cyril Scott has settled down as a sturdy actor in a legitimate part and declares that musical comedy will never again tempt him. It is so easy for an actor to become identified with one kind of performance, that the public is inclined to forget him for his past good work. Mr. Scott up to the time he plunged into "Florodora" was a leading man of recognized talent, and the few years he spent in musical comedy almost obliterated his record for legitimate acting. He has gained in reputation since his first appearance in "The Prince Chap" and has resumed his career as a sterling actor of good method who is not without magnetism in his acting.

Henry E. Dixey having strengthened the bill at the Madison Square theatre, New York, by preceding "The Man On the Box" with the comedietta "David Garrick," is to be seen in a delightful entertainment. Walter M. Lawrence has been most happy in his selection of plays for the Madison Square theatre this season and has the remarkable record of not having had a failure. "Mrs. Temple's Telegram," produced last season, is this week at the Park theatre ,Brooklyn, and the first play of the new year, namely, "The Prince Chap," is continued at Joe Weber's theatre, while "The Man On the Box," a delightful comedy, is making a record run that any manager should be proud of. Mr. Dixey's versatility is best shown in the two plays comprising the present double bill. He is well supported in "David Garrick" by Marie Nodrstrom and in "The Man On the Box" by Carlotta Nillson.

From the rise of the curtain on the first act until its final fall in the fourth, there is no flagging of interest in "The Child Wife," a new play of modern married life by Charles A. Taylor, which was one of the melodramatic successes of New York last season, and which comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night. The play has been styled one of "Heart and Home" and it is just such a one. It deals first with the well known and popular characters of New England life, after which the scene is transferred to New York, with the natural intensifying of interest that is afforded by the atmosphere of that wonderful city. The story of "The Child Wife" is along natural lines. There is the romance of young hearts and the realities of married life; the rich father, angered at his daughter's marriage to a poor man, but forgiving in the end; the designing villain who makes trouble between husband and wife, but who is foiled at last; the fierce tramp, who proves to have a heart and does the right thing at the right time; and finally the denouement, in which all sorrows are dissipated and all entanglements straightened out.

For the average spectators the scene in the play of "Sherlock Holmes," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, showing the underground den used for desperate deeds by a man who is the leader of a band of organized criminals, is more than startling. It is there that Sherlock Holmes, suddenly attacked on all sides by his enemies, outwits them and escapes by unexpectedly throwing the rendezvous into darkness and drawing the fire of his foes by placing a glowing cigar at one point, while he himself quickly flees to another. The real dramatic interest of the play, however, rests rather in the intellectual duel between the chief of the criminal band and Sherlock Holmes. It is a desperate game they play, these two, the lawless antagonist showing a sagacity almost as fine and far reaching as his tenacious opponent, the detective. Taken altogether it is the most singular story ever woven in the modern drama.

Wedding Guests Arrive After Girl Is Fatally Burned.

Brunswick, Ill., Nov. 25.—Miss Ada Wells had completed arrangements for her wedding Thursday night and in the afternoon busied herself cleaning an old dress with gasoline. She spilled some of the gasoline on her dress, and when she passed in front of an open grate her skirt caught fire and in an instant she was a pillar of flame. She rushed from the house and threw herself into a water trough, extinguishing the flames. When assistance reached her she was lying partly in the water, unconscious, with her arm burned to a crisp.

A few hours later the guests, who had not heard of the accident, began to arrive for the wedding.

W. R. Kent, to whom she was to be married, remains at her side begging piteously that she live for him, but the girl is past understanding and the physicians say she will die before morning.

INTERESTING NOTES.

The natives of certain parts of India are in the habit every year, in the summer, of digging the dry river banks for fish, which they dig out by the hundreds, just as they would potatoes. The mud lumps are broken open and the fish, perhaps eight inches long, will always be found alive, and often frisky, as if just removed from its supposedly native element—water.

A piece of skin taken from the body of a Danish pirate—who was executed about 900 years ago—realized three guineas in a London salesroom. The skin was found nailed to the door of Hadstock church, Essex. The auctioneer mentioned that not so long ago a similar piece of human skin was nailed to one of the doors of Westminster Abbey.

With the marriage of the Earl of Suffolk to Miss Daisy Leiter, the Americans married to peers number twenty-five. This number includes all the Americans, with one exception, married to peers since 1860, a period of forty-four years. Ten of these ladies have no children at all, and six have no son, so that the peerage is not likely to be Americanized yet awhile.

A Remarkable Invention that Doesn't Pay a Cent.

W. S. Harwood has a very interesting article in the American Illustrated Magazine for December on the agricultural experimental stations throughout the country. The investigators give their lives to studying new methods for farmers and to serving agricultural interests generally. Dr. S. W. Babcock, of the Wisconsin station, has invented a machine for testing milk and if he had patented it his profit would have run into millions. The invention is now used throughout the civilized world. Briefly put, this test, whose object is to determine precisely how much butter fat there is in milk, is performed as follows:

A sample of the milk offered for sale, for instance, at the creamery, is put in a small glass bottle having a long neck, on which is a graduated scale. Enough sulphuric acid is added to dissolve all the solids in the milk save the fat. The bottle is put in a specially prepared machine, the invention of Dr. Babcock, and whirled about rapidly. Hot water is added, and the fat, which collects in the graduated neck of the bottle, may then be measured. The milk sells upon its merits, on the precise amount of butter fat it contains, no more, no less. Very much butter and cheese is now made in cooperative establishments, where, before the introduction of this test, the milk was paid for by weight. In this way injustice was suffered by the farmers having fine herds giving rich milk. Their milk came into competition with milk in quantity, or even adulterated at the pump, and they had to accept the same price. In case the farmer fancies that he is not being fairly treated, he can now, for a few dollars, buy a small but accurate testing machine, by which he can, each day, determine how much butter fat his milk contains before he starts out with it to the creamery.

An EXPLANATORY NOTICE

To the Citizens of Newark and our Customers throughout the State:

The 18th of last May I sold my business property known as 73 Market St. including Nos. 69 and 71, to the Chelsea Realty Co., and gave them a deed for it on July 12th, taking a lease on the property until March 1st, 1906.

To be perfectly frank with the people—having been in business since 1860, and in advanced years I began to tire, so made up my mind to close out my entire stock and devote the balance of my life to my Storage and Carpet Cleaning Business, and settle up my retail business.

But I found it IMPOSSIBLE to get rid of my stock in so short a time and now I have rented the store for another year, and will continue to sell goods at reduced prices—NO LOWER PRICES CAN BE FOUND IN ALL THE CITY.

Hoping this will fully explain my position and retain the good name and reputation we have built up and tried to maintain since we first started business in 1860, I remain,

Yours very truly,
AMOS H. VAN HORN, President.

TO KILL THE DANDRUFF GERM.

Is the Only Possible Way of Having An Effective Cure.

If you see a woman or a man with luxuriant glossy hair, you may be sure neither has dandruff to amount to anything. In nearly every case where women and men have thin brittle hair, they owe it to dandruff. There are hundreds of preparations that "claim" to cure dandruff, but not one but Newbro's Herpicide tells you that dandruff is the result of a germ burrowing into the scalp, and that permanent cure of dandruff and its consequent falling and baldness, can only be had by killing the germ; and there is no other preparation that will destroy that germ but Newbro's Herpicide. "Destroy the cause, and you remove the effect." Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

between the twilight of the second of July that witnessed Ewell's bloody assault and the dawning of that black Friday of the Lost Cause—the third day—something had happened to give new heart to Jackson's old men. The "Stonewall" brigade was there still in the woods in the low ground between the rocky point, where crouched the survivors of Wadsworth's division, and the forest-covered heights off to the eastward, where cavalry guidons—union cavalry—had been flashing in the last rays of the setting sun. Somewhere in the dim fields there was stir and excitement even in the wearied bivouacs of Ewell; and, under the starlight, eager to satisfy his general's restless desire to know what it all meant, Fred Benton had crept out to the front.

The word has gone the rounds, to the joy of every soldier heart, that the new commander meant to stand and fight, and if Lee could muster no more men than these already thrown in, he might hammer the lines in vain. Now, if only Stuart and his pet brigades would but stay lost, so that no fear need be felt for the far right flank, all would indeed be well!

But would Stuart stay lost? Could he have got so far away as not to be found and by this time returned to the army; and when he came, would it not be from the north, and thus bring him in on the very flank they were now defending? Tired as he was Benton could not sleep for thinking of the disclosures made through Haskell.

Alone and afoot, after a word with his gray-haired chief, he slipped out and away to the Baltimore pike. This he followed southeasterly nearly half a mile, greeted occasionally by low-toned challenge of sentry; but other officers were hurrying swiftly to and fro, and there was little detention. As early as three o'clock he found himself following a patrol down a rocky pathway toward the creek, and, learning from outlying sentry there that no force seemed to be in his immediate front—only a few pickets—Benton explained that he wished to crawl out far enough to be beyond the sound of trampling hoof and rumbling wheel at the pike, that he might listen the better. And, creeping from bush to bush to avoid the moonlit spaces, less than half an hour before dawn he had succeeded in gaining fully 400 yards out toward the northeast, and there low voices warned him to lie still and listen. He was either on or within the confederate picket line, and had much to learn and little time.

And then, as he crouched close to the trunk of a spreading tree, faint and sweet, soft yet stirring, so far out to the north that the performer doubtless thought it beyond the range of inimical ears, a cavalry trumpet began to sound the martial reveille, stirring some nearby watcher to remonstrance. "Damn that infernal dash-dashed idiot," stormed a low, half-choked voice. "He'll tell the whole dash-dashed Yankee army our fellows have come! Go back there, sergeant, and tell our trumpter if he dares to toot a horn I'll murder him."

Then somebody rustled off through the bushes, and somebody else spoke. "Some of Hampton's crowd, I reckon. How long'd the general want us to stay out hyuh?"

"Till Ewell attacks at dawn. Then we'll mount and look out for Gregg. His people are out here to the east of us. Stuart'll get after them, you bet, as soon as it's light."

"We haven't got a horse that can more'n stagger. All worn out, I tell you," protested the second voice.

"No more'n theirs are. Jennings met us back there on the Hanover pike, and I heard him tell Fitz Lee Gregg's horses were all played out——"

"Jennings be damned!" broke in a third voice, impetuously, and Benton started at the sound. It was Chilton's beyond shadow of a doubt. Chilton again with his old regiment, and these with him were doubtless officers of Fitz Lee's brigade, scouting, probably, well in front of the cavalry lines, yet proving that Stuart was there at last, and could be counted on to make things lively in the morning. It was high time to slip back and give warning, but getting back was slow and tedious—even perilous work. The dawn was breaking when, in bedraggled garb, Benton found his gray-headed general in the circle about the commander. Before Benton had time to whisper half his explanation, Wadsworth's tired eyes flamed with eager light.

"Here's the very news to prove it, general!" he cried. "Capt. Benton, of my staff, is just in from that front. Stuart is there and Ewell means to attack——"

"How do you know Stuart is there?" demanded Meade, whirling sharply on the young officer. The most courteous and polished of gentlemen at other times, Meade was irascible in the extreme in battle.

"I heard voices, sir—one that I well knew, an officer of the First Virginia—heard them say that Fitz Lee was there, and that Stuart would settle Gregg, and that Ewell would attack at dawn——" But even as he spoke came confirmation of his words. In the dim light of the dawn, the guns of Greene and Geary had suddenly opened on the low gray lines leaping from the opposite woods, and Wadsworth sprang for his horse. But the commander signalled Benton to remain. "You have done a gallant deed, captain, and have brought me most valuable information," were his words a moment later; "It shall not be forgotten."

Yet Benton was surprised late that afternoon when, after the din of the most terrific cannonade ever heard on this continent, and, after daring and determined attack, Pickett, Ewell and Stuart all had been repulsed—Pickett with dreadful loss—there came a message summoning the aide-de-camp to Meade's headquarters. An orderly led him toward a rude wagon-shed beneath which knelt four officers, surrounding a prostrate figure. "He asked for you," said a surgeon, briefly, and one glance at the face of the stricken soldier was enough. Benton threw himself on his knees, and clasped the cold, nerveless hand, feebly lifted to greet him. The failing eyes lighted up one moment in love then closed in agony, as a spasm of torment seized the fragile form. "Paul—Paul—my God!" was all that Benton could murmur, and a surgeon hurriedly brushed before him and held a little silver cup to the twitching lips of his patient. "Mortal, yes," was his whisper, as the poor lad, exhausted, lay for a moment in a deathlike swoon. Then the stimulant seemed to revive him a bit. The dark eyes slowly opened and fixed on Benton's quivering face. "Bless you, old boy!"—and every whisper seemed to come with a gasp—"I heard—I knew—you'd never give up her letters. Where's—McKinnon?" And here the poor lad seemed drifting away again. Benton thrust his left arm under the fallen head and strove to raise it, while once more the surgeon placed the cup to the parted lips; and, noting the name, a staff officer turned quickly and said a word to a waiting soldier. It was another minute before the swooning lad reopened his eyes. Two other forms had joined the silent group. Benton saw nothing but the loved face. Then some one, well meaning, bent and questioned: "You asked for Maj. McKinnon. Did you wish to speak——"

"McKinnon!" whispered Paul. "McKinnon?" and now a shudder seemed to seize the wasting form. "Tell him for me I know he stole my letters. Tell him I told Rosalie—every word he said of you was a cowardly—lie."

And not until the dead hand in his was cold and stiffening did Benton know what caused the strange movement and sensation in that group as Ladue's last words were spoken. Almost inaudible, they had reached the straining ears of four who bent to listen, and of one who, standing, would gladly have been deaf to them.

CHAPTER XXVI.

WHAT A LETTER REVEALED.

Once again had Lee's valiant army slowly retired to the Potomac and leisurely recrossed, superb even in defeat. Just as after Antietam, the cabinet, the committee on the conduct of the war (that remarkable annex to our military system) and countless critics all over the north, stormed at the Army of the Potomac because it seemed to follow at respectful distance, content to let the erring brethren go in peace. The man who felt it most that the beaten enemy should again succeed in getting away was the one who said the least—Lincoln had no rebuke for Meade who, smarting and sensitive under the lash of Halleck and Stanton, asked in his turn to be relieved of that vexatious command, but could not be accommodated. "The plum was so ripe," was all that the patient president could say, "it seemed a pity not to seize it." But no one save those that tried it knew the cost of seizing confederate plums. Stern and defiant the disciplined ranks in gray turned and faced every essay to molest them, and another winter closed in on the armies in Virginia, with the same old stream—the Rapidan—for their dividing line.

BRIDAL COUPLE LASSOED.

Bridegroom Paraded in Rattletrap at the Head of a Big Crowd.

Mahanoy City, Pa., Nov. 25.—As Thomas Troutman and Miss Sadie Dugan emerged from the rectory of St. Canicus' Catholic church after they had been married to enter a carriage in waiting, James Dugan, a brother of the bride, and George Dugan, a cousin, tossed a lasso over the heads of the bridal couple and started to lead them to a side street. The bride succeeded in slipping from the leash, at the expense of her coiffure and picture hat.

The protesting bridegroom was led to a dilapidated uncovered wagon, to which was hitched a skeleton of a horse caparisoned in outlandish trappings and sleigh bells. With his arms pinioned, his ankles shackled and placards all around him, Troutman was supported in a standing position by a captor on each side of him, while driven in the ancient vehicle along a circuitous route, which took in the principal streets, to the home of the bride. Several hundred persons trailed after the conveyance. The bridegroom almost collapsed from the embarrassment and excitement.

SEEKS HER HUSBAND.

Mrs. Maxwell Says Father-in-Law Knows His Whereabouts.

Mrs. Frances Maxwell, of New York, a handsome young woman, has appealed to the authorities to find her husband, Charles M. Maxwell, Jr., an electrical engineer and contractor, who put in the electric plant in the White House at Washington.

The wife also declares that her father-in-law, Charles M. Maxwell, Sr., who owns the large Standard Storage Warehouse, at Fifth-third street and Broadway, New York, knows of the present whereabouts of his son.

Mrs. Charles M. Maxwell, Jr., was Miss Frances McVicker, and was known as one of the prettiest girls in her native town of Athens, O. Six years ago she came to New York and obtained the position of confidential clerk to the manager of the Waldorf. She had held this position for a little less than two years when she was introduced by a friend to Charles M. Maxwell, Jr. It was a case of love at first sight. Mr. Maxwell proposed marirage and was accepted.

CROOK SHIELDED ACTRESS.

Sent to Prison, He Defended Girl in "Ben Hur."

Albany, Nov. 24.—Sobbing bitterly, Esther Wright, an actress and member of a prominent Boston family, begged County Judge Gregory yesterday not to send her to prison. The girl's mother, who came from Boston, also pleaded with the Judge, and he suspended sentence upon the girl's promise to return to Boston.

Miss Wright was indicted jointly with John H. Sloan, a New York crook, for substituting a $30 diamond ring for one valued at $150, while examining a tray of rings in an Albany jewelry store. Sloan was sentenced to Dannemora Prison for five years. He declared the girl was innocent of any intentional wrongdoing. She had been a member of the Ben Hur company, and met Sloan in New York last May. There she became addicted to the drug habit, and while under its influence fell a victim to Sloan's schemes.

DIAMONDS MAY BE FORFEITED,

Demand for Gems Alleged to Have Been Smuggled.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—United States District-Attorney Dodman asked the Federal Court yesterday to forfeit 278 diamonds, valued at $15,000, which are alleged to have been smuggled through the port of Boston. Henry Hoffman made this confession when charged with the larceny of the gems.

Mrs. Lena Becker, who was arrested at the same time, and is believed to have been an accomplice of Hoffman, is now under indictment for a diamond robbery in New York. The Secret Service men have determined to hold the gems until the New York victims can take a look at them.

Mrs. Becker will be taken to New York in a few days. She was arrested here for obtaining diamonds from dealers to sell on commission and failing to make returns.

HOPE FIVE EASY.

Colonials Play All Around Them, Winning by 55 to 25.

The Colonial basketball team had an easy time with the Hope Y. M. A. five at the Hope gymnasium yesterday afternoon. The score was 55 to 25. The game wasn't even as close as the score indicates. The Colonials played rings around their opponents and the cinch cloyed on them so much that the goals were very carelessly shot in the second half. They didn't care whether points were scored or not.

The score and summary:

Fifteen Years Wedded.

Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Skilman, of Whitehouse Station, were happily surprised last night in honor of the fifteenth anniversary of their wedding. The affair was held in Bonnel's Hall, Whitehouse Station, and Sam. Frazee furnished the music for dancing. Invitations for the affair were issued for Friday night, December 1, purposely, the idea being to hold the celebration a week sooner and surprise the couple. The couple received a large number of gifts, including a large silver tray. Mr. and Mrs. Skillman are well-known here.

Freed His Son.

Henry M. Dill, the father of Herman Dill, the nineteen-year-old boy who was picked up by Patrolman McGinley early yesterday morning with three watches and a gold bracelet that he stole from his mother in his possession, came over from South Amboy last night to get his boy out of the hands of the police. He would not make a charge against Herman, and the youth was released after a purely formal hearing before Justice Mosher.

WORK WAY AROUND WORLD

Goldsmith is 59, and Wilkie is 68; Both Hopeful as Boys.

Winsted, Conn., Nov. 25.—Dr. Charles A. Goldsmith, aged fifty-nine, of New Haven, and Walter N. Wilkie, aged sixty-eight, of Rockville, are to start at trip around the world next spring, each without a cent except what they earn.

Dr. Goldsmith says he has three valuable implements with which to make the trip—a camera, a tongue and a pen. With these, he says, he can travel in any country in the world where English, French, Spanish or Portuguese are spoken.

The men are now getting hardened for the trip by taking long cross-country walks.

Pigeon Shooters Thwarted.

Jerseymen who are wont to use live pigeons for targets, together with wealthy New York and Philadelphia members of shooting clubs in this State, are by reason of their own efforts likely to fail in a proposed attemtp to have the next Legislature repeal the law which now prohibits such sport. They have already appealed to the State Court of Errors as to the constitutionality of the measure, and the court is so busy that an opinion is not likely to be delivered within a year. In the meantime the Legislature will have completed its work and adjourned.

Not in Rogues' Gallery.

Chief Kiely and Patrolman Saffron didn't find the face of the cracksman who shot at the officer the other night in the rogues' gallery of the New York police. Saffron saw a face that looked like his man, but it turnout to be that of a Western crook who is now cooped up in St. Paul. The New York officers scouted Saffron's report that only one man was at work on the job. Cracksmen always travel in pairs or trios, they insist, and will not entertain the idea of any exception in a job done in the way the Keely burglar worked.

CARS POORLY VENTILATED

Correspondent Complains That Trainmen Do Not Pay Attenton to Comfort.

ON JERSEY CENTRAL

Facilities for Heating and Ventilating Are There But Little Attention is Given—Remedy for the Evil.

A strong protest against th eapparent neglect on the part of trainment to attend to the proper ventilation of passenger cars is made in the following communication addressed to this paper by a prominent Plainfielder:

Editor, The Daily Press:

I have had it in mind for some time to write a letter to the proper officer of the Central R. R. of N. J., (whoever he may be), in regard to a subject which involves the comfort or discomfort of many patrons of that road, i. e.—the heating and ventilation of the cars.

The company furnishes us with excellent service as far as the running time of the trains is concerned, their frequency, and the cleanliness of the cars. It has also, I think, done what is could in furnishing facilities for proper heating and ventilation, but there is one thing which is greatly lacking, and that is the intelligent use of these facilities by the employes of the road.

The company has recently installed new ventilators upon most of its cars, the efficiency of which, I suppose, will be demontrated during the coming winter. The facilities for heating the cars are also, of course, adequate. The trouble is that no attention is paid by the conductor and brakeman to either the heating or ventilation. No distinction seems to be made between days that are extremely cold and others that are mild, but the same amount of heat appears to be distributed through the cars and the ventilators are always kept open to the same extent. I have frequently had occasion to ask a conductor or brakeman to open the ventilators and particularly the small window in the front door of the car, and sometimes attention has been paid to my request and sometimes not.

Let me cite the 5:10 train from New York Friday night a week ago as an example,—the day was warm and yet the heat was on in full force on the car, and only the small ventilators near the roof were open. The car soon became so insufferably hot that people were perceptibly suffering, and yet no brakeman appeared upon the scene to ascertain whether the car was properly ventilated, or to whom a request could be made in regard to the matter. Finally, one of the passengers went to the front of the car and succeeded in opening to some extent the window in the door. After a lapse of considerable time and when we were nearing Plainfield, a brakeman walked through the car, and he was, of course, immediately asked to turn off the steam. He nodded and continued through the car into the next one without any action as far as could be seen, and the passengers suffered until they reached their destination. It is remarkable that none of the women on the car were made faint or sick by the temperature.

At another time I asked the conductor of the train which leaves at 7:45 in the morning to give us a little air, as all the ventilators were closed and the day was warm. He replied rather gruffly that he had no time to attend to the matter (which was probably true) and would send a brakeman. The latter appeared after we had left Bayonne and completed the greater part of our journey, and opened some of the ventilators at the top of the car.

It is the same with this matter as it is with block signals,—the company can install a perfect system, but if there is no intelligent co-operation on the part of the employes, the system will be a failure.

When the ventilation is as poor, and the air is as bad as it often is in the cars, all of the passengers suffer from it. Those who notice it suffer consciously, and those who perhaps do not notice it, unconsciously; and the result in either case may be an unexplained headache or other trouble during the remainder of the day.

I was in doubt for some time as to whether I should write to the railroad company or to you, but concluded that the publication of this letter might move other persons to write brief notes to the company, which would have more effect than a single letter. The remedy for the evil is extremely simple, and requires only that a brakeman should walk through the train after it is started to inspect the ventilators and adjust the heat and ventilation according to the condition of the weather.

I trust, therefore, that enough readers of the paper will take the trouble to write the company, and that the result will be greater comfort to passengers during the coming winter.

Yours respectfully,
COMMUTER.

STENOGRAPHER IS MILLIONAIRE'S BRIDE

FOURTEEN MINUTES REQUIRED TO MAKE GIRL WEALTHY MRS. LEE

In just fourteen minutes spent in Greenwich, Conn., Charles Lee, a millionaire manufacturer, of Oneida, N. Y., made Mabel E. Brown, formerly employed in Syracuse, N. Y., as a stenographer, his bride. Mrs. Lee is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Brown, of Syracuse. She and Mr. Lee have long been friends.

It was said yesterday that the marriage was Mr. Lee's second, and that the couple went to Greenwich to wed because the first Mrs. Lee divorced the manufacturer last February and Mr. Lee could not marry in New York State. Arrangements for the wedding had been made at Greenwich the day before by State Treasurer James F. Walsh and his nephew, Henry B. White, of Greenwich.

Just before noon yesterday Mr. Lee and Miss Brown, taking along with them a minister to tie the knot, left New York for Greenwich, where two automobiles were at the station to meet the party. In them were Mrs. Brown, the bride's mother, and a brother of the bridegroom, who acted as witnesses.

The party sped to the home of Sheriff William E. Ritch. Mrs. Ritch had decorated her parlor handsomely, and that there might be no bad feeling, the sheriff's office sign had been turned to the wall.

As soon as the clergyman had pronounced Mr. Lee and Miss Brown man and wife, the party, in the automobiles, speeded to tne Greenwich station and were just in time to catch the fast train for New York. Mr. Lee feed everybody generously from a large roll of bills.

INTERESTING TAX CASE.

Roselle Man Says Neighbor is Assessed Too Low.

Roselle Park, Nov. 25.—An interesting proceeding will be a hearing before the commissioners of appeal, J. D. Lowden, W. L. Hale and John Shreve, on November 28 next at 2:30 o'clock at the borough hall here. The proceeding is brought by Louis V. Ebert as a taxpayer in the borough under Section 28, Chapter 208 of the laws of 1903. It is claimed by Mr. Ebert that certain lands in the borough owned by Peter Donald have been assessed for the year 1905 at too low a rate. Mr. Donald is a non-resident of the borough, whose local agent is W. P. Bonnell. Mr. Bonnell is likewise the assessor for Roselle Park.

The complaint of Mr. Ebert, as a taxpayer, was served on Mr. Donald and on Mr. Bonnell on November 21 last. It recites that lands of Mr. Donald lying in blocks 63, 68, 78, 79, 81, 82, 55 and 56 have been assessed at a valuation for each of said blocks of $1,200, $1,100, $1,200, $500, $1,400, $2,000, $600 and $800, respectively. The complaint alleges that this property, in order that it be made to contribute in equality of valuation to the common burden of taxation as other adjoining and similar property, should be assessed at $3,400, $3,100, $3,000, $1,000, $3,000, $3,200, $1,700 and $1,700, respectively.

The result of the hearing before the commissioners of appeal is awaited anxiously for the reason that if the decision supports the contention of Mr. Ebert unimproved property, other than acreage property, in the borough will hereafter be taxed equally in value with other property adjoining of like character, upon which improvements have been made. It is expected that in case the decision be adverse to Mr. Ebert's contention an appeal will be taken by him to the State Board of Equalization of Taxes in Trenton some time in April next.

Long's Wife in the Toils.

Martha Long, alias Hicks, wife of Charles Long, who is in the Mercer county jail awaiting death sentence, was arrested yesterday at the jail, where she went to see her husband. Constable Judson took her into custody on a capias. She was indicted by the last Grand Jury. It is alleged that she set fire to a house on North Feeder street. The woman is said to have been enamoured of a certain colored man who lived on Feeder street. She was supplanted in the man's affections by another woman and she sought revenge by setting fire to the house where her Lothario and her rival lived. The fire was extinguished before any great damage was done.

LENTZ'S THRONE TOTTERING.

Colbyites Trying to Organize the County Committee.

Major Carl Lentz and his followers in the Essex county Republican Committee, seriously alarmed at the evidence of defection from the "machine" of many county committeemen elected for next year at the recent primaries, tried last night to convert the regular meeting of the organization into a caucus in behalf of the re-election of Lentz.

At a meeting of the Colby faction held the previous night eighty out of the 202 men who will sit in the next committee pledged themselves to vote for Lathrop Anderson for chairman as successor of the old Republican boss.

It is asserted by Chairman William P. Martin, of the Colby committee, that in addition to the eighty who have publicly pledged themselves to Anderson fifteen others declared their intention of deserting Lentz. Many of those who gave these pledges were elected as Lentz men, and the signs, according to the Major's enemies, indicate that the defections will continue until, when the election for chairman takes place a month hence, the old leader will be in a minority. This, they say, will mean his permanent elimination from the Republican party.

At the meeting of the regulars last night reports were made to Lentz by those of his lieutenants who are still loyal that he had been indorsed by more than a majority of the incoming organization. These indorsements came from ten wards of Newark and several of the townships.

To his cabinet Lentz announeed that he had decided to stay in the race and to stand or fall upon the loyalty of his supporters. He took the ground that, although the Colby candidates were nominated at the primaries, in the same election the voetrs indorsed his leadership by electing a clear majority of the incoming committee on the issue of Lentz or anti-Lentz.

MILLIONAIRE WEDS ON A DARE.

While at Luncheon Couple Are Married.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—A society wedding under romantic circumstances, with a French restaurant as the scene of the nuptials, took place Thursday night in "De Joughes." Miss Louise Mills, daughter of John H. Mills, and Jesse Whitehead, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Whitehead, had twenty-four hours previously ennounced their engagement. Both are twenty-one.

While at luncheon with friends some one "dared" them to marry then and there. The "dare" was followed by a bet. Young Whitehead summoned a clergyman and the wedding followed.

It was practically an elopement, for the parents of the couple knew nothing about the affair. Following the ceremony in the restaurant the wedding party enjoyed a dinner, after which Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead left for New York.

Whitehead's grandfather recently died and left him a million.

Mrs. Elisha Whitehead, mother of the bridegroom, is prostrated by the marriage. She said: "We object principally to the manner of the marriage. I am informed that Miss Mills is a charming and accomplished young woman. I have not personally enjoyed her acquaintance. There has been no opposition to the match, because we were not consulted."

Goat as Wedding Mascot.

Millville, Nov. 25.—Miss Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Schwerezerler, was united in marriage to Michael Fath, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Fath, Wednesday night. The ceremony took place at 9 o'clock. The members of the party were driven to the depot, where they took the 10 o'clock train for a trip to Washington. The ride to the depot was a novel one and created great excitement. In front of the cab a goat, led by a young man, trotted, while on either side marched boys carrying flags.

L. D. Morris & Bros. Move.

L. D. Morris & Bros., engaged in the automobile business at 110 East Fourth street, expect to move the plant to the brick building on East Fourth street formerly occupied by the United Printers' Manufacturing Company. The change is made owing to a demand for more room both for the storage and repair of automobiles. It is likely that the firm will purchase the property.

JR. O. U. A. M. AT CHURCH

Benevolent, Franklin and Somerset Councils Hear Rev. A. C. Mc Crea

AT THE FIRST M. E.

Preacher Dwells on Christ As the Master Mechanic and Lauds the Aims of the Order.

The members of Benevolent, Franklin and Somerset Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., Daughters of Liberty and Daughters of America attended divine service at the First M. E. church last night. Every seat in the large edifice was occupied. The pastor, Rev. A. C. McCrea, gave a short talk preliminary to his regular sermon, in which he welcomed the organizations to the church and praised the patriotic principles they represent. The preacher declared that he could heartily subscribe to these principles, believing that upon them this great country is founded.

Rev. Mr. McCrea said that there is plenty of room in this country for the immigrant who is willing to come here and give his efforts to the upbuilding of the country and its institutions, but he declared that there is not one inch of room for those who seek to destroy and injure the institutions of the country. He spoke strongly in favor of the reading of the Bible in the public schools and the inculcation in the minds of both young and old the grand principles taught therein. He wished the organizations success in the advancement of their principles and said that they should besupported by every loyal American.

Following these preliminary remarks, Mr. McCrea delivered his regular sermon, in which he referred to Christ as the carpenter and the "master mechanic." From this he drew many helpful lessons. He said that today his sympathies are with the man or men of affairs, those who accomplish things and do something, the person who has the spirit of daring, which is so much admired, that endeavors to learn just a little more of the unseen and hidden things and then gives to the world the benefit of his efforts. Such a man, he declared, is worth something to the world and too much praise cannot be given him. The preacher mentioned the names of several persons who have given great and valuable information to the world through research and said that it should be the aim and ambition of everyone to emulate such examples.

During the service patriotic songs were sung by the congregation and the large chorus choir rendered several appropriate anthems.

WOMAN HELPLESSLY DRUNK.

Borough Police Find Her on Street with Two Half Stupefied Children.

Helplessly intoxicated and with her two small children lying beside her, Mrs. Nicholas Kelley, of Regent street, was found by the borough police on Pearl street, at midnight Saturday night. The woman was seated on the flagstones oblivious to her surroundings, while the two tots, one six years and the other four, were huddled against a fence, half stupefied from cold. Chief Weiss had all three taken to headquarters, where the children were placed on a cot near the stove and the mother was locked up.

She had recovered sufficiently to be arraigned before Recorder Doud last night, and as she has been an old offender was given $20 and seven days. She was unable to pay the fine and will go to Somerville for twenty-seven days. The father was notified, and unless he can take proper care of the children they will be placed in an institution.

Hobo Jailed.

William Connelly, who claims Newark as his home, and James Burns, of New Brunswick, were arrested by Patrolman Overbaugh Saturday for drunkenness and dirorder. Connelly was panhandling. In court this morning Burns acknowledged being drunk, but disclaimed any association with Connelly. The latter, on his own confession, is a hobo, and Judge Runyon gave him twenty days in jail. Burns, after reeling off a lot of information about New Brunswick to show that his claim of residence was true, was released under suspended sentence.

Union Thanksgiving Service.

The union Thanksgiving service of the local churches will be held in the First Baptist church Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The sermon will be preached by Rev. Dr. C. W. Parsons, of Grace M. E. church. All of the evangelical churches, except the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian, will unite in the service. The latter church will hold its own service, as usual.

SIMPLE SERVICE OVER BODY OF STEPHEN CAHOONE

REV. DRS. W. R. RICHARDS AND J. S. ZELIE THE OFFICIATING CLERGYMEN.

In the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Saturday afternoon, simple but impressive funeral services were held over the body of Stephen Cahoone. They were attended by a large gathering of friends, many coming from New York and other places. The directors of the Y. M. C. A. and Mr. Cahoone's Bible class from Hope chapel were present in a body.

The opening prayer was made by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, who also read scripture, while the address was given by Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, of the Brick Presbyterian church, New York, who had labored in the local religious field with Mr. Cahoone for many years. Dr. Richards spoke feelingly of the generous traits of the departed and his sacrifice of personal interests in helping others. He also offered the closing prayer and pronounced the benediction.

The floral tributes were numerous and very handsome. All the organizations with which Mr. Cahoone had been connected, contributed set pieces and there was a profusion from friends and relatives. The bearers were Corydon R. Tyler, L. N. Lovell, John Leal, H. R. Munger, W. D. Murray and Henry B. Newhall.

The body was taken to Catskill, N. Y., today, where the interment will be made.

REED'S PACER MIGHT HAVE MADE A RECORD

BUT IT STRUCK A POLE AND THE EXACT TIME IS MISSING.

Filled to overflowing with the liquid concoction sold at Mount Bethel under the name of apple whiskey, Aaron Reed, of the borough, came down from the mountains in his runabout last night. The fiery fluid mounted to his head and so worked on his imagination that he thought the sedate old mare he was driving was a second "Nancy Hanks" and he set out to establish a new record. With Reed whooping and yelling behind, the animal was whipped into a gallop and at Somerset street and Fairview avennue it became wild with fear at the unusual racket in the wagon. It ran into a post, wrecking the vehicle and departing with the shafts dangling at its heels.

The borough police were summoned and Chief Weiss found Reed in the street, trying to figure up the horses' speed record from Johnson's Drive to where the collision occurred. He was positive that he had gone all trotters ten seconds better and consented to accompany the officer to police headquarters, where a turf man could be reached by telephone who was conversant with track history. Several authorities thought Reed's horse was a little slow, but this he disputed, and to give him time to think it over Recorder Doud gave him twenty-seven days at Somerville.

The speedy horse was caught on Somerset street and was placed in charge of a liveryman to keep until Reed comes back.

An Independent Operator.

After having been associated with William Jeffery in the real estate business, for some months, Thad Doane, Jr., has decided to branch out for himself. He has leased commodious quarters in the Vanderbeek building, North and Park avenues, and will open his offices there within a week. Since starting as a real estate operator, less than a year ago, Mr. Doane has been unusually successful. For this reason he has determined to become an independent agent.

SWALLOWED SAFETY PIN

Highly Interesting Experience of Six-Weeks' Old Infant.

CASE REALLY UNIQUE

Baby Kicked Pin from Mother's Hand, As She Undressed Him, and It Dropped Into His Open Mouth.

One of the most remarkable child-accident cases on record anywhere was successfully handled by Dr. P. B. Cregar, of Grant avenue, last week. The case was that of a six-week-old baby which swallowed an open one and a half inch safety pin, and painlessly passed it. Pin-swallowing cases are not rare, but this one had several very unusual features about it, from the very way in which the pin was taken in to the ease with which it was ejected.

The infant, a boy, is the son of Edward Gosslin, of 324 Grant avenue. A week ago Mrs. Gosslin held the child in her lap, preparing it for the daily bath.

Tiny Edward was restless and squirmed with all his little might. Mrs. Gosslin had just drawn a safety pin from his clothes when a small foot struck her hand and knocked the pin from it. The infant's mouth was open and the pin fell straight for it. Mrs. Gosslin made a frantic grasp for the falling pin, but missed it. It dropped, hinge first, into the baby's mouth. The small Edward blinked and gulped. When the frightened mother opened his mouth the pin was down and out of sight.

Mrs. Gosslin called in Dr. Cregar. The latter had the child taken to the hospital without delay and put under the X-ray. The open pin, headed hinge first, was speedily located in the alimentary canal. The child did not appear to be suffering any inconvenience, and the physician determined to await developments. Past experiences in such matters has demonstrated that cathartics and emetics simply make matters worse in pin cases, so nothing of that sort was administered. The child was kept quiet and every day the pin in its interior was inspected by means of the X-ray machine. It slipped steadily on its natural path, the dangerous point somehow remaining upright and harmless. Saturday the pin made the final stage in its journey through the body, slipping away without inflicting pain or harm. At no time while it was in him did Edward seem to suffer any distress.

Unique is a much-abused word, especially in the literature of medicine, but this case deserves to receive the term. Not only here but in New York there is no record of a child so young swallowing any sort of a pin, much less an inch and a half safety pin. That is should pass the pin without distress or harm is, of course, remarkable enough in itself.

The mother's relief over the termination of the case is not hard to imagine. Her hopes and fears while the dagger-like pin was working its way from her child have left her in a state that requires Dr. Cregar's services to correct.

Miss Anna Tonkin Dead.

Miss Anna Tonkin, aged twenty-three years, daughter of Mrs. Eliza Tonkin, died Saturday night at her home, 414 West Third street. She had been ill two months. McCrea, of the First M. E. church, will have charge of the service here.

POSTMASTER EXPLAINS

Cooper Says Deficiency in Somerville Postoffice was Caused Through Error.

INSPECTOR AT WORK

Effort to be Made to Have Cooper Reinstated—Bondsmen Meet This Afternoon.

Postmaster Cooper, of Somerville, who was removed from office by his bondsmen Saturday on the report of Postoffice Inspector Mehary that he was short in his accounts, arrived at his home yesterday from Chicago and was greatly surprised at the action taken in the matter.

Cooper, in explaining the deficiency of $429.95, said:

"My office was inspected on November 9 last by Mehary. I am now informed that was a technical error in the figures of the report of $600, for which I place the blame on no one, but for which I am not at faut.

"This error," he continued, "led me to believe I had a surplus of about $300 deposited in the bank not belonging to the government, which I had a personal right to.

"In my absence the inspector appeared to correct this error. Of course I am ready and able to make any shortage good."

Cooper met his bondsmen on his arrival at Somerville last night and after hearing his explanation they expressed confidence in him and action will be taken this afternoon to have him reinstated.

WILLIAM HUFF DEAD.

Lung Trouble Carries Off Son of Mrs. Helen Huff.

William Huff, aged about twenty years, son of Mrs. Helen Huff, of West End avenue, died about 11 o'clock last night, following a long illness with lung trouble. His last position was with the New Jersey Central in the New York offices. He was granted a month's vacation last spring, expecting to return to his position at the end of that time. His health was such, however, that he could not go back to business and from that time was unable to do anything. All that was possible was done to restore the patient to health.

Mr. Huff was born near North Branch, and came to this city with his folks when a boy, where they continued to live. For some time he was employed at the Courier-News office first as a carrier and then in a clerical position. Afterward he secured a position with the New Jersey Central, where he remained for nearly two years. He was an attendant at Trinity Reformed church and the Sunday-school. The young man had a host of friends and acquaintances who will regret to learn of his death.

Besides a mother, Mr. Huff is survived by three brothers, Howard D., Paul V. and Earl Huff and three sisters, Mrs. Julius Williams, Mrs. John Hoffman and Mrs. William Henry.

The funeral services will be held from the late home Wednesday afternoon at 2:15 o'clock and Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church, will be in charge. The interment will be at Somerville.

George Bowers, of Warrenville, an old friend of the family. Members of Court Plainfield, I. O. F., and employes of the Plainfield Cab Company attended in a body. The floral tributes included a set pieces from the Foresters and a handsome anchor from the cab employes.

Interment was made in Hillside cemetery, the pall bearers being Peter Kane, Henry Hansen, John Haffner and Arthur Neuman.

Death of Charles H. Cornwell.

Charles H. Cornwell died this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Frederick W. Yates, of Kensington avenue, following an illness of weeks. He was a native of New Britain, Conn., and lived there until two months ago, when his wife died. He then came to this city, intending to make his home with his daughter, Mrs. Yates. Besides a daughter he is survived by a son, Frank S. Cornwell, of New Haven, Conn. Funeral services will be held in New Britain, Conn., on Wednesday.

Special Council Meeting.

A special meeting of the Common Council will be held tonight. The object is to pass the ordinance for macadamizing streets and parts of streets. No other business will be considered.

FRIENDS END CONFERENCE

Young People Society Discusses Important Matters at Concluding Session,

DR. TRUEBLOOD SPEAKS

In Address on "The Present State of International Arbitration" Declares Nations Want True Peace Relations.

The action of the Young People's Society of Friends in deciding to send one or more students to the Woodbrook Settlement, near Birmingham, England, and the address by Dr. Benjamin F. Trueblood, of Boston, were the important features of the afternoon session of the annual conference held at the Watchung avenue meeting-house on Saturday.

Another important matter developed after the conference for future consideration. That was a meeting of the executive committee to discuss ways for increasing the interest of the Young Friends Society in the work of the Religious Society of Friends. This question has been agitating the minds of both the old and young Friends for some time and the possibility of the adoption of definite plans is looked upon as a most encouraging and hopeful sign.

To many outside of the society the members are looked upon as not being progressive and lacking interest in the welfare of their religious body, and in fact there has been some concern as to the lack of interest among the young Friends in the older society. Questions relatives to increasing this interest were informally discussed and no doubt definite plans will be suggested and adopted in the near future, looking toward an awakening of this interest. It is believed that the successful conference on Saturday had much to do with bringing this matter to the attention of the representatives present.

The first matter taken up at the afternoon session was that relative to sending one or more students to the Friends training school in England. After the proposition, as presented by R. Marclay Spicer, one of the editors of the Friends Intelligencer, was referred to the executive committee, the committee reported it to the conference and recommended favorable action. The recommendation was adopted and the matter was referred to a committee, comprising R. Barclay Spicer, Miss Lucy Bancroft, the latter of Wilmington, and Prof. James S. Hiatt, president of the Young People's Society of Friends, with instructions to seek ways and means to carry out the proposition. It is the purpose of the society to have at least one student at this school all of the time, and early action will be taken to accomplish this.

After completing this business, the rest of the afternoon was devoted to a most able address by Dr. Trueblood, who is secretary of the American Peace Society, and the only Friend to hold that position in the society. He is of the "Orthodox" branch of Friends.

Dr. Trueblood spoke especially on the subject of "The Present State of International Arbitration." Having recently returned from Lucerne, Switzerland, where he not only attended the Peace Conference, but also another conference along similar lines at Christiana, Norway, and still a third conference at Brussels, all within the month of September, he was especially well able to speak on the present status of international peace.

The noted speaker declared that there is a sincere feeling on the part of the nations to bring about a true peace relation, and there was every indication of this at the conferences he attended. He said there is a strong feeling against war and international controversy on the part of the heads of the various nations and he praised the work of The Hague Tribunal. He went into details in describing the work of the peace conferences and of the onward march of progress along these lines.

After his address there was a brief time devoted to an informal discussion in which Dr. Trueblood was called upon to answer several important questions. It was the opinion of W. W. Birdsall, president of the Philadelphia High School for Girls, that the last great war had been witnessed, that in the future the leading nations will put forth their greatest effort to secure everlasting peace. It is the hope and aim of the Friends to see the dismantling of warships and the disbandment of the large standing armies of this and other countries.

The conference was concluded about 5 o'clock, when a majority of the delegates returned to their homes. A number remained over Sunday and attended the service at the meeting-house.

—The Rasores Club will meet November 28 with Mrs. John T. Baker, 429 Stelle avenue.

NETHERWOOD HOUSES VISITED BY A THIEF

RECTOR OF ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH ONE THE VICTIMS.

Two more robberies were added to the long and growing list that has been bothering the police for the past month, last night. The victims were Rev. A. S. Peck, rector of St. Stephen's P. E. church, and Samuel Harper, a neighbor of the minister.

In both houses the thief contented himself with ransacking pockets for cash and jewelry. From a pair of Mr. Peck's trousers $9 was taken and $15 and a watch disappeared from the Harper house. Entrance was gained through an unlatched window in both houses, while the occupants were in bed. Mr. Peck lives at 721 East Sixth street and Mr. Harper at 726 South avenue, which is back of the rector's house.

The police believe one man did both jobs. Mr. Harper went to bed at about 10:30 o'clock and Mr. Peck retired at about 1 o'clock. The thefts are supposed to have occurred in both places between 1:30 and 3 o'clock. The thief confined his operations to the lower floor.

JEWS CELEBRATE 250TH EMIGRATION ANNIVERSARY

FIRST LANDING ON AMERICAN LINES MARKED BY SPECIAL SERVICE.

Before the regular afternoon service at the synagogue of the Congregation Children of Israel, New street, Saturday afternoon, a special service in commemoration of the first landing of the Jews in America, 250 years ago, was held. The service was one held in common with all the Jewish churches of the country.

Rev. Dr. Heller, of Philadelphia, a rabbi of National reputation, conducted it. The ritual used was one arranged by the officers of the congregation for the occasion. Dr. Heller spoke on the racial and religious lines that mark the Jew from the Gentile the world over. He urged the American Hebrews to encourage freedom of intercourse between the peoples, and do their part in sweeping aside bigotry and national or racial clannishness.

There was much freedom for the Jew in this country now, he said, and their advancement was only a matte of their own desire and ability. He urged the congregation to work for the constant uplifting of the race and hoped that the spirit of freedom would grow and expand with years.

A feature of the ritual that the congregation officers prepared was the reading of the Psalms 107 and 118, which are peculiarly appropriate to a service commemorative of Jewish emmigration.

CHANGE BUSINESS SITE.

Shirley & Johnston to Move to Larger Quarters.

The present quarters in the Babcock building at West Front street and Madison avenue, being too small for the large increase in business, Shirley & Johnston have decided to move to the store formerly occupied by Woodhull & Martin in the same building. The firm has leased the large store and will be prepared to do business there during the holidays.

The firm has been doing a business especially in carpets, rugs, curtains and trunks, but will from now on deal in a full line of furniture, including bed-room suits, chiffoniers and fancy chairs. A large stock has been ordered and will be on sale early in December in the new store. Since the firm began business it has met with great success and with increased room and facilities will be able to serve its patrons promptly and with a more extensive line.

Francis Clark's Funeral.

The funeral of Francis W. Clark was held from his late home on Somerset street last night. Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, had charge. The body was placed in a receiving vault and will be taken later to Fulton, N. Y., for interment.

WHAT UNITARIANISM IS

Brooklyn Divine Gives His Understanding of It at All Souls' Church

HAS SPIRIT OF CHRIST

It Has a Higher Regard for Character Than Profession, Thinks Deed Better Than Creed.

Rev. Dr. William M. Brundage, of Brooklyn, explained the essentials of Unitarianism, as he conceives them, at All Souls' church, Park avenue, last night. His sermon interested a large congregation.

The Unitarian church, said Dr. Brundage in substance, stands for personal liberty in religious belief; it has not creed and no pledges. It welcomes to working membership all those who, though they may differ with the consensus of its opinion, are in sympathy with its spirit and its practical aims.

The spirit of the Unitarian church is not the spirit of other worldliness. Immortality is not an essential doctrine in Unitarian belief, although most Unitarians that Dr. Brundage has met believe in it, and the church does not give way to a morbid regard for the other life to the consequent disregard of its practical duties in this.

Its spirit is not worldly in the accepted sense. Because of its tolerance with regard to questions of amusement and Sabbatrian observance the church has been accused of being "worldly," but as a matter of fact, it is as strenuously opposed to the materialistic idea as any other church. Its spirit is not that of sectarianism, not the placing of the organization and its aggrandizement above the truth. Its spirit is not destructive. It does, indeed, seek to destroy obstacles to true religion, but it destroys only to build up. It has not an unbelieving spirit. Dr. Brundage said he encourages doubt in young people because doubt is a sign of progress, and if the doubter keeps faithfully at work in search of a belief that satisfied himself in all particulars he must advance.

As for the affirmations of Unitarianism, its spirit is that of religion; the religion of the heart and the life, if not quite that of ritual and creed. It has the ethical spirit; believing in salvation by character, rating deed above creed. It has the spirit of learning, searching always for more truth, fuller truth, profounder truth; recognizing that truth is always being revealed and always eluding the understanding. It has the spirit of sympathy, acting on the principal of "put yourself in his place" intellectually. Finally, Dr. Brundage holds, the spirit of Unitarianism is the spirit of Jesus Christ; he sees in Christ's works and His teachings all that he conceives to be the spirit of Unitarian belief and teaching—non-sectarianism; as great if not greater regard for the life of this korld as for that of the next; and a destruction of old ideas that stood in the way of the new spirt.

Y. M. C. A. MEN'S MEETING.

Rev. Mr. Roberson Speaks—Good Music.

There was a large attendance at the Y. M. C. A. meeting yesterday afternoon, when Rev. E. E. Roberson, of Bound Brook, gave the second of his series of addresses to men. His subject was "Why Did God Suffer Man to Sin and then Damn His Soul?" He referred to man as a create dspirit endowed with the power of voluntary action, which he had chosen to exercise in disobedience to the Divine Spirit, which is the gift of God.

Miss Daisey Kline, soprano, and Miss Clyde Burnet, alto, sang two selections during the service. W. C. Leek, baritone, led the congregational singing and Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan presided at the piano.

Rev. Mr. Roberson will give the third talk in the series at association hall on Sunday afternoon.

William F. Green Dead.

William F. Green, colored, who has worked for some time as chef in local hotels, died Saturday night after a week's illness. The body was taken to Cole's undertaking rooms, where the funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock. The body will be sent to Aiken, S. C., for burial. Green was thirty-eight years old and leaves a widow, a resident of this city.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY

Capt. Day, who died on Friday, had a long and severe taste of soldiering. His regiment, the 15th Regiment New Jersey Volunteers, saw some of the most racking service in the army. It had hard fighting and suffered much from camp diseases. Probably one half of the regiment died before it was mustered out. Capt. Day served for a time with the 10th Regiment, but that was only temporary. The veteran soldier and conductor will be laid at rest in Trenton tomorrow. Funeral service will be held tonight at the house, Washington and Dunellen avenues. The interment, tomorrow, will be private.

There was a large attendance at the meeting for men in the Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon. Unusually large congregations heard Rev. W. W. Casselberry at the First Baptist church and Rev. Frank Fletcher at the Methodist church, last night, at union services.

A fair for the benefit of the general fund of Holy Innocents' church will be held in Friendship Hall, December 8 and 9. It will be conducted under the auspices of the Sunshine Society. It is being planned on lines that promise to make it a most attractive affair.

William Farrier will not begin work on the construction of the new West End avenue bridge, Plainfield, for which he has the contract, until spring. It is thought best to delay the job because cold weather would interfere too much with its progress.

Nelson Cronk, of Montour Falls, N. Y., has come to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Herbert L. Pierce, where he will live in the future. Mr. Cronk visited friends in New York city for a few days on his way to the village.

The township board has received its first installment of State school money in the form of a check for $1,470.27. The total apportionment for Piscataway this year is $4,517.53, so that about $3,047 is still due.

Plans for an oyster supper are being made by the New Market grange. The affair will be held in the very near future, although the date has not yet been set.

Mrs. Charles Underhill, of New York, has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Pierce for several days past.

A wire fence enclosing the meadow along the Prospect avenue crossing, has been put up by the Lehigh road.

Turkeys are rare on farms in this vicinity. This has been rather a bad year for turkeys, farmers say.

Mrs. William B. Smith, who is now a resident of Caldwell, visited friends here last week.

W. W. Oliver has been entertaining his niece, Miss Lena Madden, of New Haven, Conn.

William Tabb, of Port Richmond, visited friends in New Market yesterday.

Daniel Moody has completed the painting of Friendship Hall roof.

Mrs. Harry Denclau spent Saturday visiting out-of-town.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

William J. Kenna, claiming residence 1157 South Second street, and T. Lyons, who said he hung up his hat at 453 West Front street, Plainfield, donated $5 a piece yesterday toward the township treasury, which they had been led to believe was getting low. Kenna and Lyons arrived in town via one of the early morning Plainfield trolleys. Knowing full well that "the early bird catches the worm," they had determined to get here before the rush, as they were afraid the supply might run short when the crowd did come. They were not disappointed in their expectations, but in some way during their rounds they became separated, Kenna in some way got back to the original starting point, the trolley corner, while Lyons wandered towords the Baptist church. Officer Shackleton picked Kenna up as he was attempting to disrobe, while Officer Gurrier lent a helping hand to Lyons. Both were tucked snugly away until afternoon, when Recorder Clark made his official visit. The usual prescription was given, although Kenna pleaded hard to have the court suspend sentence, even telling where he secured his load, but the court held firm and told both that if the fine was not paid before night $2 more would be added as cost of lodging over night. Both sent to Plainfield for the necessary amount, as their trip to town had been more expensive than they had anticipated, and they were a little short of funds.

Tomorrow is the last opportunity to register your kick against the increase in your taxes, the Commissioners of Appeal meeting in the town rooms tomorrow from 1 to 9 p. m. for the purpore of hearing a number of complaints which they were unable to dispose of at the regular meeting held several weeks ago. Assessor Charles French found it necessary this year to make some decided increases in tax valuations in certain sections of the township. The shock was more than the taxpayers could bear, and the result was so many complaints were made that the commissioners were unable to hear them all at the regular meeting, so it was decided that in justice to all it would be better to call another meeting of the board and give all a chance to be heard.

The burglars who have been doing a number of jobs here during the past six weeks are not discriminating in favor of any particular resident. It has just been announced by the local police department that Officer Henry Guerrier's house was entered Thursday night of last week. The entrance was made in the usual way, but a window on the first floor. The thieves' reward for this job was a cheap watch, which they later threw away near the house, and about $1.50 in change, which happened to be in Mr. Guerrier's jeans.

Some one with a strong liking for pork attempted to steal one of John H. Coles' prize porkers early Saturday evening. The porker objected and squealed. This brought out the family and trusty shotgun, as well as the local police on the scene, but the kidnappers escaped in the darkness, after two charges of buckshot had been sent in the direction taken by them in their hasty flight.

Special services will be held Thanksgiving morning at the Baptist church at 10:45. Rev. T. Moore-Smith will preach a sermon appropriate to the day. Special music will be rendered by the choir under the direction of L. D. H. Gilmour.

The 'Plains bowlers roll the Westfield team tonight on Lee's alleys. The local team is rolling a good game at present and more than holding its own with the other teams in this section.

Jacob Sourmilch, of Montague avenue, has purchased the Wade cottage on Bartle avenue, removing there Saturday.

The B. Y. P. U. held its weekly meeting last night in the parlors of the church.

Mrs. Fred Stephenson, of Lincoln, was the guest Saturday of friends in town.

Mrs. Augusta Miller has returned from a visit with friends in Newark.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Mrs. Catherine Smith and daughter have returned home from a two weeks' visit with friends in Brooklyn.

Edgar J. Boice entertained his friend, Mr. Suydam, of New Brunswick, yesterday.

Heber Cubberley has been confined at home by illness since Saturday.

Arrested at Prison Gate.

Trenton, Nov. 27.—Thirty seconds of liberty, after serving a term of five years in the State prison here, was all that was allowed Max Rubell, of Brooklyn, yesterday. He was met at the prison at the expiration of his term and rearrested to answer a charge of horse stealing in Bucks county, Pa. Rubell served time here for stealing a horse and carriage at Metuchen, in which to escape with his pal, after the two had stolen a horse at Tullytown, Pa. Rubell will be given trial in Pennsylvania.

100 Ready to Join Church.

The religious revival in Jersey City has made many converts. At a noon-day meeting yesterday in the Academy of Music the theatre was packed to the doors. Rev. J. W. Chapman, leader of the revival, made a fluent appeal, and a hundred or more men stood up and expressed their readiness to join the church. A similar meeting was held last night at 11 o'clock in the Bon Ton theatre. This meeting was preceded by a parade, headed by the Salvation Army Headquarters Band from Manhattan.

Thanksgiving for All.

The Mercy and Help Department of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church will distribute provisions on Thanksgiving to needy families, and it has made an appeal to the members of the congregation for meats, vegetables, fruits, canned goods or money.

Exchanged Pulpits.

LEST YOU FORGET!

That Thanksgiving is coming, we gently remind you that gala attire is the order of the day. Everybody wants to look his best and turn out spick and span in honor of this most American of all holidays. No need of new clothes either when those you already possess can be made by an expert cleaner to look "better than new." Not an empty phrase that, but a fact, for the garment that's turned out by an up-to-date cleaner looks as if it really belonged to the wearer and loses the too-too apparent "newness" of the "just out of the shop" suit or gown.

Suits, Overcoats, Gowns, Jackets—in fact, every article of personal attire, we cleanse "in your own time," and in a manner unequalled for beauty and finish.

GOLF STOPS THURSDAY.

Season's Play Ends On Thanksgiving Day.

With the special events at the Plainfield Country Club on Thanksgiving Day the active season at the club will terminate. On that day there will be a cross country tournament, clock golf for women all day and the play for the Thanksgiving Day cup. There will be no social events at the clubhouse, as most of the members prefer to spend the time outside of play at home. The clubhouse and course will be kept open until January 1.

According to the New York Sun, the question of Sunday golf at the Plainfield Country Club is not dead, but only sleeping. This was the third time that the much mooted question has been before the club for a vote. Those favoring play on Sunday contend that there are 380 members of the club entitled to vote on the question, and by one statement only 145 of them are opposed to opening the course on Sunday, while the canvass gives 235 in favor. But 254 are needed to carry the measure by a two thirds vote. The Sun says that at the annual meeting early in 1906 the Sunday openers believe that they will carry their point, when the fact is more fully understood that the scheme is not inimical to the proper observance of the Sabbath.

The Union Bible Class taught by Rev. D. H. Stearns will meet at the Y. M. C. A. Hall tomorrow afternoon at 2:15 o'clock. All, especially Sunday school teachers, are invited.

WEDS AFTER DIVORCE.

Marries the "Other Woman" His Wife Had Kissed.

St. Louis, Nov. 27.—Sig. Guido Parisi, well-known violinist, and Miss Martha Belle Scogin, the "Martha" of Mrs. Marie Parisi's famous diary, were married by Justice Cronin in his office yesterday, just nineteen hours after Judge Sale had granted to the musician's first wife the divorce decree which freed the husband.

Meeting at Sig. Parisi's studio, they rode to City Hall on a trolley car and walked thence to the Justice's office, hastening to return that the bridegroom might keep an engagement with a pupil for a lesson before luncheon.

The time for the ceremony was agreed on in a conversation between Sig. Parisi and Miss Scogin by telephone immediately after the violinist learned yesterday afternoon that his wife had obtained her divorce decree.

Sig. Parisi did not appear in court at the divorce hearing, and his wife was the only witness. She told of her voyage to Europe last summer, in which Miss Scogin, under the name of Mrs. Mary Jones, was a passenger on the same steamer with her and her husband; of the meetings between the two in Paris and Naples, and of his final avowal that he could not be happy without the young woman, with whom he had become acquainted as her instructor.

In the diary Mrs. Parisi tells how she agreed to give her husband over to "the other woman," who thanked her, and they kissed.

MUST GIVE UP THE BOOK.

Former Tax Receiver Reed Will Have to Turn It Over to Official.

Rahway, Nov. 27.—Justices Garresom and Garretson, sitting as Supreme Court judges, Thursday handed down a decision in the case of the city of Rahway against Charles E. Reed, ordering that a pre-emptory mandamus may be issued, compelling Charles E. Reed, former receiver of taxes, to turn over to the city of Rahway "the partial payment tax book," which he refused to do when ordered by the Common Council.

City Attorney Francis V. Dobbins will apply to have the mandamus issued today.

This book has caused the city much trouble. Reed, when he went out of office, refused to turn it over to the present tax receiver, but furnished what was supposed to be a duplicate with some $650 as money paid in part on taxes.

Didn't Return from Drive.

Morristown, Nov. 27.—Daniel Losey, a livery stable keeper, is short a bay horse and red running gear rubber tired buggy and harness, which a well dressed, medium sized man hired Thursday to go to Logansville. Nothing has been since heard of the rig, and a reward has been offered for information leading to the arrest of the man and the recovery of the rig.

BASKETBALL LEAGUE BEGINS ITS SEASON

BUSINESS MEN MAKE A STRONG START, DEFEATING WANAMASSAS EASILY.

Showing a marked improvement over their playing of a week before, the Business Men's basketball team defeated the team of the Wanamassa Boat Club at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday evening by a score of 35 to 8. This was the first game of the Y. M. C. A. The other teams in the league are Wetumpkahs, Suburbans, Athletics and Rangers, and two games will be played every Saturday evening during the winter.

Heicher, Browning, Clark and Spicer played the best for the Business Men, and for Wanamassa, Aalforwards.

Plainfield, N. J., November 27, 1905.

The second week of the great evangelisitc revival throughout the State has begun. Already the fruits of their labors have demonstrated to the promoters the need for such a campaign.

Football is to undergo a reformation. No doubt some more stringent rules to prevent brutality will be beneficial, but when a player is not allowed to plant his feet in another's face or bang him in the stomach when he is dashing down the field, the gate receipts will not be so large.

While the part played by Senators Platt and Depew in the insurance scandal is still current topic, the news comes from St. Louis that Senator Burton has been convicted of using his office for criminal purposes. This has been a bad year for the majority of members of the Senate, and when Congress assembles a lodge of mourning might well be held.

ASSAULT CHARGE MADE BY DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

TALE OF AN ALLEGED ATTEMPTED KIDNAPPING TOLD TO ELIZABETH POLICE.

James Kennedy, a former conductor on the Jersey Central, and his wife, of Elizabeth, were arrested Friday afternoon on a warrant for alleged atrocious assault, the charge against the couple being made by Mrs. Edward Kennedy, of New York, their daughter-in-law. They were taken before Police Justice James P. Kelly in Elizabeth, who held Kennedy in $500 bail and his wife in $100 bail to await the action of the next Grand Jury. They furnished the necessary bonds.

The trouble between the Kennedys and their daughter-in-law grew out of an alleged attempt, so they claim, on her part to abduct her child, which is in the father's custody. Edward Kennedy is twenty-two years old and has been in the employ of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company as a clerk. He and his wife, the story goes, have not lived happily together and finally they separated. The woman, according to the story told, went to live in New York, with her father, Mr. Farrell, a retired policeman, while young Kennedy went to the home of his parents, 417 Trinity street, Elizabeth.

The couple had two children, twins, one of whom was with the mother and other in the father's care. Last Monday evening, it is asserted, Mrs. Kennedy came to her father-in-law's and took her child, which is a little over two years old, out, as she says, for a short walk. At once the Kennedys suspected she had come to kidnap the child and the ex-conductor and his wife followed her. Mrs. Edward Kennedy alleges her father-in-law pulled the little girl out of her arms, then knocked her down and kicked her. His wife, she asserts, also beat her.

Young Mrs. Kennedy then consulted John R. Connolly, a lawyer, of Elizabeth, and acting on his advice went before Police Justice Kelly and swore out complaints against her alleged assailants, who they they maltreated her.

It is said the woman took advantage of the fact that her father-in-law and mother-in-law were away from home at Police Justice Kelly's office to answer the charge she had made against them for to go to their home in their absence and take her child. The Kennedys will not talk.

TO SENTENCE AUTOIST.

Convicted Chauffeur Will Be Given Penalty Next Wednesday.

Elizabeth, Nov. 27.—Peter Cron, the automobilist who was convicted Friday afternoon in the Union County Court of Common Pleas for running down and seriously injuring Mrs. Minnie L. Whedon, of Elizabethport, and also hurting her daughter, Maria Louise Whedon, on the afternoon of October 21, when the two women were on their way home from a theatre matinee, will be sentenced by Judge Vail next Wednesday.

The jury was out less than twenty minutes. Cron is married and lives at 110 Livingston street, Elizabethport. He is said to be the first autoist to be caught and punished for reckless speeding. Cron's auto was running at an estimated speed of sixteen or seventeen miles an hour. A petition will likely be presented to Judge Vail asking him to be lenient toward Cron, who bears an excellent character and comes from one of the oldest German-American families in Elizabeth.

Short Line Wants the Land.

New Brunswick, Nov. 27.—The New Jersey Short Line Railroad Company, which will build the extension to Elizabeth of the present line from Trenton to Milltown, instituted condemnation proceedings recently against Patrick Cullinane, of Woodbridge, across whose farm the company desires a right of way. Mr. Cullinane wanted $2,000 for the land required, but the company thought this excessive and appealed to Justice Fort for the appointment of commissioners. Justice Fort appointed W. E. Florance, of New Brunswick; C. W. Boynton, of Woodbridge, and Washington Wilson, of Metuchen. The commissioners have assessed at $788 the two and one-half acres the company will require. W. P. Voorhees and Frederick Weigel, of New Brunswick, appeared for the company, and Peter F. Daly, of New Brunswick, for Cullinane.

N. C. Dunn, of Philadelphia, spent Sunday at the home of his niece, Mrs. Will F. Williams, of Westervelt avenue.

VOORHEES' GIFTS, $350,000.

Wealthy Blind Man and His Wife Aid Education.

Ralph D. Voorhees, the wealthy blind man of Clinton, has given $350,000 to educational institutions already this fall, and it is understood he intends donating as much more at the end of the year. Mr. Voorhees is an interesting old man, with an interesting history.

He was born on a farm, about half way between Clinton and Somerville, and gave promise of a bright career. He went to Rutgers College, where he was graudated with high honors, and then entered the Dutch Reformed Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, intending to enter the ministry. Gradually, from hard study and other causes, he lost his eyesight, and has been almost totally blind since.

During his college course he fell in love with a young woman of their neighborhood, and they were soon engaged to be married. Her father was a wealthy man, and opposed the carriage. After young Voorhees became blind his sweetheart's parents positively forbade the union, and the couple separated, with a secret understanding. Neither would marry until free to do so. She remained at her home, and Voorhees, who had received considerable money, as the story goes, endured the separation as best he could.

Finally, the future Mrs. Voorhees' parents died, and as she was the only child she inherited an ample fortune. Then the long delayed wedding occurred, and later on Mr. and Mrs. Voorhees moved to Clinton. They reside in a comfortable but modest house. They have no children.

It is believed Mr. Voorhees, acting for his wife and himself, has contributed over $500,000, principally to colleges. Rutgers and Lafayette have been large beneficiaries, and so have many institutions not so near at hand. What they have given in a private way to worthy charities of other sorts will never be known. It is said some more extensive gifts will shortly be onnounced. Mr. Voorhees is a relatives of ex-Governor Foster M. Voorhees, of this State, who was born at Clinton and graduated at Rutgers.

WARM WORDS OVER REED.

Rahway Council President Takes Exception to Councilman.

An interesting session of the Common Council of Rahway was held at its special meeting Saturday night, called for the purpose of pushing matters in the case of former Tax Receiver Charles E. Reed, in whose books alleged differences have been found. A resolution, demanding that Mr. Reed be refused access to the city books, except in the presence of the present tax receiver, was laid on the table. Warm words passed between the president of the Council and Councilman John Bernhard, in which the president took exception to Mr. Bernhard's acting as attorney for the bondsmen of Mr. Reed, while, at the same time, sitting in his official chair in council.

Mr. Reed's bondsmen persist in stating that Reed will yet be declared innocent. What they may have up their sleeve is not known, and is being carefully guarded. Reed was counseled by Police Justice William R. Frazee months ago to surrender the memorandum book, which, he avers, is his own private property, and which the Supreme Court says he must surrender. The bondsmen have until December 1 to make answer to the suit. The report that more receipted bills had been presented which are unaccounted for is denied by Tax Receiver Bernhard.

NEW JERSEY HAS 867 POST OFFICES

136 PRESIDENTIAL AND 731 FOURTH CLASS IN THE STATE.

Washington, Nov. 27.—One of the most interesting of all the annual reports to be submitted to a cabinet officer for transmittal by such officer to the President is that of the auditor for the Postoffice Department for the fiscal year ended June 30 last, because that bureau has jurisdiction over every postoffice in the United States, both large and small. This report, just made public, contains many facts and figures in regard to the 867 postoffices in New Jersey that are especially interesting.

The report shows that of the total number of New Jersey offices, 136 are presidential offices (either in the first, second or third class), while 731 are fourth class offices. This is a gain of nine presidential offices within a year, for on the corresponding date of 1904 there were only 127 of that class in the State. On the other hand, it is a reduction of ten fourth class offices during the same period, the total one year ago being 741. This reduction is due largely to the discontinuance of some offices because of the establishment of rural free delivery routes in their places, and the establishment of sub-stations in place of some others.

Of New Jersey's 731 fourth class offices forty-six pay the postmasters less than $50 a year in commissions, which is their only compensation; 112 pay more than $50 and less than $100; 163 pay between $100 and $200; 276 pay between $200 and $500; while there are 134 which net their postmasters anywhere between $500 and $1,000.

The report further shows that for the fiscal year 1837, when the department was first organized, its total receipts from all the offices in the country was only $4,945,668.21, while in the year just closed the total revenue of the department was $167,758,273.55.

The whole number of offices in the entire country is now 68,138, of which 5,654 are in the presidential class. There are also 21,778 city letter carriers and 32,055 rural free delivery carriers, while the average daily receipts from the sale of money orders is about $1,420,000. Verily, Uncle Sam's Postoffice Department, over which Postmaster General Cortelyou presides, has grown to be a monster institution.

AGAIN AFTER WIFE DESERTERS.

Commission to Make It Difficult for Offender to Escape.

It is likely that a movement will be inaugurated in the next Legislature looking to making the Scovel law on wife desertion more effective. At present wife deserters cannot be brought back from other States, because other States have not acts similar to the Scovel law, and a Governor does not usually grant a requisition for a man unless his crime committed in the State making the requisition is also punishable under the law of the State where the wife deserter has taken refuge.

At the time of the introduction of the Scovel bill making wife desertion extraditable, this was pointed out, and only two weeks ago Governor Pennypacker refused to honor the requisition of Governor Stokes for a Jersey wife deserter.

The effect of this refusal to give up a wife deserter that he may be taken back to New Jersey, there to suffer for his crime, will likely lead to the Legislature passing a joint resolution calling for the appointment of a commission to confer with a similar commission of the Pennsylvania Legislature looking to the passing in Pennsylvania of a similar wife desertion law. The commission will also very likely confer with a commission of the New York State Legislature, with a similar object in view.

Mr. Scovel, of Camden, father of the New Jersey wife desertion statute, is anxious that his law may be more effective an dhe will try out the matter before the coming Legislature. He points out that taxes are increased by this crime. Children have to be sent to institutions, families have to be provided for by the overseers of the poor in different municipalities, wives get into the insane asylums at the expense of the counties, police forces have more work to do, and judges and courts have their time taken up. Besides the moral nature of the matter, there is an economic side, and it has been shown that the wife deserter is the cause of much needless expense to the public.

Miss Florence Merriman and Miss Bertha Tingley, of Elizabeth, are the guests of Miss Lillian Duckworth, of West Third street.

AMUSEMENTS.

There is no end of striking stage pictures, uproarous comedy situations and exciting moments in Elmer Walter's play, "AThoroughbred Tramp," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre tonight. The action is laid in Colorado, where the main thoroughfare of a mountain town, the Rio Grande Western Railway Station, office of the prison warden, the depot baggage room, and the male and female compartments in the hospital wards of the Colorado Home for the Feeble Minded are scenic features of interest.

Klimt and Gazzolo's newest success, "Big Hearted Jim," will be seen here Thanksgiving afternoon and night with George Klimt in the title role. This popular actor has never had a more generally admirable and better fitted part to his interesting personality. Big Hearted Jim is a Montana sheriff, big, bluff, honest, brave, simple and strong in his affections, as such men usually are. Mr. Klimt makes him alive with wonderful naturalness. He is supported by an able company fully competent to bring out the many other interesting characters, such as the "Montana Diamond" and Silas from St. Louis, the Chinaman and Bess, a wild western flower.

The initial performance in this city of Charles A. Taylor's latest work, "The Child Wife," which has been receiving unstinted praise from the press of other cities where it has been presented, will be given at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night, and local theatregoers can judge for themselves how fascinating and wholesome the play is. Plays that appeal to the inmost hearts of the people are the most successful of the day, and in this, "The Child Wife" is said to excel, if not in the many other ways in which it affords entertainment and instruction for all those who witness the production. It is a melodrama of a sensational nature and the plot is well worked out. There is plenty of brisk action, considerable pathos and an abundance of good refreshing comedy.

"Sherlock Holmes," the dramatic success, is being presented on every continent of the globe. Two companies are in England, one in South Africa and one doing the drama in India and the English settlements of China and Penang Peninsula. It has been translated into French and is now touring the interior department of that republic. Germany and Denmark have not been overlooked, as it has been produced there with considerable success. This record for a drama has never been equalled, with the possible exception of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." "Sherlock Holmes" will be seen in this city nevt Saturday afternoon and night at the New Plainfield theatre.

The attractions at the Eden Musee in New York city have never before reached such a high standard as at present. From the time the Musee opens in the morning until it closes at night there is a continual round of special features and novelties that are intensely interesting. The wax groups have received many additions, including new figures and rearrangements, and the whole interior of the building presents a new appearance. But the great change has come in the special features. One of the best known Japanese troups of jugglers has been secured for an extended engagement. Their feats are marvelous, and they probably have no equals. Henry Lee, the world famous impersonator, continues a great attraction. Each evening at 9 o'clock he gives an entertainment, which, according to one visitor, was like spending an hour with a number of great men. Not only is his makeup for the different characters perfect, but he copies accurately their mannerisms and speech. As Shakespeare, for instance, he recites the Seven Ages, and as Mark Twain he tells a short story. The other characters represented are Depew, Murphy, McClellan, Odell, Paul Jones, Carnegie and Roosevelt. Hundreds of people have been so pleased with the entertainment that they have revisited the Musee several times to study this great artist. In addition to these attractions new moving pictures are shown each hour in the Winter Garden afternoon and evening, and there are daily afternoon and evening concerts by the new Hungarian Orchestra, which has within a few weeks proven itself the leading Hungarian Orchestra in this country.

If you want to see something bright and breezy do not fail to visit Yorke and Adams at the New Plainfield theatre one week from tomorrow night. They will make their second appearance in this city as stars in the new musical comedy, "Bankers and Brokers," which was especially written for these two comedians by George Totten Smith and Aaron Hoffman. Judging from the reports of their first appearance here they should have no difficulty in duplicating their success. Yorke and Adams are surorunded by a company of sixty-five people.

F. F. Proctor has in preparation to follow directly after the successful run of Comyns Carr's new version of "Oliver Twist" at the Fifth Avenue theatre, a new acting adaptation of "Madame Sans-Gene," which will be presented under the title of "The Duchess of Dantzig." The success of the Beerbohm Tree production of "Oliver Twist" has been so absolute that Mr. Proctor concluded to continue with a series of special presentations by his popular all-star stock company. "Madame Sans-Gene" is another classic, varying in style from "Oliver Twist," and it will again prove the wonderful versatility of his players. The original story has long been considered Victorien Sardou's masterpiece and as the English translation is from the pen of Charles Henry Maltzer, an interesting performance is assured. Miss Amelia Bingham will have one of the best opportunities to display her excellent talents in the title role that has been given her since her introduction at the Fifth Avenue, one that has been played by Rejane, Fanny Davenport, Katherine Kidder and Bernhardt with signal success. All the Proctor favorites, including Charles Abe, Hardee Kirkland, Frances Starr, Dudley Hawley, Thos. McLarnie, Gerald Griffin and Agnes Scott will be happily cast.

Christmas Burr McIntosh Monthly.

When the 1904 Christmas number of this magazine was issued, the critics said it was impossible for the publishers to get out a finer number but we believe that the Christmas 1905 number, which is now on all news-stands, is very much more attractive than Christmas numbers of previous years. The cover is an exquisite design in five colors and gold, the frontispiece, The Falconer, by a celebrated European artist, also being in five colors. The form of portraits, containing such celebrities as Padrewski, Gen. F. D. Grant, Mrs. Geo. J. Gould, Maxine Elliott, Cecilia Loftus, Lillian Russell and others, is printed on the somewhat rare India tint paper in an exquisite tone of sepia ink. There are six plates, each printed in a number of colors and the panoramic views of scenes and incidents are printed in a variety of double tone ink; three of the subjects are mounted on artistic backs which add to the beauty of the issue. A departure is made from previous numbers in the publication of a pleasing story by Ethel Watts Mumford. Among the "Men and Women of Note" are Andrew Carnegie, Miss Alice Roosevelt, Adelina Patti and her husband, Emperor William and Hon. Lloyd Griscom, our Minister to Japan who displayed very clever diplomacy in the recent trying position in which he was placed. This issue is a double number and sells at 50 cents a copy. It is well worth double the amount. Burr Publishing Company, 4 West Twenty-second street, New York.

Miss Elizabeth Palmer, of New York, has been visiting Miss Gladys Stillman, of Webster place.

An EXPLANATORY NOTICE

To the Citizens of Newark and our Customers throughout the State:

The 18th of last May I sold my business property known as 73 Market St. including Nos. 69 and 71, to the Chelsea Realty Co., and gave them a deed for it on July 12th, taking a lease on the property until March 1st, 1906.

To be perfectly frank with the people—having been in business since 1860, and in advanced years I began to tire, so made up my mind to close out my entire stock and devote the balance of my life to my Storage and Carpet Cleaning Business, and settle up my retail business.

But I found it IMPOSSIBLE to get rid of my stock in so short a time and now I have rented the store for another year, and will continue to sell goods at reduced prices—NO LOWER PRICES CAN BE FOUND IN ALL THE CITY..

Hoping this will fully explain my position and retain the good name and reputation we have built up and tried to maintain since we first started business in 1860, I remain,

Yours very truly,
AMOS H. VAN HORN, President.

The Constant Wearing of a Hat Propogates Dandruff Germs.

There are many men who wear their hats practically all the time when awake, and are blessed with a heavy shock of hair; yet if the scalps of these same men once became infested with dandruff germs, the parasites would multiply all the quicker for lack of air. Baldness would ensue as the final result. Newbro's Herpicide kills these germs and stimulates unhealthy hair to abundant growth. Herpicide is a pleasant hair dressing as well as a dandruff cure and contains not an atom of injurious substance. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," Etc.

Copyright, 1902, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Then came the final resolution of the great war president, that as he and Hallack and Stanton had long tried, without success, the business of "bossing" armies in the field, it was time to turn the whole thing over to a single stage manager. Then came Grant and the beginning of the end. At this time, Fred Benton, twice honorably mentioned and recommended for the brevet of major, found himself again summoned to Washington, this time a witness before a military commission for the trial of one Peter Jennings, civilian, for whose apprehension with a whole skin the First Virginia cavalry stood ready to pay a round sum and the "stone wall" to supplement it with another, each claiming prior right to perforate or sear that skin at sight. The Virginians swore that he sold information to the federals, and had betrayed Ladue, of the Eleventh Alabama, into their hands, even while Stanton and others at the war department were ready to swear the tall Virginian's life away on the charge of giving information to the rebels.

Among the papers in poor Ladue's possession was the original draft of the report he had written the commanding officer of the Eleventh Alabama of his flight across the Potomac and capture by union cavalry near Mathias Point. Not until he reached a certain farmhouse near Port Tobacco did he know who were the officers escaped from prison camp near Annapolis, and his joy was great when Jack Chilton appeared among them. He and Chilton were ferried over on a dark, wintry night, and landed at a fisherman's house three miles below the Point, and there, to his infinite concern, Paul found that he had lost his pocket memorandum book, well nigh filled with notes concerning the troops, also sketch maps of field fortifications, all of which he felt confident would be of value to Gen. Lee. Then there were private papers in the book of vast importance to him if to no one else. A racking chill had come on as the result of exposure to the raw night wind, and Jack and the fisherman secreted him in a barn. Then Chilton deliberately went back to Maryland in search of the missing property. Thereby he escaped capture by the cavalry piloted by Jennings. When searched, Ladue was found to have no incriminating papers about him—a disappointment to his captors and obviously a puzzle to Jennings—for Ladue heard him whispering with the officer in command. The last Paul had seen of Chilton was that December night, but later he learned that he had been compelled to remain in hiding many weeks in Charles county before the vigilance of the Federals was again relaxed and he could finally effect his escape. Then there was a letter, unfinished, for Elinor, which Fred had sealed and sent to her, and it was through her, four weeks later, that he learned that Paul well knew he had not long to live, and had really hoped to meet a soldier's death in front of the charging line. One longing he had, he owned, that would probably never be gratified—that of branding McKinnon as a liar and a thief, for young Larry O'Toole, he that used to sweep out and sprinkle the store and had enlisted as a drummer in the Montgomerys after Paul's banishment, had strayed in search of forbidden luxuries just before Chancellorsville, and Stuart's men had nabbed him and run him off to Richmond where Ladue was favored with O'Toole's account of McKinnon's bribing him to purloin those St. Louis letters. With this confirmation of his theories burning within him, Paul had gone to Charlottesville, spending one day with the Chiltons and hearing from the doctor a strange story of McKinnon's generosity to them and kindness to the imperiled son. Rosalie had listened in silent acquiescence until Paul burst in with vehement denunciation of the whole story—told them of McKinnon's treachery to him and his hatred of the Bentons,—told them of Fred's devoted friendship, and then came a strange part of the letter. Elinor copied it verbatim:—

"Miss Chilton grew more and more excited as I talked, and finally whirled on me with 'How can you speak of devoted friendship on the part of a man who planned to capture you both and was only balked by—by Jack's going back for your old note book!' Then she rushed out of the room, and I had to go right on to Gordonsville and could only write to her that, that too, was probably one of McKinnon's slanders, and there wasn't a word of truth in it—that no one was more amazed than Fred when they brought me in. I've not yet heard from her, but I shall, and Jack shall know the moment I can find him.

"Was it not strange that that same old notebook, which she risked so much to send to me that night Fred caught her at the stone house, should later have been the means of saving Jack? She found it in the breast pocket of my new uniform coat at Henry's, and glancing through the pages saw the sketches and memoranda I had even then been making; supposed it was of vast importance,—something that we ought to have and, fearing it would fall into the hands of the enemy, bethought her of Jennings and Judge Armistead; slipped into my uniform, and Fred has probably told you the rest."

So there it was at last:—the story of her daring and devotion and Benton, had he but opened his heart to Paul in the few days that they were together at the Chiltons, might have known it all! There then was McKinnon, furthermore, unmasked, and even more of a blackguard than they had deemed him. Now, at least, must Rosalie know how utterly she had wronged the man whose devotion to her she surely could not fail to realize, yet not a line from her had found its way to Elinor. There was some comfort in the belief that now she knew, but—how he longed to get at McKinnon for further comfort!

And now that queer customer, Jennings, was also under the ban, was he? And they needed Benton's evidence—Benton whose brevet hung fire for reasons he could not understand—Benton who didn't love the war office and who well knew he had found no favor in the grim, deep-set eyes behind those comprehensive spectacles. There was little he could really tell of Jennings, though he had never forgotten that story about the Indiana sergeant seeing Rosalie toss the packet to him in the rush and excitement at the stone house. If that story were true she must have thought him faithful at the time at least. That fateful notebook, filled with Paul's clever topographical sketches and his daily memoranda—what had not Rosalie dared in her effort to send it to safe hands! What sacrifice had not Chilton made in recrossing the Potomac that wintry night in hopes of recovering it! Where was it now? thought Benton, as once again he caught sight of the unfinished dome of the great white capitol. A very suitable bit of property the little volume might be to a southern chieftain again invading Maryland with an army at his back—and a very dangerous one for southern officer to be caught with—if alone!

Mrs. George Strathey, of Plainfield avenue, entertained her mother, Mrs. Higgins, of South Branch, on Saturday.

Open Thanksgiving Day until noon.

The Watson Paddock

will be heralded as the king of Coats—regal in style and royal in tailoring. It clearly shows the high level reached by Watson's tailors.

Dressed in a Watson Paddock you are attired in a garment that is in a class by itself. There is that "something" about them that makes them so dressy and distinctive from other coats. The Broad Massive shoulder, close clinging collar, and well fitted back will set the figure of any man to advantage.

For more the conservative but equally particular dresser we are showing several nobby styles in medium length coats.

This year the woolen manufacturers have given us a selection of materials of finer quality and wider variety than ever,—vicunas, meltons, cheviots, kerseys and thibets.

Our prices are strictly Plebeian—very moderate.

Paddocks $18 to $30.
Overcoats $10 to $40.

FIRE ANSWERS HIS BLASPHEMY.

Rich Broker's Estate Ravaged After Remark that God Can't Trespass.

For two days a forest fire has been spreading over the immense woodland hunting estate of loan broker Howard P. Frothingham, of New York, which lies in the hills near Pompton. Information was received at Paterson last night that several buildings on the estate had been destroyed. The employes of the estate, it was said, had found themselves unable to cope with the fire, which was steadily extending through the wild country.

The origin of the fire is a mystery. The country people are reported to regard it as some kind of a supernatural visitation consequent, they believe, on Frothingham's alleged remark that "even God cannot trespass on my land."

Frothingham purchased the estate through J. P. Morgan, from the Metropolitan Museum of Art, which inherited it from J. S. Rogers, the eccentric old locomotive builder. It comprises 2,000 acres. It was turned into a game preserve.

Frothingham is an enthusiastic huntsman. One of his first acts after acquiring the estate was to run a barbed-wire fence completely around it, closing from the public the "Cannon Ball Road," in use since the Revolution. Armed guards were put at the road. The Court decided the road belonged to Frothingham. This caused bad feeling in the neighborhood.

HAS RECEIVED NO SALARY FOR MORE THAN A YEAR

YET DUNELLEN GIRL 'TIS SAID CONTINUES IN EMPLOY OF LAWYER.

According to the New York Press, the men of New York's financial district are greatly puzzled as to how Horace Blackmar, a Wall street broker, could gain the reputation of being one of the best dressers in the metropolis, maintain a suite of offices, hire a handsome, superbly gowned stenographer and pay his wife alimony, all on an income of $700 a year. These facts were made known when the lawyer was brought before Justice Dickey in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, because his wife's counsel sought to get his counsel fee for obtaining for her a separation from Blackmar.

The most interesting admission which he made, it is alleged, was that he had employed Margaret VanArtsdale, of Dunellen, a handsome girl, who dressed like a debutante for five years, but that he had not paid her a cent in the past year. He never paid much attention to her and did not even remember where she lived. When asked if he had not been seen with her on the Atlantic Highlands boat several Monday mornings in succession, he replied that they had "happened by coincidence" to return to the city on the same boat. It was by the same "coincidence" that they crossed the Wall street ferry together and also the Jersey City ferry.

"I never noticed the she was well dressed," he said in court. "No, I never supported her, never bought her any clothes, never gave her any money to buy clothes." But still she continues to work for him, though he owes her a year's salary.

He used to have diamonds, he confessed, but he had pawned or sold them all. He was in hard luck, he told the Judge, and he really did not have the money with which to pay the legal fees. He said that he lived with his father in No. 84 West 103d street, who paid all the household bills. Finally the Judge took pity on him and permitted him to go.

Frank McIntyre shot six rabbits near New Market Saturday morning.

Clarence Thorn and George Scribner bagged a number of rabbits and squirrels along the mountains Friday.

Cory Adams, of Grove street, who has been with his father on a hunting trip in Virginia, returned home Saturday night. Dr. Adams will return later.

19 KILLED ON GRIDIRON.

Ten Slaughtered on Football Field Were Under Seventeen.

Chicago, Nov. 27.—The Tribune sent the following telegram to President Roosevelt Saturday night:

"The 1905 football season practically closed today with two dead on the field of battle. Today's fatalities bring the total number slain to nineteen and the injured (record only being made of accidents out of the ordinary) to 137. This year's record of deaths is more than double that of the yearly average for the last five years, the total for that period being forty-five. A significant fact is that teams playing the open game have escaped with less than the usual quota of accidents."

The Tribune's list shows the following: Of those slaughtered to make a touchdown eleven were high school players; ten of the killed were immature boys of seventeen and under. Three hardened, seasoned and presumably physically fit college men were slain. The others were amateurs.

Body blows producing internal injuries were responsible for four deaths; concussion of the brain claimed six victims; injuries to the spine resulted fatally in three cases; blood poisoning carried off two gridiron warriors; other injuries caused four deaths.

Among the injuries that have not resulted fatally are: Broken collarbones and shoulders, nineteen; broken legs, thirty-one; broken arms, nine; fractures of some portions of the head, nineteen; broken ribs, three; spinal injuries, three; concussion of the brain, three.

Killed by Thrasher.

Dover, Nov. 27.—William F Mooney, a farmer living near Stanhope, was killed yesterday by being caught in the belt which was driving a thrasher on his farm. He was inside the barn working on the machine, while his son was outside operating the gasolene engine which drove the belting. Mr. Mooney was caught in the belting and whirled about the flywheel of the thrasher, and then thrown out through which and then thrown out through the opening in the side of the barn through which the belt worked, and fell mangled and torn at the feet of his son. When caught he uttered a single cry, and the son was in the act of shutting down the machine when his father's body came out to him.

Appendicitis Victim Dead.

Charles Pew, aged twenty-one years, employed as a machinist at the Pond Machine Tool Works, and living in West Fourth street, died at Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday. A week ago he was operated upon for appendicitis. The young man's former home was at Burlington, and the remains were sent to that place this morning for interment.

Alleged Tool Thieves.

Peter Leach and James Stocknick, Polish laborers, with police-made names, were arraigned before Justice Mosher Saturday afternoon, charged with stealing tools from the Pond Tool Works foundry, where they were employed. They were held in $50 bail for the Grand Jury. Bail was furnished.

Long Acts Queerly.

In all probability Charles Long, who is awaiting death sentence at the Mercer county jail for the murder of Matthew Cunningham, will be sentenced by Justice Reed early this week. Long is unable to sleep well since his trial and sometimes acts queerly. He keeps the other prisoners awake by singing "Killarney." Sometimes Long is seen in his cell pointing an imaginary gun. It is believed that he is feigning insanity.

Petit Jury Dismissed.

The petit jury for the October term ended its labors at the Union County Courthouse Friday. Crane, F. M. Dunham, A. G. Jenkins and I. D. TenEyck.

So far this month only three-tenths of an inch of rain has fallen in this city.

Y.M.C.A. GETS BOYS' CLUB

Splendid Institution in Sycamore Street Transferred By Its Trustees.

NOW 17 YEARS OLD

Kenneth Robbie to Take Charge of Organization Conducted by W. B. Wadsworth—A Valuable Property.

The Plainfield Boys' Club, organized by W. B. Wadsworth, with the assistance of Harry G. Runkle, James T. Closson, Charles J. Fisk and Pliny Fisk, and which has been a source of great benefit to the poorer class of boys in this city for seventeen years, has been transferred to the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., and will in the future be under the direction of Kenneth Robbie, boys' secretary.

With the transfer of the work, the well equipped building on Sycamore street is also given over to the care of the Y. M. C. A. From now on the organization will be known as the Boys' Club Department of the Y. M. C. A. The generous support given by the founder, Mr. Wadsworth, and others associated with him in the work, will be continued as before. Necessary repairs to the building will be made and the manual training will be continued under the direction of Charles Belknap, of this city, and Linton B. Crandall, manual training teacher in the North Plainfield High School.

The gymnasium work will also be continued under a competent instructor. A meeting of the boys is called for tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock at the clubhouse. Mr. Robbie and the manual training teachers will be present to discuss plans for the future. While the club in the past has been open only nine months in the year, the present plan is to make it an all-year-round club.

Mr. Wadsworth organized and founded the club seventeen years ago and it has been a success in many respects. During the past few months plans hae been under consideration to put the club under the direction of the Y. M. C. A., it being realized that in this way the association would be able to reach all classes of boys in the city. All of the trustees of the Plainfield Boys' Club were perfectly willing to make the transfer and agreed to continue their support.

HOPE BOYS WIN AGAIN.

Defeat a Crippled Y. M. C. A. Jr. Team.

Playing with only four men against their opponent's five, the Y. M. C. A. Jr., were defeated by the Hope Boys' Club at the Hope gymnasium last night, the final score being 32 to 31. What the association boys lacked in numbers they made up in aggressiveness. Line, of the visiting team, again distinguished himself by his accuracy in throwing goals and covering his opponent. The lineup:

Y. M. C. A.—Line, right forward; Manning, center; Williams, right guard; Steiner, left guard.

Goals from the field—Hunter, 2; Mortimer, 6; Snyder, 2; Kenney, 3; Rimmer, 3; Line, 11; Manning, 3; Steiner. Goals on fouls—Snyder, 2; Steiner. Referee—William Chamberlain. Timekeeper—George Meade. Scorer—Walter Firstbrook.

New Plain Clothes Man.

Officer McGinley has been assigned to plain clothes duty, on bicycle, at night, in connection with the police effort to stamp out the epidemic of thievery that has been sweeping over the city for the past month or two. Incoming trains at every station, and places favorable for debarkation from freights all along the Central's tracks in this city are being carefully watched, to detect, if possible, the arrival of suspicious strangers and keep them under surveillance.

FLAMES FROM CHIMNEY DAMAGE WEST END HOUSE

BLAZE CREEPS IN WEATHER BOARDS AND $450 LOSS FOLLOWS.

Flames from a chimney at the home of Howard Grobes, colored, of 660 South Second street, crept between the walls of the building last night and started a good sized blaze. The members of the family, with one exception, were away and when the neighbors discovered the fire it was breaking out of the weather boards on one side. The one man at home was asleep and was aroused by smoke just as an alarm was turned in from box 45 at 9:46.

Apparatus from both headquarters and No. 3 house was quickly on the scene, and the flames were soon checked. The chemical engine and three hydrant streams were used. It was necessary to tear off a good part of the boards on one side, as the house has no fire-stops and the blaze had spread to the roof and along the top floor. The department worked an hour before it was finally extinguished.

The structure is owned by Abram Cadmus and is damaged to the extent of $300, covered by insurance. Grobe's loss on furniture will reach $150. The building is located in the middle of what was known for many years as "Gossip row."

MISS FLORENCE MARSH GOES TO HER REWARD

BRIGHT AND ENERGETIC WOMAN SUCCUMBS AFTER TWO WEEK' ILLNESS.

Miss Florence Ida Marsh, daughter of the late Elston and Eliza Marsh, passed away at her home, 915 Madison avenue, about 7:30 o'clock last night. Her death was due to cerebro meningitis, from which she suffered for two weeks. At the time she was taken ill she was in the best of health. She was attacked while on the street. On the following Saturday her condition became very much worse. Not once from that time was there the slightest sign of improvement. She was conscious only at brief spells during the early part of her illness, but on Friday she passed into an unconscious condition, from which she never rallied. On Monday Dr. Lambert, a brain specialist from New York, was called in. He could give no hope.

Miss Marsh was born in this city and always lived here. For years she devoted her life to Christian and charitable work, her greatest efforts being in the First Baptist church, where she was identified with every department of work, including the Sunday school, where she was a faithful teacher for many years. For several years she was president of the Charity Circle, King's Daughters, but owing to other duties was obliged to resign this year. Mrs. James R. Joy succeeded her. As a member of the Monday Afternoon Club and in many social circles her kindly influence and help was felt.

Her father and mother, who were identified with the early life of Plainfield, died many years ago, and a brother, Frank Marsh, a former member of the Common Council and prominent in the legal profession, died six years ago.

Miss Marsh is survived by four sisters, Mrs. Oliver B. Leonard, Miss Anna O. Marsh, Mrs. Samuel St. John McCutchen and Miss Minnie S. Marsh.

Private funeral services will be held from the late home tomorrow afternoon in charge of Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church. The interment will be in the family plot in Evergreen cemetery.

DISCUSSED CHILD LABOR

Mrs. Isaac L. Miller's Topic at Political Study Class Meeting.

LAWS OF THIS STATE

Need of Still More Stringent Regulations—Her Talk a Decidedly Instructive One.

A meeting of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. William Riley, Myrtle avenue, and was well attended. At the close of the business meeting the Political Study Class listened to an informal talk by Mrs. Isaac L. Miller on the child labor laws of New Jersey.

Mrs. Miller called attention to the fact that at the present time, two millions of children who can neither read nor write, under sixteen years of age, are at work in shops and factories, or employed as messengers or in kindred ways, in the United States. New Jersey at the census of 1900 reported 2,069 such, between the ages of ten and fourteen. It is not at the bottom of the black list, in the roll of States, but stands in the fifteenth place. Some wise laws have been passed by our Legislatures, but we are stil far behind what we should be. The factory laws now in force are as follows:

No child under fourteen years of age can be employed in any factory or workshop. Every child between fourteen and sixteen years of age employed in any factory or workshop must have proof of age. This proof, which must be furnished to the employer by the parents or custodian of the child and which must be kept on file in the office of the employer, must include, in addition to an affidavit as to the child's age, parentage, etc., a transcript of the record of the child's birth, or a copy of the baptismal record, in the case of native born children. In the case of foreign born children a copy of the passport of the child must be furnished in addition to an affidavit. In exceptional cases where the above mentioned proofs are not obtainable, other proof of age, if conclusive, is accepted, when submitted to the commissioner of labor.

If any child under sixteen years of age employed in a factory or workshop is apparently physically unable to perform the work at which he is engaged, the case must be submitted to the commissioner of labor, who has the power to demand a certificate of physical fitness from some regular practicing physician, and to prohibit the employment of such a child until the certificate is produced.

No child under sixteen years of age may be employed, permitted, or allowed to work more than ten hours in a day or fifty-five hours in a week in any factory or workshop.

Since September 1, 1904, there have been eleven factory inspectors in this State. Their duties are numerous, and some cases of child labor may escape their notice. Any violation of the factory law may be reported by the observer, to Col. Lewis T. Bryant, Commissioner of Labor, Trenton. The compulsory education law should prevent the employment during school hours of any child under fourteen years of age during seven or eight months of the year.

The great need of continued effort Mrs. Miller said, remains, as the present provisions of the New Jersey law in the matter of hours are sadly belated, for children under sixteen years of age, while nominally prohibited from working more than nine hours in one day, and fifty-four in one week, will derive little real protection from the provision for want of the clauses that render such a prohibition workable.

After an interesting discussion on the subject of child labor, Mrs. Riley invited the women to remain, and tea was served.

Again Adjourns Tax Sale.

The sale of lands for unpaid taxes, adjourned from November 24 until yesterday by Tax Collector Robert L. Lee, was adjourned again yesterday until Thursday, December 7. In the meantime several properties were redeemed and Mr. Lee expects that most of those remaining unsold will be taken care of before the next date for sale.

Thanksgiving Exercises.

The Thanksgiving exercises at the North Plainfield schools will be held tomorrow, the upper grades giving theirs at 12:45 and the primary department at 1:30. Contributions for the Children's Home will be received tomorrow morning. The vacation will extend from tomorrow afternoon until Monday morning.

—Eugene O'Reilly's dancing class will conduct a reception and dance in the former I. C. T. Hall Thanksgiving night.

BOROUGH'S NEW SCHOOL EXCEEDS APPROPRIATION

MR. TOWNSEND DECLARES THE ACCOUNT HAS BEEN OVERDRAWN $969

A regular meeting of the borough Broad of Education last night resulted in clearing up numerous small items of business in connection with the new school building. Contractor Henry Hansen presented a bill for incidentals in connection with the work and it was passed with the exception of an item for new blackboards. They were declared to be unsatisfactory and payment was deferred until they were put in proper shape.

The bill mentioned several "extra" items that aroused the curiosity of Mr. Townsend, and when informed of the exact nature of he work by Chairman Cooley, he declared that too many jobs that really should have gone into the new school specifications were kept outside in order to squeeze through within the appropriation. This has already been overdrawn to the extent of $969, and the "extra" bills, he said, would put the cost of the structure well over the $4,000 provided. Mr. Miller afterward announced that he would like to spend an evening with the finance committee and straighten out all the various items, several of which have been charged up to wrong accounts.

The question of the heating apparatus, which is said to be working unsatisfactory, was discussed, but no action was taken. Mr. Miller reported receiving $36 for the library fund and $2,040 for the manual training department from the State.

WOMEN'S LODGE OPENS SIXTH ANNUAL FAIR

MARTHA WASHINGTON COUNCIL BEGINS WEEK OF MONEYMAKING AND GAYETY

Martha Washington Council, Daughters of Liberty, opened its sixth annual fair in Company K Armory, West Front street, last night. It will run for the rest of the week nightly.

The attendance for an opening night was large. For one thing, the crowd had a ready-made start in the whole membership of Company K. The armory consists of one floor, and there was no place for the company to hold its weekly drill but in the midst of the booths, pretty girls and other appurtenances of the fair. The drill was a compulsory matter; the regulations demand a drill weekly on Monday night, without regard to the presence of bazaars or other extraneous affairs in the armory. The drill last night furnished an amusement feature for the early comers, and after it the soldier boys, in their trim uniforms, added color and gayety to the crowd.

The booths and tables are in charge of the following: Candy, Miss Gertrude Geier; fancy goods, Mrs. Fred Welsh, Mrs. Hannah Thompson, Mrs. Florence Moorehouse and Miss Edith Moorheouse. General assistants about the floor are Mrs. Charles Pawson, Miss Fisher, Miss Florence Welsh, Miss Daisy Garey and Miss Addie Gray. The general committee in charge of the affair is made up of Mrs. Mary Niles, chairman; Gilbert Martin, secretary; Fred Welsh, treasurer; Robert Hendershot, William Welsh, George Van Orden, George Allen, Mrs. Hannah Thompson, Miss Fisher, Mrs. Charles Pawson, Mrs. Fred Welsh, Miss Florence Welsh and Miss Florence Moorehouse.

Dancing will be a nightly feature. The music is furnished by Suhr's orchestra.

WITNESS WAS IN JAIL.

So Contract Case in Which John Galbraith Can Testify is Adjourned.

Because one of the important witnesses was in jail, the contract case of W. F. Howarth against D. N. Force, before Justice Mosher, was adjourned this morning for two weeks. The case is one involving money due on a building job. The defendant has filed a set-off.

John Galbraith, who is one of the five men arrested for alleged improper conduct with young girls, was the mason on the job and his testimony is important to the defendant. Galbraith was awaiting bail in Elizabeth when the case came up, but a very short time after it was adjourned a bondsman freed him. F. J. Blatz, counsel for the defendant, was preparing to secure an order to get Galbraith's by commission from the court when he heard of the witness's release.

Mr. DeCourcey a Letter-carrier.

Michael DeCourcey, of East Second street, was the only one out of the six applicants who was successful in passing the civil service examination for letter-carrier. He is now a substitute.

FOR THE HOSPITAL

Dr. Frank Ard Is Appointed Chairman of Committee on Arrangements—Former Mayor Fisk Head of Finance Committee.

Encouraged by the success attained by their last year's effort, the promoters of the first charity ball held an informal meeting at the home of Dr. Frank C. Ard last night, and decided to hold another this winter. Though nothing in the way of details was arranged, Friday night, December 29, was fixed upon as the date, and within a short time the proper number of committees will be hard at work completing the plans.

An informal organization was made by the selection Dr. Ard as chairman; L. G. Timpson, floor manager; Charles J. Fisk, chairman of the finance committee, and Evarts Tracy, chairman of the committee on printing and stationery.

The purpose of the ball, as was done last year, is to secure funds for Muhlenberg Hospital. The original effort was highly successful and aside from being a great financial success was one of the social events of the season. Because of the worthy object, the attendance was large and every member of the gathering enjoyed a pleasant evening.

With Lewis G. Timpson a member of the committee and in charge of the floor, the affair will undoubtedly be replete with novelties, his ingenuity never failing him when working for the hospital. Mr. Fisk is also greatly interested in the details and will do all possible to make the ball even better than was last year's.

The committee will hold another meeting tomorrow night, when the various assisting committees will be appointed.

Capt. Day Buried.

The body of Capt. O. H. Day, the veteran Central Railroad conductor who died in Dunellen last Friday, was interred in Trenton today. The funeral service was held at the house in Dunellen last night. It was largely attended, railroad men from all along the Central line being among the mourners. The floral pieces included a large one from the railroaders. The service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Hopwood, of Newark, a former pastor and friend of the family, assisted by Rev. W. W. Casselberry, of the Dunellen Presbyterian church. The interement was private. A Masonic service was held at the grave.

Contract to Build Home.

Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, the chief benefactor of the Newark Orphans' Home Association, who has provided a fine summer home for the boys and girls at Mountainside, has just made contracts for extensive improvements at the new home at the latter place. These contracts have been signed: With Braun & Chamberlain, painting, $475; with Charles M. Wilson, carpenter work, $3,400; with W. H. Pangborn, mason work, $1,350. W. F. Bower, of Newark, is the architect, and the work is to be started immediately.

Still Alarm for Slight Blaze.

A pile of paper and other refuse in the cellar of J. A. Coastales' residence on Berkeley avenue, caught fire yesterday afternoon at 4:15 and led the occupants and neighbors to believe a dangerous blaze was in progress. A still alarm was sent to fire headquarters and the major part of the apparatus was sent to the scene. The flames had been extinguished before it arrived.

Miss Lillian Casey to Wed.

The wedding of Miss Lillian Casey and William Hearn, of Flushing, L. I., will be held at the home of her sister, Mrs. Leonard Bunn, on Dec. 23. Mr. Hearn is a machinist and lives in Dunellen temporarily.

At Bound Brook Party.

A number of young Plainfielders attended a party held last night at the home of Miss Grace Scudder, of Bound Brook. The party from here was chaperoned by Mrs. G. H. Lally, of Richmond street.

—Some suggestions from Neuman Brothers for Thanksgiving dinner: Fancy table celery, Boston head lettuce, fresh tomatoes, stringless beans, egg plant, cucumbers and cauliflower. Deliveries will be made promptly.

—In another column will be found an advertisement for a lost pocketbook, containing some money and a ring. The owner values the ring very highly, it being a gift from a dear friend. Any one finding it will be liberally rewarded by returning the same to the owner. The pocketbook was lost on Lincoln place, between Vine and Somerset streets.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP SCHEME DEFEATED

STREET WORK HEARING DEFERRED TO DEC. 13

HURRYING UP PROPOSITION TO MACADAMIZE MANY THOROUGHFARES.

For the purpose of allowing sufficient time to advertise the ordinance to macadamize several streets in the Netherwood section a special meeting of the Common Council was held last night to change the date for the public hearing from December 21 to December 13. When the ordinance was placed on first and second readings the public hearing was fixed for December 21, but afterward it was discovered that it would not give enough time to advertise the ordinance so that the work could be completed this year.

Mr. Tolles took exception to the action. He said that in the first instance he reluctantly voted for the ordinance, when he realized that no work can be done this year. He thought it would be better to lay the whole matter over for the next Common Council. In his opinion, it was not a proper thing for the present body to lay out work for the Common Council of 1906. He then made a motion, which was not seconded, that the whole matter be laid over until next year.

In reply to Mr. Tolles' remarks, Mr. Wilson said that the ordinance had been considered by the street committee, after the grades were established on the streets proposed to be macadamized, and inasmuch as the streets need repair very much, he thought that there should be no delay.

Mr. Daniel informed Mr. Tolles that after the ordinance is finally adopted the Common Council will have to advertise for bids and the date for completing this work, May 1, 1906, allows plenty of time.

A vote was then taken to amend the ordinance changing the date for the public hearing to Wednesday, December 13, and Councilmen Bullock, Hibbard, Higham, Murphy, Tyler, Wilson and Daniel voted in the affirmative and Councilman Tolles in the negative.

The streets to be macadamized include Park Terrace from Belvidere to Berkeley avenue; Berkeley avenue from Park Terrace to Leland avenue, and Webster place from Putnam to Watchung avenues. It will not require a great deal of time to do this work. The Common Council proposes to issue two $1,000 bonds to cover the cost of the work and the property owners will have to pay their share of it on the assessment plan. There being no further business, the meeting adjourned.

Anniversary Surprise.

In honor of the seventeenth anniversary of their marriage, Mrs. E. V. Ryder, of Central avenue, arranged a surprise party for her husband last night. Games, music and refreshments were the features of the affair. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Todd, Mr. and Mrs. Skillman, Mr. and Mrs. Burr, Mr. and Mrs. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Van Winkle, S. C. Ryder, Brooklyn; J. T. Ryder, Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt Ryder, Jersey City; Mr. and Mrs. James Gillis. Mr. and Mrs. Ryder received a number of gifts.

Simplifying 'Phone Service.

During the early part of next year the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company will start the work of changing the telephones in this city to the common battery system. This will do away with the individual battery in each 'phone. The bell will be rung by a general battery installed at the central office. This work will be one of the changes to be made by the company in connection with the erection of a new building on East Fourth street.

Somerset Petit Jurors.

Sheriff Cooper drew the following petit jurors this morning for the next term of court in Somerset county: From North Plainfield township and borough, Hubert P. Phillips, Darby A. Beetham, Benjamin Clark, Barzilla R. Moore, William Holcomb and George Conover; from Warren township, George Wilson, Israel P. Mundy, John Burnett, Frank E. Winn and Edward A. Cooper.

A Thanksgiving Day Service.

On Thursday morning a Thanksgiving service will be held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church at 10:30 o'clock. The pastor, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, will preach the sermon. An offering for one of the charity organizations of the city will be received.

Their Wedding Day Approaching.

Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Walsh, of North Front street, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Henrietta Walsh, to Percy Terry, of Rahway road. The wedding will be celebrated shortly after the holidays.

Winfield S. Angleman Produces Argument to Show That Proposition Failed at General Election and Would Be Void Anyhow.

FOUR OBJECTIONS

Lawyer Declares That Over One-half of Total Votes Necessary; Merger With General Election Wrong.

According to able lawyers, among whom is Winfield S. Angleman, much doubt is expressed as to whether the municipal ownership proposition was really carried at the general election on November 8. Some sound arguments are presented which makes it questionable at least. As will be remembered, a special election was called for the purpose on September 26, but technicalities in the law prevented it from being held. It was then decided to merge the municipal ownership election with the general election on November 8. As presented the proposition was to obtain the consent of the taxpayers to allow appropriations to be made for an investigation of the feasibility and practicability of the scheme for the city to control the water supply.

At that election 2,996 votes were cast altogether, but only 1,549 were cast on the water proposition. Of these 1,549, 1,141 favored the plan. As can be seen, 1,141 of the 2,996 voters approved of the idea and so went on record.

A careful study of the matter is being made by Mr. Angleman. In an interview with a representative of The Daily Press today the well known lawyer set forth some of the reasons why he believes that there is doubt over the matter. First of all, he questions whether there was the required majority, and again he is not decided that it was legal to merge the special election in this case with the general election. Furthermore, he brings out the argument that the hours of the special election and those of the general election conflicted radically and that the ballots used were irregular.

In summing up his reasons, Mr. Angleman said:

"The question of whether the water proposition supposedly submitted to the voters at the recent general election was legally carried, so that the Common Council can take advantage of the act approved April 21, 1876, to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water, is an interesting one. It seems to have been taken for granted that, because about a thousand voters signified their approval to the proposition and less than one-half of that number their disapproval, the proposition was, therefore, legally carried. In this connection, however, it must be remembered that those voting in favor of the proposition were only about one-third of the total number voting at the election.

The Act of 1876.

"The 1876 law under which the proposition was submitted to the people has the following provision (Section 16) in regard to the manner in which the proposition shall be submitted:

"'And be it enacted, That this act take effect immediately, but its provisions shall remain inoperative in any city in this State until assented to by a majority of the legal electors thereof voting at an election to be held in said city at any time to be fixed by the board of aldermen, council or other legislative body of said city, of which election the city clerk of said city shall cause public notice of the time and place of holding the same to be given by advertisements signed by himself, and set up in at least twenty public places in said city, and published in one or more newspapers printed therein, for at least six days previous to the day of such election; and said clerk shall provide for each elector voting at such election, ballots, to be printed or written, or partly printed and party written, on which shall be either the words 'for the adoption for this city of the provisions of an act entitled 'An act to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water,' or 'against the adoption for this city of the provisions of an act entitled 'An

A union Thanksgiving service will be held, as usual, in the borough this year. The service will take place in the First Baptist church Thursday morning. Rev. W. W. Casselberry, of the Presbyterian church, will preach. An offering for the benefit of the Children's Home of New Jersey will be taken.

The old Siriski store, recently vacated by Arthur Vail, is to be improved. A one story addition is to be built on it and the front will be moved out on a line with the other buildings on the block. Plans for the work are now being drawn.

Friends of Miss Laura Mix, who spent the summer here two years ago, received cards announcing her marriage to a Walter Grenfell, of Bayonne, yesterday. The ceremony took place at her home in Brooklyn last Friday.

The borough has received its first installment of the school apportionment moneys. The check was for $764.60. The total sum due the borough this year is $2,367.

William Crawford is unable to work at his post in the Levering & Garrigues shop on account of a severe injury to his hand. The accident occurred in the shop.

The monthy meeting of the fire company, which is due in the regular order of things to fall on Thursday night, will, on account of Thanksgiving, be held on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph, of Denver, Col., have been spending several days in the borough as the guests of their nephews, F. F. Randolph and Albert N. Randolph.

Rev. Father Dunphy, rector of St. John's church, attended the conference of priests of the New Jersey Diocese at the Cathedral, Trenton, last week.

William E. Davis, Jr., has been entertaining his sister, Mrs. Sanford Ramsey, of Roselle, who until recently lived here.

The Siriski building is very near to completion. Mr. Siriski expects to move into it before the beginning of next week.

John Blaine has moved back into the borough from Lincoln. The family were in the latter place for about a year.

Workmen of the telephone company have been busy in the borough for the last few days stringing cables.

The crosswalk at Dunellen and Washington avenues has been relaid to conform with the new street grade.

Charles Rogers is developing a fine lot of fall views, taken about the village and township.

Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Randolph have returned from a visit to relatives in Jersey City.

Kenneth, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. James Vail, is ill.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Does it pay? Four well known hunters from here are wondering if it does. Saturday each lost a day to enjoy a hunting trip at High Bridge. Car fare and dinner cost $2.00 each, besides between two and three dollars each lost in wages. The result of the trip netted two innocent little cottontails which had become inquisitive over the advent of four strangers in their midst, and while investigating had fallen martyrs to their curiosity.

Judge Clark gave William J. Kenna some good advice when he was arraigned before him Sunday afternoon. Kenna asked the court to give him his freedom, as he had no money. The judge advised him to send for the ones who sold him his rum, to pay his fine. If this was done a few times there would be fewer drunks on the street Sundays.

Henry Schenck, who was convicted of assault upon Thomas Kearns, comes up for sentence before Judge Vail at Elizabeth tomorrow.

Seely's paper mill, in the valley, is shut down for a week, while necessary repairs are made to the boilers and other machinery.

Miss Nancy Wade, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Abram Wade, has returned to her home at Millburn.

Brick Corrona, who has been working for Charles Myers at Watchung, has resigned his position.

The monthly communion will be held at the morning service at the Baptist church Sunday.

The Suburban Club holds the next of the series of club dances Thursday night, December 8.

Commissioners of Appeal are meeting today from 1 to 9 p. m. in the town rooms.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The Public Service Corporation's electric department is putting in new poles for electric lights from Metuchen to Bound Brook through this township. The poles will be of heavier timber than the old ones.

William Hamilton visited friends in Perth Amboy Sunday.

LEST YOU FORGET!

That Thanksgiving is coming, we gently remind you that gala attire is the order of the day. Everybody wants to look his best and turn out spick and span in honor of this most American of all holidays. No need of new clothes either when those you already possess can be made by an expert cleaner to look "better than new." Not an empty phrase that, but a fact, for the garment that's turned out by an up-to-date cleaner looks as if it really belonged to the wearer and loses the too-too apparent "newness" of the "just out of the shop" suit or gown.

Suits, Overcoats, Gowns, Jackets—in fact, every article of personal attire, we cleanse "in your own time," and in a manner unequalled for beauty and finish.

LAWSON NOW CLAIMS SUFFICIENT PROXIES

BOSTON MAN SAYS HE WILL CONTROL NEW YORK AND MUTUAL LIFE ELECTION

Boston, Nov. 28.—Thomas W. Lawson has given out a statement in which he declares that he now has sufficient proxies to warrant him in saying that he will control the election of both the New York and Mutual Life Insurance companies and that proxies are coming to him at the rate of thousands daily. He continues:

"There are over 200 banks, twenty town or city treasurers and 300 individuals scattered all over the country that have voluntarily opened up proxy collection offices at no pense to me, and they are sending in to me daily a batch of from twenty-five to 700 proxies.

"I have carried all public meetings, with the exception of Schenectady. In three, Indiana, Florida and Texas, the grafters gave me a hard fight. I carried Indiana almost unanimously. Florida and Texas adjourned for two weeks. The Florida meeting was held Thursday night, and the following telegram which I have just received speakes for itself:

"'Meeting large and red hot, but we gave grafters no quarter. Meeting voted by large majority to send proxies to you. Vote on resolution was practically unanimous.'"

Edgar I. Serrell, of the borough, who has been engaged in supervising some electrical construction work at Asbury Park, has returned home.

Mrs. A. C. McCrea and son, of Central avenue, left yesterday for Carlisle, Pa., where they will spend the Thanksgiving season. Rev. Mr. McCrea will join his family tomorrow.

By order of the Common Council.

JAMES T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

AN ORDINANCE

for the permanent improvements of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable macadam pavement, and to provide the necessary funds in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the following streets and parts of streets of the City of Plainfield shall be permanently improved with durable macadam pavement to be completely laid and constructed on or before the fifteenth day of May, A. D., 1906, said macadam pavement to be of the depth and width hereinafter specified, and to be in every respect equal to the macadamizing on Madison Avenue between West Sixth Street and West Seventh Street, in said City, and all work to be given out upon contract to the lowest responsible bidder, and only after the bids therefor shall have been solicited and received according to law, all bids to specify prices for each of said streets or parts of streets separately:

Park Terrace, from the easterly curb line of Belvidere Avenue to the westerly curb line of Berkeley Avenue;

Berkeley Avenue, from the southerly curb line of Park Terrace to the southwesterly curb line of Leland Avenue;

Webster Place, from the southerly curb line of Putnam Avenue to a point 183 feet north of the northerly side line of Watchung Avenue;

Section 2. That said streets and parts of streets described in Section 1, shall be macadamized for a width of sixteen feet, that is to say, eight feet on each side of the center lines thereof, and a depth running from six inches in the center to four inches at the sides, and the macadamizing preparation shall be laid down to the grades already established by ordinance for said streets or portions of streets respectively.

Section 3. That for the purpose of obtaining money by the sale of bonds hereinafter specified for the permanent improvement of said streets and parts of streets as aforesaid, in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits, the Common Council of the City do hereby, pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, authorize the issuing of two registered municipal bonds of the City of Plainfield, of One Thousand Dollars each, amounting in all to Two Thousand Dollars, which bonds shall bear interest at the rate of five per centum per annum, payable semi-annually and be payable three years from said date of issue with the option of the city to redeem or pay off the said bonds, or any one or more of them, at any time after one year from date of issue, and before three years from said date of issue, on giving personal notice to the said holders of said bonds, or thirty days' notice by advertisement in the official newspapers of the City, of the intention to make such redemption or payment, which bonds may severally or collectively be sold for an amount not less than par value, and the interest on said bonds shall be raised annually by taxation and the principal be paid by the City at maturity, and the money derived from the assessments upon the property benefited shall, when collected, be held as a fund toward the payment of said bonds.

Section 4. That after said improvements shall have been completed, the Common Council shall, pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, apply to the Court of Common Pleas of the County of Union for the appointment of Commissioners to estimate and assess benefits upon the owners of the lots or parcels of land and real estate peculiarly benefited by such improvements, in proportion, as near as may be, to an amount equal to the amount of benefits actually acquired by the lands and real estate bordering on said streets or portions thereof respectively, by reason of such improvements respectively; and in case the costs and expenses aforesaid shall exceed the amount of said benefits, the excess thereof shall be paid by the City at large and raised by general tax; no property or owner thereof to be in any case assessed beyond the amount of benefit actually derived from said improvements.

SPLIT NOW FEARED BY N. J. SCHOOLMEN

RETIREMENT FUND OGRE EXPECTED TO STALK AT STATE ASSOCIATION MEETING

According to many local members of the New Jersey State Teachers' Association there is likely to be a particularly lively session at the coming annual meeting at Atlantic City Christmas week. Some school men in this county go so far as to predict that there will be a split in the association, and that those who go out will form a new organization. Others think that the malcontents will not be strong enough in numbers to attempt a new association, because there will be so many more in the present organization that the opponents could not compete.

All the trouble is about one thing—the retirement fund. Many of the men feel that the women are running the fund, that the officers have been elected to serve it rather than the association as a whole, and while many of them are not opposed to the fund they feel that it is only a department of the State Association, just as is the music department, or the manual training department.

These men have long complained that the fund runs the association instead of the association running the fund. They have even gone so far as to declare that those now in office were put there simply to serve the fund. The dissatisfied ones complain that the association is for educational purposes, the same as the National Educational Association, of which it is a part, and the other State Associations. And they object to the whole thing being made a mercenary affair. Some of the 'kickers," as they have been termed, have withdrawn their support from the State Association on this account.

At the recent meeting of the Council of Education at the Free Public Libreary in Newark the matter of forming a new organization, to consist of county and city superintendents and school principals, was discussed, but nothing definite was done. The general impression seems to be that the women so outnumber the men in pedagogical circles that even if all the men were opposed to the retirement fund administration, which, it is said, they are not, there would not be enough persons to make a successful opposition. It is thought that because of this unrest there will be a larger meeting this year than usual.

Another feature of interest at the coming meeting will be the presentation of the report of the retirement fund investigating committee, appointed after the last annual meeting. This committee holds weekly meetings at the Free Public Library, and it is understood that its report will contain some facts of considerable interest.

TAKE OUT HALF TON SAFE.

Newark Thieves Take Unusual Precautions to Avoid Discovery.

Burglars forced their way into the grocery store of Samuel Cohen, North Eleventh and Orange streets, Newark, early yesterday morning, carried out a safe weighing more than half a ton into the rear yard, and took from it $350 in cash and jewelry valued at $400. The robbers were evidently frightened off, for they dropped a kit of burglar's tools, which the police found later in an adjoining yard.

Cohen and his family sleep on the floor above the store. They were not awakened, although the burglars had to upset barrels and boxes which covered a trap door leading to the store from the cellar in making their entrance. The intruders, once inside the place, made careful preparations for their work. They went upstairs, carrying chairs and tables, which they placed at all doors leading from the living apartments. On the chairs and tables they placed tubs of butter and lard, which they also carried from the store, evidently with the intention of delaying Cohen should he attempt to get to where they were at work.

The burglary was discovered when Cohen awoke about 6 o'clock yesterday morning. He looked from a rear window and saw his safe lying in the yard, with the door torn from the hinges. He immediately telephoned to the police.

Plainfield, N. J., November 28, 1905.

Brutality must go or no football for Columbia, says President Butler. As they go together, the fashionable and popular slugging exhibition is quite likely to make its exit before long.

Probably the most notable feature of the insurance investigation going on in New York has been the rapid destruction of popular idols. The public looked up to Depew, McCurdy, McCall, Perkins and others as men who had gradually risen to high estate in the business world and were the acme of probity, honesty, industry and ability. The look of admiration is now turned to one of scorn and contempt.

It is indeed doubtful whether the municipal ownership proposition was really carried at the general election on November 8, notwithstanding that the city authorities have taken it for granted. There are, as can be seen from an interview with W. S. Angleman, to be found in this issue, several fine legal points to be considered in the case. Agreeing with his argument are other lawyers, whose opinions are well worth considering, and the Common Council should examine into the case before going any further. There is no use in spending public money and then have the whole thing upset by the courts.

Elizabeth Pound; selection, High School orchestra; anthem from Gounod's Redemption; poem, "A Little Boy's Thanksgiving," by Marion E. Pierson; story, "What She Was Thankful for," by Eleanor Van Tuyl; anthem; story, "Willie's Hunting; or, Killing a Menagerie with One Shot; or, An Impossible Thanksgiving," by Howard B. COMIC OPERA FOR THE DAY NURSERY

PLAN TO RAISE FUNDS FOR NEW INSTITUTION.

The proposed plans for the establishment of a day nursery here under the auspices of the City Union, King's Daughters, have met with such favorable comment that the success of the institution is already assured. Many charitably disposed persons have signified a willingness and desire to lend their aid to the work.

It is quite likely that in the near future an entertainment will be given for the purpose of raising funds with which to give the nursery a start. It has been proposed that William Holmes, the vocalist, arrange to give a comic opera and from present indications this will be done. The suggestion was made by a citizen well-known for his interest in local charities, and who is anxious to see the nursery a success.

The committee from the King's Daughters having charge of this work has leased a property on West Third street, but it is realized that if the home could be purchased it would mean quite a saving. It is understood that the place can be purchased at a reasonable figure. If this is done a small mortgage can be put on the property and thus the expense would be reduced. The committee is now busy arranging matters and getting necessary things together to open the nursery on January 1, and the members say that any assistance will be appreciated. Cradles, cribs and articles of this nature will be needed to equip the nursery and such contributions will be gratefully received by the committee.

MANY GIFTS FOR THE REV. MR. WALKER

HE COMES TO HOLY CROSS CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY.

To the Rev. George A. Warner, assistant rector of Grace church, Orange, who is about to leave that parish to take the rectorship of the Church of the Holy Cross, here, the following gifts have been presented: A gold silver baptismal bowl, lined with gold, given by those to whom he had administered spiritual comfort in illness and trouble; a large picture of Hoffmann's "Christ with the Doctors," from several personal friends; a handsome clock from the choir boys of Grace church; an oriental rug from the teachers and scholars of the Sunday-school; a handsome gold seal ring from his Bible class of thirty-two young men.

Mr. Warner has been assistant at Grace church about two years. He resigns to leave the new rector, the Rev. Charles T. Wakeley, of Oakland, Cal., free to appoint his own assistants. He is a son of Dr. Warner, of Crown Point, on Lake Champlain, and graduated in 1900 from the General Theological Seminary in New York, going first as a curate in Grace church, New York. His next position was rector of St. Mark's church, Hoosick Falls, N. Y., but resigned after fourteen months on acount of poor health. Grace church, Orange, was his third place. He expects to take charge of the Plainfield church the first Sunday in Advent.

SCHEME DEFEANED

act to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water,' that the polls for such election shall be held at the usual places of holding the annual election in said city, and shall be opened at seven o'clock in the forenoon, and closed at seven o'clock in the afternoon, and such election shall be conducted by the proper election officers of said city for the time then being, and in the manner as may then be prescribed by the ordinance of said city regulating elections therein, and such officers shall return to the board of aldermen, council, or other legislative body of said city, a true and correct statement, in writing, under their hands, of the result of said election, the same to be entered at large upon the minutes of said body.'

A Majority Necessary.

"It will at once be seen by reference to the above section that the assent of a majority of the legal voters voting at the election at which the question is submitted is necessary before the provisions of the act shall become operative in any city. At the recent election only about a third of the voters voting at the election assented to the proposition. That many voters voting at the election failed to record either their assent or dissent cannot alter the situation. Every ballot had the double proposition printed thereon. The law does not say that the act shall become operative when those whose votes are recorded in favor thereof shall exceed those whose votes are recorded in opposition thereto, but does distinctly require the assent of a majority of those voting at the election. Judged by this requirement of the statute, the proposition failed by several hundred votes of being carried.

"But there is another very strong reason for maintaining that the provisions of the 1876 act have not yet been adopted by the city. Section 16, above quoted, distinctly requires a special election, at which the question shall be submitted to the people.

Must Be Special Election.

"The provisions in this section regulating the election are so explicit and are so at variance with the regulations surrounding a general election, as to negative a legal submission of this question at a general election, notwithstanding a general enabling act or the provisions of the general election act allowing and controlling the submission of propositions at a general election.

"Section 16 says that the city clerk shall provide for each elector voting at the election special ballots, to be voted separately, on which shall be either the words 'for the adoption of the,' etc., etc., or the words 'against the adoption of the,' etc., etc. This was an early instance of an official ballot. A glance at the ballots used at the recent election shows that the ballots were provided by the county clerk and bear the imprint of his signature, as required by the general election law, and contained other matter than that specified, and that the words relating to the proposition were 'For Against the adoption of the,' etc., etc. This placing of the proposition on the general ballot was probably done and this wording was probably used on account of Section 52 of the general election law, which provides for the placing of propositions on the general ballot and such wording for propositions to be submitted at an election. But such section was manifestly passed, not as an amendment to existing statutes regulating in detail the submission of propositions at a special election, but to direct in what manner propositions to be submitted at general or charter elections, the manner of the submission of which was not specifically pointed out in the statute authorizing them, should be submitted.

Conflict in Voting Hours.

"The polls at the recent election opened at six o'clock in the morning and closed at seven o'clock in the evening, and were closed (or could have been closed under the statute) between one and two o'clock in the afternoon. Section 16 provides that the polls at the election on the water proposition shall be opened at seven o'clock in the morning and closed at seven o'clock in the evening, but with no provision for a temporary closing, or adjournment, between one and two o'clock. The polls, therefore, at the recent election were open for an hour outside of the specified time limits indicated in the statute, and were closed (or could have been closed) for an hour within the specified time limits indicated in the statute. That many ballots on the proposition were cast during the hour outside the limits and that some ballots were shut out during the closed hour within the limits appears exceedingly probable. At all events, the proceeding was clearly not according to the statute.

"As has been pointed out in the decisions of our higher courts, the requirements of statutes in cases of general public elections are merely directory; but the requirements of statutes in cases of special elections to decide on specific questions of public policy (such as provided for in the 1876 act) are mandatory and cannot be altered or ignored.

A Precedent Cited.

"In the case of Morgan vs. Gloucester city in the Supreme Court, reported in 15 Vroom 137, the 1876 act was under consideration. Gloucester city had attempted to comply with the provisions of the act of 1876 and had held several elections under it, one of them taking place at the annual general election. As to this election, Judge Parker, in giving the decision of the Supreme Court, said:

"'An election on the water question was first ordered by the Common Council to take place on the 2d day of November, 1880, being the day fixed by law for the general election in this State. Before the day appointed, it was evident to those who were instrumental in agitating the question and having the time fixed, that there would be difficulty in casting the vote in reference to this special matter at the annual election. The election officers would probably not allow two tickets to be placed in the same box by one voter, and there had been no provision made for a separate box, nor for printing or writing the vote on the water question upon the tickets to be voted at the annual election. In fact, this could not be done, for the clerk of the city was required by the act to prepare special tickets, to be voted separately, "for or against" the adoption of its provisions. For these reasons, or for some other cause, the order for election of November 2d on the water question was treated by the Common Council as nugatory, although no resolution was passed countermanding it. The clerk did not prepare tickets for that election, but over one hundred voters signified their preference on the subject, in writing, at the bottom of the ticket voted for presidential electors, Governor and other officers.'

The Election a Nullity.

"Judge Parker further said, in the opinion noted, that this election must be treated as a nullity.

"The same reasoning applies to the recent election here, notwithstanding that there is now an official ballot in use at the general elections and the general election law provides a method of submitting propositions on the official ballot. The act under which the election is held must be followed, if the election is to be a legal one.

"It is of the utmost importance that the initial steps in any undertaking, public or private, and especially in any great public undertaking, should be legally taken, as what follows must stand or fall by the legality of those initial steps."

Accused of Robbing Leather Firm.

Elizabeth, Nov. 28.—John Griffin, twenty-four years old, shipping clerk at the David Moffatt Leather Works here for the firm of Harrington & Co., manufacturers of leather soles, at the Moffat plant, was arrested on a charge of larceny made against him by John T. George, vice president of the Harrington company, who accuses the prisoner of stealing from his employers and selling leather soles valued at $25. Vice President George intimated that Griffin's alleged peculations may prove to be even more extensive when an investigation now in progress is finished. Judge Mahon placed Griffin under $500 bail and is still locked up at police headquarters here. He is unmarried and came to this city some time ago from Philadelphia. He denies the charge.

AMUSEMENTS.

There is the true ring about the new play which George Klimt chose to star himself in this season, under the management of Klimt and Gazzolo, and which will be seen here Thanksgiving afternoon and evening. The title, Big Hearted Jim, gives the keynote and the fine though rough personality of Jim Saxon, the sheriff of Medicine Lodge, Montana, is a fitting central figure for such a story. Just as out in the great west there is life, so the play is full of life and action with the characteristic western broad free scope. Jim is in love with a pretty school teacher who has a secret, having been the victim of a mock marriage and the one man who knows threatens exposure if she don't help him steal Ariska, an Indian maiden and heiress. Romance, humor and pathos are dextorously interwoven through the four acts and strongly played by an excellent company.

There is sensation and comedy mingled with intense heart interest in "The Child Life," the latest play by Chas. A. Taylor, which will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night. The story is one of thrilling interest, abounding in sensational episodes and exciting situations so cleverly told that interest in its recital is quickly aroused and is firmly maintained during the developments of the progressive action of the play. The motives and desires, the aims and ambitions of the characters, are appreciated and links are forged which, from the start, bind stage and auditorium together. Every detail has been carefully studied to make the piece practically a mirror of the scenes and characters represented. The scenery, properties and costumes are all carried by the company and are of the highest standard.

This is the season for large productions. Never in the theatrical history of this country has there been so much money spent on staging and equipping plays as has been done this season. In this rivalry the one who will reap the benefit is the theatregoer. The production which is the peer of them all is "Sherlock Holmes," from the pen of William Gillette. The scenic equipment is as fine as the best artists in New York could design and the electrical effects are the best ever created. The production here will be identical with the London and New York run. The engagement here is for next Saturday afternoon and night and will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre.

One of the interesting features of B. E. Forrester's production of the new musical comedy, "Bankers and Brokers," which will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre for the second time next Tuesday night, will be the girls. Battalions of girls. Girls decked out in stunning gowns, gorgeous frocks and cunningly devised frills and laces. Dainty hats, beautiful jewels and delicate footwear. A chorus full of pretty costumes and the costumes full of pretty girls. Those favorite comedians, Yorke & Adams, will head the cast of principals, and their subtle, irresistible humor permeates the entire production. The dialogue of this musical play is exceptionally witty, the lyrics tellingly set to music and the scenic environment excels its nearest competition. Altogether, "Bankers and Brokers" will be found the most humorous, tuneful and quite the nicest evening's entertainment that has visited this city during the present season.

Five Millions in 41 Corporations.

New Jersey granted charters to 41 new corporations last week, the aggregate authorized capital stock being $5,515,302. The largest concern incorporated was the Ajax Light Company of Jersey City, with a capital of $1,000,000. Compared with the week previous, the showing is a gain of 14 in the number of new companies, but a falling off of $354,698 in total capitalization. Three companies increased their capital stock to the combined extent of $1,670,000, and there were two decreases in capital aggregating $1,265,882.44. This makes the net increase in capitalization for the week stand at $5,919,419.56.

Controls Orange Papers.

With the announcement that City Clerk Edgar Williams, of East Orange, has ben named as a director of the East Orange Publishing Company is shown an important transaction in the local newspaper field in the Oranges. Having acquired a controlling interest in the corporation which publishes The East Orange Gazette Mr. Williams now stands as the owner of three of the leading newspapers of the Oranges: The South Orange Bulletin, the official paper of South Orange village; The Orange Journal, an official paper of Orange, and The Gazette, which is the official paper of East Orange.

McCurdy's Out of Mutual.

New York, Nov. 28.—The World yesterday morning contained a story to the effect that President McCurdy, of the Mutual Life Insurance Company; his con, Robert, and his son-in-law, Louis A. Thebaud, have resigned. McCurdy's son was general manager of the company and his son-in-law was agent. The date of President McCurdy's resignation depends on the time required by the trustees to find his successor. Each of the three men, it is said, have been drawing approximately $150,000 a year in salaries and commissions.

An EXPLANATORY NOTICE

To the Citizens of Newark and our Customers throughout the State:

The 18th of last May I sold my business property known as 73 Market St. including Nos. 69 and 71, to the Chelsea Realty Co., and gave them a deed for it on July 12th, taking a lease on the property until March 1st, 1906.

To be perfectly frank with the people—having been in business since 1860, and in advanced years I began to tire, so made up my mind to close out my entire stock and devote the balance of my life to my Storage and Carpet Cleaning Business, and settle up my retail business.

But I found it IMPOSSIBLE to get rid of my stock in so short a time and now I have rented the store for another year, and will continue to sell goods at reduced prices—NO LOWER PRICES CAN BE FOUND IN ALL THE CITY.

Hoping this will fully explain my position and retain the good name and reputation we have built up and tried to maintain since we first started business in 1860, I remain,

Yours very truly,
AMOS H. VAN HORN, President.

CLEANLY WOMAN.

Erroneously Thinks by Scouring Her Scalp That She Cures Dandruff.

Cleanly woman has an erroneous idea that by scouring the scalp, which removes the dandruff scales, she is curing the dandruff. She may wash her scalp every day, and yet have dandruff her life long, accompanied by falling hair, too. The only way in the world to cure dandruff is to kill the dandruff germ, and there is no hair preparation that will do that but Newbro's Herpicide. Herpicide by killing the dandruff germ, leaves the hair free to grow as healthy Nature intended. Destroy the cause you remove the effect. Kill the dandruff germ with Herpicide. FOR THE GENTLER SEX

SOME RECIPES.

Apple Sauce Cake.

Stir to a cream one-half cup butter and one cup sugar. Add one cup apple sauce, into which a teaspoonful of soda has been stirred, one cup raisins, one teaspoonful cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful each cloves and nutmeg, one-half cup butternut meats, and a cup and three-quarters of flour.

Nut Cake.

Cream together two cups of sugar and a half cup butter. Add the yolks of two eggs well beaten and a cup rich milk. Sift together in another bowl three cups pastry flour and two teaspoonfuls baking powder or a teaspoonful soda. Sift three times, then add to the other ingredients together with two cups chopped butternuts or hickory nuts, and a teaspoonful salt. Add also two cups seeded raisins, dredged with flour, and if desired a little grated nutmeg or other spice. Lastly fold in the beaten whites of two eggs, without stirring any more than necessary, and bake in a moderate oven about an hour.

Crullers.

Beat to a cream one tablespoonful of butter and a cup of sugar. Add one whole egg and the yolk of another beaten light, one cup rich, sweet milk, one scant teaspoonful salt and three cups flour, sifted with two teaspoonfuls baking powder. Mix lightly, turn on to a floured board, and cut into rings. Fry in deep, hot fat, taking care not to put too many in the kettle at once. As soon as they come to the surface turn by putting the tines of a large fork through the hole of the doughnut so as not to pierce the cake itself. As soon as done lift out in the same way, shake thoroughly, and drain on butcher's paper. When almost dry roll in powdered sugar.

To Slice Pineapples.

The toughness of pineapples is almost entirely eliminated by slicing the fruit up and down, from stem to blossom end, instead of through the core, as is usually done. Thrust a fork into the blossom end to hold the apple steady, and slice until you come to the hard, pithy core, which can then be discarded. The trick was taught me by an old pineapple grower and makes all the difference in the world in the tenderness of this fruit, which is usually hard and chippy when sliced with instead of against the grain.—National Magazine.

Somerset Croquettes.

Among cheese dishes that hold a high place for the epicure, and are often passed with dressed lettuce for a salad course, melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, and one-fourth cup of flour and pour on, gradually, while stirring constantly, two-thirds of a cup of milk. When the boiling point is reached add one-half cup of grated Gruyere cheese and the yolks of two eggs unbeaten. As soon as the cheese melts, remove from the range, fold in one cup of mild cheese, cut in very small cubes and season with salt and cayenne. Spread in a shallow pan and cool. Shake in round croquettes, dip in crumbs, egg and crumbs again, fry in deep fat and drai non brown paper. These are attractively served on a folded napkin.—Newark Advertiser.

Banana Fritters.

Remove the skin from four bananas, scrape them and slice into thin, round pieces. Sprinkle with a little powdered sugar and a tablespoonful of lemon juice and stand aside while making the batter. Mix and sift together a cupful of flour, a pinch of salt, one tablspoonful of baking powder. Beat the yolk of an egg, with half cupful of milk, stir gradually into the dry ingredients and lastly fold in the stiffly beaten white of an egg. Add the bananas, drop by the spoonful and fry in deep fat. These are especially delicious when served with currant jelly sauce.

FIRST AUTO BUILT IN 1769.

French Engineer Constructed It, Subsequently Locked Up in Church.

Those who imagine that the automobile is a recent invention will be surprised to learn that it was invented over 125 years ago. Malcolm McDowell thus describes its early history in his article, "Anti-Auto Riots in 1830," in the Technical World Magazine:

"The automobile seems to have been born, in the form of an idea, in the year 1759, when a Glasgow student threw out the suggestion that the steam engine—then a very crude low-pressure affair—might be applied to the moving of wheeled vehicles. This student afterward achieved fame as Dr. Robinson, professor of natural philosophy in the University of Edinburg. Ten years later Nicholas Joseph Cugnot, a French engineer, built the first automobile. The machine was a three wheeled affair and its course was quickly run, for on its second or third trip it turned a corner too fast and toppled over with a crash. The city officials of Paris refused to permit Cugnot to repair his machine. To keep it from harming any one they locked it up in a church and there it stayed for some years."

Miss Clara VanFleet has gone to Syracuse, New York, where she is visiting Miss Alberta E. Waterbury, at the university.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

CHHAPTER XXVII.

LOUNSBERRY'S LAST STING.

Gettysburg had thinned the grand old First corps into the proportions of a small division. Consolidation became the watchword, and, with Reynolds dead and his successors devoid of influence, it had none in power to preserve its autonomy. The Second, Fifth and Sixth corps retained their badges and their name. The Eleventh and Twelfth, sent to the west, were "telescoped" and called the Twentieth. The Third had lost its grip, with Sickles' leg, at Gettysburg—its way, with French's head, at Mine Run, and finally its place and name—being distributed to fill the gaps in other organizations. As for what was left of the First, most of it, under gray-headed Wadsworth, went as the Fourth division to the Fifth corps, our old friends of the Iron Brigade ruefully shedding the blood-red disk and decking their caps with the Maltese cross. And so, faithful to the end, they hewed their way through the wilderness, hard hit many a time, but ever landing, cattlike, on their feet, even though so many of the old leaders were gone. Brave, silver-haired Wadsworth, after heroic effort against Longstreet, died at their head in the crash of the sixth of May—Cutler taking the division, and Bragg, another graduate of the Sixth, the brigade—and holding it longest of all. Few they were when they reached the James, mourning with all their hearts for Haskell, killed in command of his new Badger regiment in the awful attack at Cold Harbor. With Warren they rounded the gray line at Five Forks—Hallon Richardson, heading the Seventh, receiving the shot meant for their major general—and finally, bursting from the southward woods below Appomatox, they helped bar the last gateway of Lee's beaten army. Then they marched back to droop their riddled, crape-laden colors for the last time before the head of the nation in the grand review at Washington and, with final handclasp from Hoosiers and Wolverines at the parting of the ways, went home to lay those tattered flags within the walls of their own white capitol, with never a stain or shadow on the record of their defenders.

But the story of several who set forth with them was still unfinished. Fred Benton, who had ridden with their battling line on many a bloody day, came not homeward with the few survivors. A strange fortune had been his after Wadsworth fell. There had been many a reason, as has been told, for believing that the tall Virginian, Jennings, had played a double game from first to last. Benton's evidence had little helped the prosecution, however, and when the young officer was again summoned to the war department and again questioned as to his relations with the Chiltons, he finally "fired up," and declared the line of inquiry a reflection on his loyalty and integrity. Stanton so hated the rebellion that he seemed to hold no officer above suspicion who did not hate everything connected with it, and Benton could not be made to hate the Chiltons—any of them—or to look with anything less than love on the memory of Paul Ladue.

So he came back from Washington in time for the Mine Run affair, boiling over with wrath at the way he had been badgered. Stanton as much as intimated that Benton knew Jennings to be false to his obligations, and was shielding him as he had striven to defend the Chiltons and Ladue. "No man can serve two masters young sir," said the stern secretary, "and you can't properly serve your country and shield those in rebellion against it. I've seen too much of this disposition on your part, and if I see any more of it—I'll break you!"

Words were these to be well remembered in the light of later events.

No wonder Benton was aflame with indignation, and narrowly did he escape court-martial for the hot wrath of his reply. He demanded a court of inquiry but to no purpose. There was little evidence but his own. He continued to serve with Wadsworth, who, from having been more than half inclined at one time to share Stanton's views, had now reasons of his own for differing radically with that tremendous power, and took up the cudgels for Fred in his vehement fashion, and might have gotten into serious trouble of his own had it not been for the shot that ended it all that bitter day in the wilderness. Then Benton was transferred for a time to the headquarters of the cavalry corps, and rode with Sheridan to Yellow Tavern, where the plumes of Stuart went down at last, and the brilliant leader of the southern horse was borne away to die within the walls of the weeping city, and here it was, after Yellow Tavern, Fred Benton had one of the oddest, yet most opportune, meetings of the war.

It was a soft, moonlit night in May. Three confederate officers, unhorsed and captured, had been brought to Sheridan's camp fire near the Richmond road, and in one of these Benton instantly recognized young Winston, wearing now the braid of major of cavalry. The recognition was mutual, and Benton's well-filled flask was brought into requisition at the instant. Benton saw the Virginian was in deep chagrin. A question as to Lounsberry's whereabouts was all that was needed, and Winston launched at once into a tirade. There never was such infernal luck, he said. For months three men had been hounding that fellow to get an accounting from him on a matter that—that—well, Pelham's sister had been engaged—at least believed herself engaged—to Lounsberry ever since early in the war, yet in January came the announcement of his approaching marriage to a widow of wealth and social position in Charleston. He had tricked Maud most damnably, said Winston, and Lloyd Pelham, the very young fellow who was so nearly killed trying to save Lounsberry out there near Gainesville, a captain now and only 20, had been trying to get a fight out of him, and so had Jack Chilton, but Floyd had the best claim, and now Lounsberry had actually been nailed. He had come to Stuart with dispatches and Pelham had slashed him in the face with his gauntlet. A meeting had been arranged for to-morrow morning. He, Winston, was Pelham's second, and would almost give his parole, were such a thing possible to an officer of Stuart's cavalry, to get back to the confederate lines and bring that fellow to book.

"You owe him a grudge as well as Maud Pelham's kinsmen," said he. "Sooner or later he's got to fight or funk. I can't be there to second Pelham, and now there's no telling when any of us can get at him."

"Why not Chilton?" asked Fred.

"Chilton!" and Winston flushed with embarrassment. "Chilton has just been sent away on—other duty."

"With his wounded leader and kinsman—to Richmond?" hazarded Fred.

"No—o," was the halting reply. In fact Winston could not say whither he had gone.

It seemed long indeed before any of those who owed Lounsberry a grudge were enabled to "get at him." But there came a time, and not to those that wore the gray, but to Benton, still serving with Sheridan.

Poison to Drown Sorrow.

Disappointment over the failure of a friend to make good the promises of forgiveness after a quarrel, is believed to have led to the suicide of Miss Nora Bruther, a pretty Trenton girl, who is dead at her home, 135 Mott street, in that city, as the result of drinking carbolic acid. The young woman, who had a good position with the Roebling Company, returned home last evening in a merry bood. She dressed to go to the theatre and then waited for the arrival of a friend. Several hours later her mother found her sitting in the parlor alone and she said she was much disappointed over the failure of the friend to arrive. She admitted having quarreled, but said the incident had been amicably settled. Then she drew the poison from her pocket and dank it.

William LaRue, of East Front street, has recovered from a recent illness.

FIGHT FOR A MAYORSHIP.

Justice Garretson Hears Arguments in Allendale Contest.

Supreme Court Justice Garretson, of Morristown, went to Hackensack Saturday to try to straighten out the Allendale mayoralty contest.

The Republicans claim the election of their candidate, Charles S. Roswell, alleging that seventy votes cast for him were thrown out by the election officers improperly as "marked ballots," because the voters had written on them: "For Mayor, Charles S. Roswell."

Ex-Prosecutor P. W. Stagg and Lawyer W. M. Seufere, counsel for the Allendale Democrats, argued that this served to distinguish the ballots, while Judge D. D. Zabriskie, of the Bergen County Court of Common Pleas, and County Clerk Ramsey, representing the contestants, argued that a voter could not be deprived of his constitutional right to say for whom he wished to vote and to designate the office on a ballot.

The Waters of Life.

It has come to be regarded nowadays as an indisputable fact that the high tension of life in our great modern cities, unless relieved by frequent changes of scene, shortens the natural period of human existence. In most cases of course, when there is no actual breaking down, people are not aware that they are exhausting in fifty or sixty years a physique intended to serve for seventy or eighty. The summer vacation is usually too short a period in which to store up sufficient reserve vitality for a year of brain work and sedentary life, but a second one in the winter when it can be obtained, if only extending for a few days at one time, will afford the change of air and scene which is so essential. Many men who have been kept in the city most of the summer by the exigencies of their business, will refuse to take a holiday in the winter, thinking that there is no resort within their reach where a vacation would be worthy of the name. This is a great mistake. Florida and California may be one of the question, but in Lakewood, New Jersey affords a resort which may be well styled a gem. Offering a complete change of scene, opportunity for physical recreation and social pleasures, a healthful and charming environment during the winter months, and having a temperature ranging from ten to fifteen degrees warmer than that of New York although within a distance that may be traversed twice a day, permitting one to attend business in the city if necessary, the value of such a retreat to a great class of overworked business men and their families is inestimable. A suggestive booklet on Lakewood has been published by the Central Railroad of New Jersey. It will be sent free to anyone applying to C. M. Burt, General Passenger Agent, 143 Liberty street, New York city.

Mark Twain Nearly Seventy.

Mark Twain will be seventy years old next Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, the anniversary coming most opportunely for his thousands of admirers to express gratitude for what he has done and to wish the dean of American humorists many years of continued activity and prosperity. It was nearly fifty years ago that Samuel L. Clemens, an apprentice to that famed Mississippi River pilot, Horace Bixby, heard the expression, "mark twain," the call of the lookout meaning two fathoms. Surely no other pseudonym had an origin in any way similar—which is quite as it should be with Mr. Clemens' absolutely unique reputation. What a retrospect he has as he reviews his career on approaching his three-score years and ten! From what humble beginnings to what heights has this typical American writer risen; what lands he has looked on since those early days in the West; what fortune and what misfortune have met him by the way! Keen as of old, with his interest in men and affairs, if anything increased, and his pen still busy—so, he will pass the notable milestone. His health, it is announced, is good, and certainly there is no indication that his spirits are anything else. Mr. Clemens' views on next week's interesting event will no doubt be voiced at the dinner to be given in his honor by George Harvey, in New York, Tuesday evening, December 5.—Newark News.

AMERICAN PACE.

It takes a stranger in America some time to get accustomed to the mental pace, writes Mrs. Lane in the London Outlook. I shall never forget the German director of a rather famous art museum there, who came to us in a towering rage and blurted out his indignation. He had been in America only a few months, and the sobe rmethods of the Fatherlands still clung to him.

"These American, oh, there American!" and he tore his long hair. "I haf a letter this morning from a young man, and he ask me—Gott im Himmel, is it conceivable?—he ask me can I—I—I—what you call it?—guarantee—that he can become a portrait painter in three months! It is to grow mad!"

But not only the fine arts. A young doctor was explaining to me how thorough and broad his medical education had been (he was from the West), and as impressive and conclusive evidence he added: "I've even taken an extra term on the eye." Now, a term is three months.

Y.M.C.A. FIVE LOST TO RAHWAY TRIANGLES

TWO REGULARS MISSING FROM LINE-UP; P. H. S. FARED BETTER

Weakened by the absence of two of its regular players, the Y. M. C. A. basketball team lost a close game to the strong Rahway Triangles at Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last night. The score was 17 to 15.

In the first half the Triangles had everything their own way. Y. M. C. A. worked hard, but the team, lacking the cohesiveness that the presence of Smith and Utzinger would have given it, suffered to such an extent that the visitors found no difficulty in scoring up a good lead. The half ended 11 to 5.

In the second half the Y. M. C. A. men found themselves, and a change came over the aspect of things. They hammered the Rahwegians to such good purpose that the score of the half almost reversed that of the opening period.

Scull's playing was a feature. He was all over the field with his man under cover and shot goals with spectacular accuracy.

The score and summary:

Y. M. C. A.	Rahway Triangles.
Thompson, Gavett	Randolph
Blimm	Keys
forwards.
Blimm, Scull	Oar
centre.
Letson	Russo
Scull	Boland
guards.

Goals from field, Tompson, Blimm, Scull, 4; Randolph, Keys, 2; Oar, Russo, 3. Goals from fours, Oar, 2; Russo, Gavett, 3.

Score end of first half, Rahway, 11; Plainfield, 5; score end of second half, Rahway, 6; Plainfield, 11; final score, Rahway, 17; Plainfield, 15.

Between the halves the P. H. S. five had it out with the Wanamassa Boat Club combination. It was a sharp tussle all the way through, ending 36 to 31 in P. H. S.'s favor.

The first half was a nip-and-tuck affair that left the issue of the game very much in doubt. The score at its conclusion was 16 to 15.

But in the second half a change came over the schoolboys' style of play. It was not so very noticeable, but the spectators began to feel and to see that the Boat Club was being slowly but surely swamped. It sank with a hopeless gurgle about five minutes before play ended.

Collier and Smith played the star parts in the game. They handled the ball snappily and bothered their men much.

The High School boys appeared in their new suits for the first time. The uniforms consist of gray padded knickerbockers, stockings of blue with red bands, and jerseys of blue with the letters "P. H. S." in red.

Score and summary:

P. H. S.	Wanamassa B. C.
Smith	P. Phillips
S. Freeman	Aalholm
forwards.
Collier	Whitney
centre.
Caldwell, Doane	Hoagland
H. Freeman	Martin
guards.

Goals from field, Smith, 6; Freeman, 3; Collier, 5; Caldwell, Doane, Phillips, 5; Aalholm, 5; Whitney, 3; Martin. Goals from fouls, Smith, Collier, Phillips, Aalholm, 2:

Score end of first half, P. H. S., 16; Wanamassa, 15; score end of second half, P. H. S., 20; Wanamassa, 10; final score, P. H. S., 36; Wanamassa, 31.

INSECTS DEVASTING TREES SAYS EXPERT

EXAMINATION SHOWS THAT FRUIT AND ORNAMENTAL TREES BEING DESTROYED

During the past season there was much alarm over the condition of the maple trees, from an unusual attack of an insect known as the Cottony Maple scale that worked upon them to an extent that the pavements and the ground about them were covered with a sticky substance or honeydew. This dropped from the trees as the result of the work of these numerous insects.

For several weeks George T. Powell, an expert in agricultural problems, and president of the Agricultural Experts' Association of New York, has had a representative, Percy Nelson, studying the insects injurious to trees in and about Plainfield. He finds the San Jose scale doing great damage, and some trees, as the Prunus Pissardi, a beautiful flowering plum with purple foliage, also the Pyrus Japonica, a beautiful shrub and hedge plant, nearly extinct from the ravages of the scale.

Apple and other fruit orchards about Plainfield are everywhere badly infested with the scale, and in a few years, without prompt treatment, they will be totally destroyed.

Plans are being made to systematically spray the trees in Plainfield with materials that will effectively keep in check the scale and other injurious insects. Trees will also be treated for diseases, with which many are afflicted, and which also threaten the destruction of many.

COLBYITES OFFER PERKINS A PLUM

PROMISE HIM SPEAKERSHIP IN RETURN FOR UNION COUNTY'S SUPPORT.

A strong effort is being made by the Colby forces, according to the Newark News correspondent at Trenton today, to capture the Union county delegation. Senator Colby's friends have twenty-five votes and only need four more to control the Assembly.

Inducements have been brought to bear on Assemblyman Randolph Perkins to get him to line up his colleagues. Mr. Perkins says he believes in limited franchises and equal taxation but has not given any signs of accepting the Colbyites offer which includes his being made speaker.

Assemblyman Perkins is slated for leader by the regular organization and will most likely accept it.

MARSH HOLDS PUBLIC OWNERSHIP ELECTION VALID

Corporation Counsel, However, Does Not Give His Opinion Whether The Proposition Was Carried on Nov. 7.

LAWYERS DISAGREE

City's Attorney Disagrees With Mr. Angleman Regarding Legality of the Special Election.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh disagrees with Lawyer Winfield S. Angleman's argument that there is much doubt as to the legality and validity of the municipal ownership election on November 7. He holds that the opinions of Attorney General McCarter and a New York bond expert agreed with his own, which was given to the public affairs committee long before the election took place. As to whether the proposition was carried, Mr. Marsh does not say, but he declares that that phase of the matter will be fully considered before any public moneys are expended in conducting an investigation of the water supply question. He also draws attention to an act of 1898, which defines essential words in the act of 1876, particularly as to the definition of "legal voters."

Mr. Angleman's contentions are that the special election should not have been merged with a general election; that the hours of holding the general election and a special election conflict; that the ballots were not properly prepared, and that a necessary number of the total votes at that election were not cast in favor of the special proposition.

In answer to Mr. Angleman's views, Corporation Counsel Marsh said today:

"All the questions discussed as to the time and manner of holding the election, the form of ballot and time for opening and closing polls, were carefully considered by the public affairs committee long before the election was ordered. I advised that the election could lawfully be ordered to be held on the same date as the general election, and that in such case the form of ballot and times of opening and closing the polls would be governed by the revised election law of 1898, and not by the act of 1876. The election was so held.

"As the city might desire to sell bonds issued under the act, to the trustees of the State school fund, or to New York bankers, my views were subsequently discussed with the attorney general and an eminent bond expert of New York City, and were approved by both.

"Whether votes enough were cast in favor of the act to carry the election has not been passed upon by the Common Council or by me. It will be passed upon before any considerable expense is incurred by the city. As bearing on that question, the 185th section of the General Election Law does not appear to be mentioned in The Daily Press article. That section reads as follows:

"'185. When by the provisions of any statute the decision of any question has been or shall be submitted to the decision of a majority of the legal voters of this State or of any subdivision thereof; or when the approval of a majority of the legal voters of this State or any subdivision thereof is required in any statute before such statute takes effect or before any prescribed action or proceeding under such statute shall be valid and lawful, it is hereby declared that the intent and meaning in any such statute of the words "legal voters" are persons entitled to vote, and who do vote, at the time and in the manner prescribed in and by such statute upon the question or proposition submitted; and that for the purpose of ascertaining what is a majority of the legal voters of any district defined in such statute, upon the proposition therein directed to be submitted, the persons who do not vote at such election shall not be estimated, counted or considered for the purpose of ascertaining what is a majority of the legal voters in such district, with respect to the proposition submitted; such votes shall be estimated and canvassed, and the result thereof determined by the several boards of election and boards of canvassers in the same manner as the results of other elections are estimated, canvassed and determined.'"

SCOTT POST INSPECTED

Annual Event of Local G. A. R. Witnessed by Comrades From Neighboring Post.

OFFICERS NOMINATED.

Preston B. Goodfellow Probable Successor to H. C. Smith as Commander—Feast Ends Evening.

Augustus Lindsley, of Wadsworth Post, G. A. R., of Somerville, conducted the annual inspection of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, of this city, last night. He was accompanied by a large delegation of veterans from Wadsworth Post, while there were also delegations from Kilpatrick and Dahlgren Posts, Elizabeth, and Barry Post, of Rahway.

The inspection showed the local Post to be in excellent condition, and Inspector Lindsley complimented the members for their fine work and the way in which the books and accounts are kept.

In the business of the evening the local Post nominated officers to be elected at the first meeting to be held in December. Preston B. Goodfellow was nominated for commander. In the case of the other offices, there were several nominations for each. They were not permitted to decline last night, but they may withdrawn their names the night of election.

After the business was concluded the meeting was thrown open and the members of the Women's Relief Corps and their friends were admitted. There were vocal selections by Mrs. John Manley and her children, Miss Evelyn Manley and Alfred Manley.

Excellent speeches were also made by Col. Henderson, of Brooklyn; Dr. Younglove and Comrade Atkins, of Elizabeth, and by veterans from Somerville and Rahway. Harry S. Barnes, of Barry Post, also made a few remarks, as did also officers and members of Post No. 73.

Following the speechmaking, refreshments were served by members of the Women's Relief Corps, and the rest of the evening was spent in a social way.

MORE ROOM FOR POST OFFICE NOT LIKELY

RUMOR STATED GOVERNMENT HAD ANOTHER STORE IN VIEW.

The announcement that Shirley & Johnson, carpet dealers, are about to give up their present corner store in the Babcock building and move into the one formerly occupied by Woodhull & Martin has given rise to a report that the postal authorities will endeavor to secure the store to be vacated for extra postoffice room.

Inquiry was made about the matter today and Postmaster E. H. Bird says that it is very doubtful whether this will be done. The new lease for ten years on the present postoffice quarters will be signed soon, and while the Government officials were considering the corner store, it was discovered that it would require considerable work to remove the partition between the postoffice and the other store, and it would also mean a large increase in rent, which the Government would not want to incur, as long as the present quarters would answer the purpose.

Another disadvantage was the fact that the fixtures now used would not be suited for the other store. This would mean possibly an entire change of fixtures, which was not thought advisable.

Postmaster Bird is of the opinion that the office is very well located at present and the accommodations meet the requirements.

Shirley & Johnson will probably not be able to complete the change in location before the middle or latter part of December. As yet it is not known who will occupy the corner store after the present firm leaves it.

WHAT'S DOING TOMORROW

Beside Home Entertainment Lots of Divertisement on the Holiday.

SOME OUT-DOOR SPORTS

Golf and Football Among the Features—Numerous Dances and Other Social Affairs in City and Borough.

In accordance with the annual custom Thanksgiving Day will be generally observed in this city and the borough. This day is peculiar from other holidays throughout the year, in that it is generally given up to home entertainment. It is a time when the family reunion takes the place of other forms of amusement. Persons who, perhaps, cannot reach their homes at any other time of the year make a special effort to do so on Thanksgiving Day, and this will be a feature of the occasion here as elsewhere.

The Y. M. C. A., appreciating that there are some who cannot go home, has arranged to entertain all such at Association Hall, and a large number of men is expected. In the afternoon there will be the entertainment, to which all men are invited. In the evening there will the star course entertainment.

There will be two basketball games at the association gymnasium. The first game will be between the Business Men and first team of the association, and the second between the Plainfield High School and Plainfield Consolidated teams.

Among the other entertainments is the one to be held at Grace M. E. church under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society.

In the way of out-of-door sports there will be a football game tomorrow morning on Crescent Oval between the Orange Field Club and the Camp Bowser. The active season for golf will be concluded at the Plainfield Country Club with a cross-country tournament, clock golf contest for women and play for the Thanksgiving Day cup. As this will close the regular schedule of events a large number of members will undoubtedly take part.

The Watchung Hunt Club will go to the Baltusrol Golf Club for a hunt breakfast and follow the hounds on the return home. These and other events will help to make up a pleasant day for all if the weather is favorable.

No books will be circulated at the Public Library tomorrow. The reading room will be open from 2 until 6 p. m.

LEHIGH VALLEY BRAKEMAN KILLED UNDER ENGINE

EDWARD GUTSHALL MEETS GASTLY DEATH AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Edward Guttshall, 28 years old, a brakeman, was instantly killed under the wheels of a locomotive at the Lehigh Valley Railroad station, South Plainfield, at 2:30 o'clock this morning.

Guttshall was assisting Night Yard Master Thomas Bohl when the accident occurred. In stepping from a switch engine, he lost his balance and fell against a car on the next track. The impact threw him backward and he fell directly in the path of the locomotive. His head was cut off, as completely as if a guillotine had done the work.

Guttshall was married and lived in South Plainfield. News of his death was broken to his young wife at daybreak. She is prostrated.

The young man has lived in South Plainfield for several years, always in the employ of the railroad. He was baggagemaster there for some time, and well known and liked in the village. His former home was Carlisle, Pa.

HURT IN TROLLEY ACCIDENT.

One Injured in Trolley Car and Bakery Wagon Crash.

One of the main line trolley cars, in charge of Motorman John Vroom and Conductor Michael J. McCarthy, of this city, collided with a baker wagon owned and driven by Charles Langdon, of that place, at 10:19 this morning at Beechwood Heights. Langdon was thrown out of the wagon, receiving slight wounds. His horse was knocked down, cut and bruised. The car was not damaged to any extent and Motorman Vroom escaped injury.

Langdon was taken to his home in Bound Brook and a physician summoned. It is not believed that he is seriously injured. Some friends took care of his rig.

Mr. and Mrs. William T. Jeffery are the parents of a boy born yesterday.

THANKSGIVING EXERCISES

Father B. M. Bogan Addresses Pupils at the Plainfield High School.

SPECIAL PROGRAMMES

In the Bryant, Lincoln, Irving and Washington Schools—Holiday Until Monday for Pupils.

Exercises in commemoration of Thanksgiving Day were held in all the schools of the city and borough this morning. Music, poetry and some sort of reminder of what the country and its school children have to be thankful for were the features of all the observances.

There was a notable programme at the Plainfield High School. Rev. Father Bogan, rector of St. Mary's R. C. church, delivered the address, the first time, in a long while, if not the first time on record, that a Catholic priest has spoken in a Plainfield public school. The experience was not new to Father Bogan, however; he did it frequently in his old charge in Rahway.

Father Bogan told the pupils that the country should be thankful for the great peace that has blessed it. He referred to Roosevelt as a mighty leader. The country, he said, was growing greater and more moral. It had seeds of endurance in it because of the religion that marked it. Rome and Greece and other great nations had fallen because of the vice in them, and it was encouraging to Americans to see that their country was not cankered by sin. Its virtue, it was to be hoped, would preserve it.

Besides Father Bogan's talk, there were original stories, essays and poems by pupils, music, and short addresses by Principal Travell and Dr. J. B. Probasco, president of the school board.

One of the features of the programme was the presentation of the P. H. S. insignia to the following fellows, who had earned them in fotball and baseball: Joseph Jones, Harold Todd, William Flanders, Fred Martin, Bertarm Leggett, Gaion Fountain, Gideon Fountain, Howard Freeman, Paul Brakeley, Joseph Osgood, John Lynass and Joseph Osgood.

Exercises were conducted in the borough schools, the upper grades assembling at 12:45 and the primary departments at 1:30. This morning the pupils brought provisions with them for the Children's Home, enough being secured at the Somerset building to fill six barrels and at the Watchung school two barrels.

These exercises were held at the Bryant School:

Singin, "We Sow the Fields and Scatter," school; compositions, "The Puritans in England," Dorothy Smith; "The Puritan's Home in Holland," Sadie Dufficy; "The Pilgrim's Voyage to America," Ada Woodworth; "The First Thanksgiving," Harry Little; recitations, "The Landing of the Pilgrims," fifth grade; "The Best Holiday," boys from fourth grade; "The Hen Turkey's Fright," Margaret Loizeaux; "Hiram Foster's Thanks," Schuylyer Line; mandolin solos, John King; singing, "Over the Mountain Waves," "The Corn's Song," "Thanksgiving Song," and "America," by the school.

At the Irving School the pupils held special exercises in their own class rooms, and Thanksgiving songs wer sung at the chapel exercises. Thep upils also made pretty little booklets appropriate to the occasion.

At the Lincoln School exercises were held in each class room, there being no assembly room in which they can gather for joint exercises. Individual exercises were also held at the Washington School, the teacher in each class preparing her own programme.

40 HOURS DEVOTIONS ORDERED BY BISHOP

MARCH 4 IS SET ASIDE FOR ST. MARY'S CHURCH HERE,

Bishop O'Connor has prepared the order of the forty hours' devotion in the Roman Catholic churches of the Newark Diocese for the year beginning next Sunday. The first Sunday in Lent, March 4, has been named by him for the special devotions in St. Mary's church here.

Other indulgences are granted to those who simply visit the church and offer prayers during the exposition of the blessed sacrament.

SENTENCE DAY IN COURT

Alfred P. Smalley, Gentleman Burglar, Given Five Years In State's Prison.

ROSE GETS TWO YEARS

Henry Schenck, Colored, Receives a Suspended Sentence—Cron Gets Thirty Days in Jail—An Appeal.

Alfred Porch Smalley, of Clayton, N. J., known as the "gentleman burglar," and who confessed to robbing the house of James W. Jackson, on Crescent avenue, and who pleaded guilty to two indictments found against him for two robberies in Elizabeth, was sentenced to five years in State Prison by Judge Vail in the Union County Court, this morning. He was given five years on two indictments, and the sentence is to be served concurrently.

Fred Rose, one of the freight car thieves, and a companion of "Dutch" Ides, who recently escaped from the Rahway Reformatory and is still at large, was sentenced to two years in State Prison.

Henry Schenck, colored, of Scotch Plains, found guilty of a charge of assault and battery on Thomas Kern, also of Scotch Plains, received a suspension of sentence. It is understood that a petition signed by many residents of Scotch Plains, asking for clemency, resulted in his release.

Ferdinand Myer, of Duer street, North Plainfield, who confessed to stealing several bicycles, and was found guilty of the charge, was remanded for sentence at a later date.

Dominick Rosato, who pleaded guilty to selling liquor without a license in New Providence township, was fined $50 without cost.

Peter Cron, found guilty on a charge of assault, in running down Mrs. M. L. Wheaton, of Elizabeth, in his automobile, was sentenced to thirty days in the county jail. Abe David, his counsel, took an appeal at once and started for Trenton, where he hopes to secure a stay of sentence. Cron was locked up, but his counsel hopes to have him out by night. It is claimed that Mrs. Wheaton was as much to blame as the autoist, as she, with several other women had congregated on a crosswalk, when the automobile came along and struck Mrs. Wheaton.

NEW COURT HOUSE PLANS ACCEPTED

SOMERSET FREEHOLDERS TAKE FINAL ACTION ON DESIGNS SUBMITTED.

There was a large attendance at a special meeting of the Somerset County Board of Chosen Freeholders at Somerville yesterday. As the meeting was for the purpose of making the final decision on the plans for the proposed new Court House many lawyers and citizens were interested spectators.

Mr. Codington, of Warren township, moved that the plans for the new Court House, as submitted by the building committee and prepared by Messrs. Gordon, Tracy & Swartwout, be accepted. This was seconded and unanimously adopted.

Mr. Codington also offered a motion to the effect that the building committee be authorized to proceed to advertise for bids for the construction of the Court House, and that the bids be received at such time as the committee may determine. This was also unanimously adopted.

The following resolution was passed: "Resolved that the building committee be and is hereby authorized to borrow such a sum, or sums, of money, noe exceeding the legal limit, for the purpose of paying for the erection and construction of the new jail and Court House, and that bonds be issued to secure the payment of such sums at an interest not to exceed four per cent., payable at such time as may be most advantageous to the sale thereof of the bonds, not exceeding, however, the term of forty years."

MORE MONEY FOR RUSSIANS.

$85 Added to Relief Fund Last Night—Churches Take Collections.

At a meeting of the Plainfield Russian relief committee last night $85 more was turned into the fund to be used for the relief of the stricken Jews of Russia. The collections to date amount to $535.

The churches of the city are beginning to interest themselves actively in the object of the committee. The Crescent Avenue church took up a collection amounting to $142.54 for the Russians on Sunday. A liberal collection was also taken at All Souls' Unitarian church.

LONG SENTENCED TO DIE

Negro Murderer Marked for Hanging on January 12.

SENTENCE AFFECTS HIM

Shivers When Judge Reed Says He Must "Hang by the Neck Until Dead"—Placed in Murderers' Row.

Charles Long, the convicted murdered of Matthew Cunningham, will be hung at Trenton, on Friday, January 12. He was sentenced by Justice Reed in the Mercer County Court yesterday.

The prisoner did not utter a word while the sentence was being pronounced. He was apparently calm until the words "you shall be hanged by the neck" were spoken by the court. Then Long's hands twitched perceptibly, a shiver going over his entire body. This was but for a moment and then the prisoner seemed to regain his composure.

After the sentence he was taken back to the county jail in custody of Constables Applegate and Reed. He was placed in the same steel cell in murderers' row which he had occupied since he was arrested.

In a solemn manner the court gave the death sentence as follows:

"You were convicted by a jury of this court of murder in the first degree. The duty is imposed upon this court to pronounce judgment upon that verdict. The sentence of this court is that you shall be confined in the county prison until Friday, the 12th day of January, 1906, and on that day between the hours of 8 in the morning and 4 in the afternoon, either in said prison or in an enclosed yard or within an enclosure erected for that purpose adjoining said prison, you shall be hanged by the neck until you are dead. May God have mercy on your soul."

APPEAL COMMISSIONERS MAKE FEW REDUCTIONS

DURING FIVE HOURS SESSION THEY HEAR 58 PROTESTS ON TAXES.

J. B. Coward, A. H. Atterbury and William Craig, Commissioners of Appeal in cases of taxation, held their first meeting in the Common Council rooms yesterday afternoon. It was 2 o'clock when the commissioners convened and it was 7 o'clock last night when they completed their labors for the first day.

Fifty eight-cases of appeal were heard, and out of this number but very few concessions were granted, except in the case of dog tax. There were eighteen strenuous kicks on dog tax and the commissioners remitted it in as many cases.

There were property-owners who thought their assessment too high. In one case a man owning a property, said to be worth $40,000, complained over an assessment on $16,000. There were a few other appeals of a similar nature. The commisisoners carefully considered all these. Those not decided yesterday were held for consideration at a meeting of the commissioners to be held tonight in the office of J. B. Coward.

It is not expected that the commissioners will hold another public meeting.

DEBUTANTE TEA.

Mrs. Walter Gaston Introduces Miss Dougal to Society.

A delightful informal affair of yesterday afternoon, was a debutante tea given by Mrs. Walter Gaston, of East Seventh street, for Miss Dougal, of Milton, Pa., who is her guest for a time. It was a pink tea, the prevailing color being that shade. The library was decorated in red.

The tea was given chiefly for the purpose of allowing the younger society women to meet Miss Dougal, and the invitation list was confined to them.

Mrs. Gaston and Miss Dougal were assisted in receiving by Mrs. F. W. Butler, Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. W. A. Clark, Mrs. John Grierson and Mrs. W. M. Clark.

Negro Driver Run Over.

Samuel Scudder, colored, a driver in the employ of Frank Mobus, a stone dealer, was run over by his own wagon yesterday afternoon on Plainfield avenue. Scudder was jolted from his seat. His hand was crushed, and he was badly bruised. He was taken to the hospital in the patrol wagon.

—Don't delay any longer in sending that Thanksgiving order to Neuman Brothers. Everything you need, all strictly fresh and new and no high prices.

"BETWEEN THE CIRCLES"

Senator-Elect Ackerman Pictures and Describes His Recent Round-the-World Trip

MANY FINE VIEWS

Lecture Given Under Auspices of the Men's Association at the Crescent Avenue Church Last Night.

To a good sized gathering in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church last night, Senator-elect Ernest R. Ackerman pictured and described for the first time part of his recent trip around the world.

Mr. Ackerman's trips nave extended over a period of many years and the one which he completed last summer took him around the globe. Armed with a camera he visited the most talked-of cities and points of interest in Europe, Asia and Africa, and he has arranged his description of the scenes in a lecture "Between the Magic Circles," which are the Arctic and Equatorial. He first gave the gathering a glimpse of the big ocean steamer which took him across the Atlantic to Norway, and his story practically began at that point.

He showed numerous pictures of this cold country and gradually took his audience north until it was gazing upon Hamerfest, the most northern city in the world. These places are so seldom visited by local tourists that Plainfielders are not familiar with the scenes, and those shown by Mr. Ackerman were distinctly novel. From Norway he gradually described his travels down to Turkey, stopping long enough to display many fine views of Constantinople and its people, thus giving him an opportunity to tell several interesting things about them. One which caused much amusement was the fact that the fire department in the city must first get permission of the Sultan to answer an alarm, and he is always called up on the telephone before the apparatus can be sent out.

From Turkey Mr. Ackerman went over to Egypt and along the Nile, showing the pyramids, the Sphinx and some characteristic groups of natives. He then took his audience to India and put on the screen some of the most striking pictures of all those he procured, and related numerous amusing facts about its great mass of people. In this country Mr. Ackerman traveled most of the time in private cars, the hotels being very poor, and he caused much surprise by stating that the cost in this way amounts in all to but $2 a day. He declared this to be the only comfortable mode of travel and the railroad officials were so obliging that trips could be easily arranged and carried out. The sacred Ganges River was shown, principally about Benaris, and the speaker devoted considerable time to telling of the great respect which the people have for it and its relation to their religious belief.

From India Mr. Ackerman journeyed along to China and Japan, the latter country being one which he has visited frequently and with which he is very familiar. He secured dozens of handsome views and many were so striking the men were impelled to applaud. At this point he showed a group of Russian warships off the coast, taken by him just previous to the recent naval battles. He was in Japan at the time peace was declared and he secured numerous views of the people celebrating the end of the war by holding athletic games in the parks and giving fireworks exhibitions. Leaving Japan the speaker made his way to the United States, and his last pictures were of scenes in the Yellowstone Park and at Palm Beach, Fla.

Following the lecture, refreshments were served and a social half hour spent.

Hunt Club Chase.

The Watchung Hunt Club has arranged for a chase tomorrow. The club will go to the Baltusrol Golf Club, where a breakfast will be served, after which the members will follow the hounds back to this city. At Baltusrol the members will be the guests of Louis Keller and Charles D. Freeman, the latter president of the club.

Already Planning Carnival.

There will be a meeting of the Muhlenberg Hospital carnival committee within a short time, to start the work of preparation for next season's affair, to be held the latter part of May or the first of June. While the carnival will be somewhat similar to this year's successful affair, many novel features will be introduced.

Will Visit Old Home.

Miss Katie Newell and Miss Nellie Noonan, of this city, will sail Saturday on the Lucania, to visit their old home in Ireland. Miss Noonan expects to return to this country in April, while Miss Newell intends to make a long tour through Europe.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY

The suit of Mrs. Sarah Feller against the Public Service Corporation for $300 damages which was tried in the District Court before a jury resulted in a disagreement. The suit was brought as the result of a trolley collision at Gallagher's corner last July. The plaintiff claimed the trolley car struck her wagon, damaging it greatly. The defense to the suit was that Mrs. Feller backed her wagon in front of the car and into it and that she was to blame for the accident. Lawyer A. S. Marsh looked after the defense and Lawyer G. S. Silzer appeared for the plaintiff. The jury was out an hour or more and were discharged without agreeing.

Thirteen-year-old Henry Erling, son of Charles Erling, who formerly lived in Stelton, died at his home in New Brunswick Saturday from lockjaw. The attack was brought on by a gunshot wound in the arm, the result of a hunting accident several days before. In carrying his gun the boy in some way discharged it, so that the shot struck his arm. The wound apparently started to heal, but in a few days his jaws began to lock, and nothing the doctors did after that could save him.

A number of borough church members attended the revival service at the Bound Brook Presbyterian church Monday night to hear Evangelist and Mrs. Birch, who conducted the services here last week, speak. Mr. Birch has been having great success in Bound Brook. A number of Dunellenites will go to Bound Brook tomorrow night.

There was so much jollity and enjoyment at the recent young people's gathering at W. R. Hetfield's house, Greenbrook, that another affair of the same sort is being planned. No date has yet been set, but Miss Mary Baldwin, who arranged the first party, is putting the preliminaries for the coming affair rapidly into shape.

Burglars held high carnival in the home of Christopher Brower, in Dr. Herron's socialistic colony in the township last week. They got away with $100 in money, some clothes, and all the pies, meat and cakes in the pantry. They smashed some of the furniture, but left no clues.

Yesterday's rain came as a great relief to this vicinity. In common with all surrounding sections Dunellen and the township have been suffering from lack of water for a month. Wells and cisterns have been getting low and much concern was beginning to be felt.

Thanksgiving Day will be observed in the usual way in Dunellen and the township tomorrow. Family parties have been planned in most of the homes and a good many familiar faces that have been missing will be seen again in the borough and village streets.

The township Board of Education is planning to proceed at once with the new school at New Market. Plans are to be drawn at once, and bids for the work will be asked for as soon as the committee approves of the plans.

The Middlesex County Agricultural Association, at its meeting last night, put itself on record against speedy automobiles. "Automobiles must be made to go slower," is the substance of their stand on the question.

The annual union Thanksgiving service will be held tomorrow morning in the First Baptist church. The sermon will be preached by Rev. W. W. Casselberry, of the Presbyterian church.

The petit jury, on which Robert Pierce and H. S. Garretson served, has been discharged until December 5, when the Harrison-Stanbery case, on appeal, will come up.

Communion will be held in the Presbyterian church next Sunday morning. A number of admissions to membership are expected.

Miss Sarah Jacobus, of East Stroudsburg, has returned home after a week's visit with Mrs. George Craig.

Miss Edna Blaine, of New Brunswick, is spending several days with Miss Emma Voorhees, her cousin.

C. T. Rogers & Co. and C. E. Kelley & Co. have begun to deliver the township school coal.

The renewal of the planking on the Washington avenue bridge has been completed.

Miss Angie Warren has returned from a week's stay in Brooklyn.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Mr. and Mrs. Bethune Dunham yesterday visted Mrs. Dunham's sister, who is very ill at her home in Perth Amboy.

The rain yesterday was very acceptable to all throughout Piscataway township.

Rev. J. A. Cubberley attended the revival rally in Newark yesterday afternoon.

Fire Destroys a Landmark.

Whitehouse, Nov. 29.—An old tavern house that had stood on the Easton turnpike in Whitehouse for nearly a century last night was burned to the ground. The origin of the blaze is not known. No one lived in the building, which for some years had been solely used as a dwelling, the last family moving out a week ago. This structure was one of the historic landmarks of the place. Years ago, before the railroads were built and when the farmers carted their grain to New Brunswick, Elizabeth and Newark, this was a favorite stopping place over night for them. The house was near the building, painted in white, from which Whitehouse took its name, and where General Washington once stayed. Cornelius Kline was the last to conduct a hotel in the old building, which was owned by Andrew Emmons, of North Branch.

Basketbal Admissions.

The Y. M. C. A. is going to jump its rate of admission to the basketball. The price hereafter to ordinary games will be twenty cents, and to games in which college teams take part, twenty-five cents. The price heretofore has been fifteen cents. The management believe the quality of sport offered warrants the rise in rates. The Princeton and Columbia teams have been booked.

—Boice, Runyon & Co. has contracted with Jere VanWinkle to have an immense sign painted on the Park avenue side of its large building. The building is to be painted by Woolston & Buckle, after which it will be appropriately lettered.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

Stafford, the printer, says, you are sure of good work if he prints for you.

Thorp's foot relief should be in every household. It quickly does all that is claimed for it.

A. LeVine, of Watchung avenue, can make your old clothes or overcoat look as good as new. Give him a trial.

I. N. Wyckoff, the West Front street painter, has the reputation for doing first-class work, either in painting or papering.

Thinking of that Thanksgiving turkey? Buy it of J. W. VanSickle, North avenue. It will be right in quality and in price.

Barbering is an art. William B. Randolph, of Watchung avenue, knows the art thoroughly. It is luxury to be shaved by him.

You will have the crowning touch of the feast day if your Thanksgiving poultry is bought at the Grandview Meat Market, Somerset street.

William H. Kirch, the Duer street carpenter, is ready to undertake any contract in the building line. He furnishes estimates cheerfully.

William Hand & Sons, of East Second street, do a general trucking business and also maintain a first-class storage warehouse. Only competent and experienced men employed.

Van Camp & Franklin, at Somerset and Front streets, have as fine a line of rugs, carpets, mattings, shades and pictures as was ever seen in the State. They invite all in Plainfield and vicinity to stop in and look around.

In the excitement over the nearness of the Thanksgiving feast, don't lose sight of the fact that B. J. Schreiner's pharmacy is headquarters for drugs, medicines and toilet articles. Special attention paid to prescription work.

If you want a first class turkey for tomorrow's dinner give your order to Frank Neidig, the Somerset street market man. He has a splendid lot of Jersey birds, especially selected for his trade. Delieveries will be made at any time requested.

Holiday shoppers will find many things at A. M. Griffen's hardware store to attract their attention. Many useful articles in the kitchen and household lines will make suitable and appropriate gifts. The prices are within your reach. Mr. Griffen also contracts for all kinds of plumbing work and carries a full ine of hardware and builders' materials.

The preparation of the Thanksgiving dinner is a great trial to the housewife under ordinary circumstances, but not if she consults with Neuman Brothers'. Every year their store is replete with things needed at the great feast and selections can be made from a large stock. They have a fine lot of prepared plum puddings, mince meats, table raisins, fancy fruits, nuts and fresh vegetables; in fact everything but the turkey.

The wise buyer these days is the one who patronizes the local merchant, and with such a fine store as that of Woodhull & Martin's there is no need for leaving the city to trade. The firm has a very large and desirable stock of goods in every department from which a selection is easy. From the carpet department to take of dress goods, nothing is omitted from this stock which should be found in such a store. The baking department still continues to do a big business. Do your holiday shopping at this store and you will not regret it.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Women's Veteran Relief Union will meet Friday night and initiate several candidates.

The Girls' Mission Club of the Congregational church will meet at the home of Miss Morgan on Albert street, Friday night, to plan for a Christmas sale.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First M. E. church held its meeting in Vincent chapel yesterday afternoon. The time was spent in discussing news about the foreign mission fields.

During the next four Sundays there will be a special musical service at St. Stephen's church at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, under the direction of Charles Suhr. The programme will comprise advent music, including special anthems.

Rev. A. S. Peck, rector of St. Stephen's church, and his parishioners are meeting with success in their efforts to raise funds for the purchase of a lot, upon which it is hoped to erect a parish house. The fund is gradually increasing and Mr. Peck hopes to be able to buy the property soon. As yet Mr. Peck has not announced the location of the property, preferring to wait until the purchase price has been secured.

Miss Edith Allen Mooney will be the soprano soloist at the third meeting to be addressed by Rev. E. E. Roberson at the Y. M. C. A. hall on Sunday afternoon next at 4 o'clock. The Lakewood Times and Journal in speaking of the singing of Miss Mooney says: "The singing of Miss Mooney was appreciated. She has a remarkably rich voice of sweet and pure tone and sings distinctly and easily and with much expression."

FIRST WHITE MAN IN AMERICA WAS A JEW

LOUIS DE TORRES WITH COLUMBUS WHEN HE DISCOVERED THE CONTINENT

New York, Nov. 29.—There were more celebrations Sunday of the two hundred and fifteith anniversary of the landing of the Jews in America. The Rev. Dr. Joseph Krauskopf, of Philadelphia, delivered an address Sunday night on "The Jewish Pilgrim Fathers," before the Young Men's Hebrew Association.

"Blessed has been the lot of the Jew in the United States," said Dr. Krauskopf, "and blessed has been the United States in blessing him. It is a marvelous story, that of the settling of the Jews in the Western continent, and the more we read and study it the stronger grows the belief that is was the hand of Providence that opened for Columbus and for the Jews accompanying him to the portals of the new world, to afford a resting place at last to the 'tribe of the wandering foot and weary breast' and a haven to all others seeking shelter and peace."

The Rev. Madison C. Peters, of the Baptist Church of the Epiphany, delivered a lecture Sunday evening on "What the Jews Have Done for America." Dr. Peters pointed out that two Jewish merchants, Luis de Santangel and Gabriel Sanchez, supplied the funds for Columbus' expedition. Isabella did not sell her jewels to fit out Columbus, he said, for she had already pawned or sold them to defray the expenses of the wars then devastating her country. The scientific inventions of the Jews alone made possible Columbus' scientifically well-planed voyages. The first white man to set foot on American soil, Dr. Peters declared, was a Jew, Lous de Torres, the interpreter of the expedition.

The Assembly Districts.

The New Jersey constitution provides that "the general assembly shall be composed of members annually election by the legal voters of the counties, respectively, who shall be apportioned among the said counties as nearly as may be according to the number of their inhabitants. . . . provided that each county shall at all times be entitled to one member; and the whole number of members shall never exceed sixty." The attempt to divide the members between sections in counties having more than one member caused trouble soon after the constitution became operative in 1844, but it was not until 1852 that a remedy was provided. That year an apportionment act was passed which provided that "for the purpose of electing members of the general assembly the several counties shall be formed into as many assembly districts as the said counties are entitled to elect members of the general assembly." There were twenty counties at that time and the apportionment was made. The districts were changed after each national census, as provided in the constitution, until Governor Abbett's time, when changes in district lines were made after the State census. One of these changes was such a gerrymander that it was taken into the Supreme Court and a branch of that court decided that assembly districts were unconstitutional. This decision was never sustained by the Court of Appeals and the constitution has been severely strained by holding up the branch court's decision ever since. A majority of the lawyers in this State believe that there is nothing in the constitution to prevent the Legislature from providing for assembly districts under its undoubted power to regulate elections and all that stands in the way is the unsustained decision of the branch court. It has been proposed that a new case be made for argument before the court, and it is also proposed to have a new district act passed without regard to the existing decision and thus to provide an issue for the courts. Something should be done to insure good representation and to protect the rights of the minority. The fact that our Democratic friends are a very small minority does not deprive them of the right to representation. The election by districts forces a better class of nominations because in small districts every one of prominence is known and the neighborhood contests give to to Assemblymen a prominence that they do not have when they are tail enders on a general county ticket. No more attention is paid to the assemblymen on the ticket now than has been paid to justices, constables or coroners, yet the assemblymen are part of the law making power of the State.—Jersey City Journal.

Open Thanksgiving Day Until Noon.

A Hearty Thanksgiving.

This year the spirit of thanksgiving nestles in the hearts of Watson's tailors,—for their triumphs in clothcraft are complete, allowing the Watson store to offer ready to wear garments equal to any custom-made.

For instance, the Watson Paddock, is the acme of high tailoring with its shoulders of character, well tailored collar and gracefully setting back. But Watson's tailors did not stop there; they have also produced coats of medium length that are also models of style, perhaps more suitable for the more retiring dresser.

More cause for being thankful:—in the Watson display of fabrics every piece of material is of the best quality. Examine it thread for thread and you will not find an inferior fibre. There are meltons, kerseys, vicunas, cheviots and thibets in plain black and fancy mixtures.

Paddocks $18 to $30.
Overcoats $10 to $40.

MUSICAL HEART, PROPERTY OF FORMER TRENTON MAN, SOUNDS LIKE HARMONICA

Trenton, Nov. 29.—A Carson Warren, formerly city editor of the State Gazette, who lives in Philadelphia, has a heart which emits with every beat audible sounds similar to the low tones of a harmonica. When in this city he was in bad health, but the musical heart was not then developed to be correctly diagnosed. Now he knows that inside his breast is an ailment which is a marvel to the scientific world, and which some day will cause his sudden death. He has made his will, which he always carries with him, and has bequeathed his heart to the Medico-Chirurgical College.

TO MOUNT GUN DEC. 9.

A Famous Piece of Artillery for Court House Lawn.

One of the oldest cannons in this country will be permanently mounted on Saturday, December 9, in front of the Union County Court House at Elizabeth.

The ceremony of unveiling this gun will be under the auspices of Elizabethtown Chapter, No. 1, Sons of the American Revolution, whose committee, Chief of Police George C. Tenney and Moses Crane and Lovell Carr, are arranging a programme of exercises.

The gun, cast in France in 1573, changed hands four times since it left that country, finally falling into the hands of the Continental Troops at the capture of Stony Point. When Washington decided to evacuate the works at Stony Point, a few days after its capture, he sent all the heavy guns which the British had mounted, to West Point, for the defense of that important post. The smaller guns he divided among the troops who stormed and captured the Point, the one in Elizabeth being presented at the time to Elizabethtown troops, who, under General Muhlenberg, acted as a reserve in the battle.

The gun was brought to Elizabeth by them in 1779, and has since been an object of interest to American people.

For more than thirty years the Veteran Zouaves cared for the relic, and it was at the suggestion of their commander that the City Council recently transferred its keeping to the Sons of the Revolution for proper mounting.

ODD RELIGIOUS SECT.

Twenty Members of Society of Christian Israelites in East Orange.

A novel religious sect with twenty members, known as the Society of Christian Israelites, has sprung up in East Orange. It has quarters at 507 Main street, and on the door is a little tin sign bearing the inscription: "Isaiah 44:5. Society of Christian Israelites Meeting Room." The curtains are always tightly drawn and curiosity seekers are debarred.

The members of the society resemble Quakers. The men wear odd-looking tall hats and peculiar blue suits, and they never trim their hair or beards. The women wear poke bonnets and old fashioned dresses.

In obedience to the divine injunction against any "graven image," the Christian Israelites have no pictures or images of any kind. They look with favor upon musical instruments, except the drum, which they say "never was a musical instrument, and if it ever had any real use it was the barbarous one of drowning the cries of the wounded in battle." They do not believe in war. Theatregoing and dancing are forbidden. Their customs as to eating are similar to those of orthodox Jews.

Meetings are held Friday evenings and Sunday mornings, one service to represent the law and the other the Gospel. They have no minister, a reader conducting the services.

John Roe, of parish of Berstal, near Bradford, England, founded the sect in 1822. He was an uneducated wool comber and claimed to receive divine truth by visions. His followers believe the earth is soon to be destroyed by fire.

ARCANUMITES MEET.

A Mass Meeting to Be Held in Newark at Early Date.

Upward of 200 members of the Associated Councils of the Royal Arcanum, of New Jersey, representing thirty-two councils, were present at a meeting held Saturday night at No. 8 Central avenue, Newark, in furtherance of the movement in opposition to the Supreme Council. It was agreed that the movement was progressing auspiciously with rosy prospects of ultimate victory.

W. F. Van Benthuysen, vice-president of the Associated Councils, presided. It was decided to meet again on December 9, and every two weeks thereafter at the Central Avenue Hall, and to hold a mass meeting in Newark in the near future.

An announcement which was received with much gratification was to the effect that on December 6 Judge Gaynor, in Brooklyn, rendered a decision which may serve as an important precedent in connection with the effort to overthrow the action of the Supreme Council. The Maccabees of the World doubled the rate for members over fifty-five years of age. A man in Watertown refused to pay according to the new schedule and was suspended. He brought action and the court held that the ruling body of the order had no right to increase the assessment.

Miss Emma Duvier, of West Fifth street, has returned from a visit to friends in Newark.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

George Low, president of the Eastern Professional Golfers' Association, has appointed his executive committee as follows: George Low, Donald Ross, Stewart Gardner, Charles Kirchner, Donald Ball, Alex Campbell, Walter Stoddard, Willie Anderson, Alec Smith, Willie Morton and James Laing. The committee will meet on December 4 to draft a constitution and by-laws. Mr. Kirchner and "Marty" O'Loughlin, both attached to the Plainfield Country Club, are members of this association.

The executive committee of the United States Golf Association met in New York yesterday, when it was decided to hold the annual meeting at Delmonico's in January, instead of February, as in the past. The date is to make the closing of the fiscal year November 30 instead of December 31, to facilitate the preparation of the reports and balancing of the books. The other amendment is to have the nominating committee chosen by the executive committee instead of the president. This year's nominating committee will report on the 1906 ticket this week.

ANOTHER COMMISSION.

Appointed to Codify Master and Servant Laws.

Governor Stokes yesterday appointed the commission to codify the laws of the State relating to master and servant, which was provided for under the act of the last Legislature. Those named were Justice J. Franklin Fort, of the Supreme Court; W. Holt Apgar, of Trenton, and Alexander P. Maxwell, lawyer and labor leader, of Newark.

The act under which the commission was named is chapter 954 of the laws of 1905, approved April 3 last. It provides that the commission shall codify the laws referred to and report to the next Legislature. The commission is empowered to employ such clerical assistance as shall be necessary.

The bill was introduced and passed at the request of Chancellor Magie, who desired the codification for the guidance of the Court of Chancery.

ELIZABETH'S FRANCHISE TAX.

Report of Assessors Shows An Increase.

The report of the Board of Assessors of Elizabeth, on the apportionment of the franchise tax, received in the tax office there Monday, shows an increase over that of previous year of $477.72.

The apportionment is as follows: Mutual District Messenger Company, $9.26; Elizabethtown Water Company, $3,052.31; Elizabethtown Gaslight Company, $2,794.71; Public Service Corporation, $927.53; United Electric Company, $1,607.41; N. J. Street Railway Company, $6,126.68; Interstate Telephone Company, $240.20; N. E. Telegraph and Telephone Company, $10.26; N. Y. and N. J. Telephone Company, $1,540.55; Postal Telegraph Cable Company of New Jersey, $3.34; Western Union Telegraph Company, $1.69.

SHOOTING CASE BEGINS.

Saloon-keeper on Trial on Charge of Wounding a Policeman.

Somerville, Nov. 29.—Charles Kissonack, a wealthy saloon-keeper of Raritan, was placed on trial in the Somerset Court yesterday morning on a charge of shooting former Policeman John Stevenson on the night of March 16, 1905. The case is exciting unusual interest, and the court-room was crowded at an early hour.

Stevenson, who was formerly a robust man, appeared in court a physical wreck. An X-ray picture recently taken in a hospital shows the bullet, which entered Stevenson's chest, to be lodged in his lung near the back.

Girls, Beware of "Sissies."

Clayton, Nov. 29.—The Rev. A. E. Kerfoot, pastor of the local Baptist church, is preaching a series of sermons to the young. Last evening he spoke on "The Young Men Not to Marry." Last Sunday his topic was "The Young Woman Not to Marry." In his talk last night he told the girls to beware of the irreligious and "sissy" young man.

—Ellwood, the magician, and Miss Bertha B. Herring, impersonator, will entertain in the Y. M. C. A. Star Course on Thanksgiving night. The former is highly endorsed among others by John Wanamaker and the latter by Charles L. Lewis, of the faculty of the High School of this city. Particulars will be found in the advertising columns.

Plainfield, N. J., November 29, 1905.

Strange to say, the Plainfield newspapers, that have been fighting against the operation of speakeasies in that city, are not enthusiastic over the mulcting of one illegal liquor seller in the sum of $50. Apparently the editors do not take a judicial view of the situation.—Newark Evening News.

Bless your heart, no!

The Madison Eagle says that James H. McGraw will be the Republican nominee for Congress next year. Whether the Eagle really knows what it is screaming about is a matter of conjecture, but at any rate it has caused comment in quarters beyond the confines of Morris county. This much is well and good, but there are certain limitations beyond which the discussion should not be carried, for it makes us dig into the political graveyard. The Newark Evening News has already committed that offense. Only yesterday it asked: "What has become of Congressman Fowler? Can't some of his constituents locate him and find out the meaning of the Eagle's scream?" Why go to all this trouble? Sure as guns, the representative of the Fifth district will be around, as usual, when it's time for the next Congressional campaign. In the meanwhile let him be "of Vermont" or "of New York." Weary him not with Union county, N. J., or Washington, D. C.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh gives his opinion in an interview today that the special election on November 7 conformed to all the requirements of the law and that it was valid in every respect. As told in this paper exclusively yesterday, Lawyer W. S. Angleman disagrees with this opinion. Mr. Marsh says he is supported in his contention by no less an authority than Attorney General McCarter. On the other hand, Mr. Angleman is supported by men equally well learned in the law. This makes the situation somewhat similar to the Sunday golf matter, in which eminent counsel held radically different views regarding the obligations contained in its constitution. So much for the question as it pertains to the validity of the election. Another side of the proposition equally as important, is whether the municipal ownership scheme was really carried. Mr. Angleman holds that the evidence is strongly that it was not. To this Mr. Marsh prefers to make no comment except to say that this feature of the subject will be considered fully before any public moneys are expended. But the corporation counsel draws attention to the fact that Mr. Angleman apparently overlooked an act of 1898 which interprets the meaning of certain words that appear in the act of 1876. From a layman's standpoint we do not think that oversight of any material importance, for unless we are much in misunderstanding, there is a well grounded rule of law that one Legislature can not interpret the intention or meaning of an act passed by a previous Legislature. That is a matter which rests solely with the judiciary.

Court Will Hold the Money.

Jersey City, Nov. 29.—Adrain Hitt, sixty years old, who besides having made numerous inventions, has walked across the continent on a bet and served a term in a Western prison on a charge of counterfeiting, appeared before Vice Chancellor Stevenson as complainant in a suit he has started to compel Dr. William G. Varick, trustee of the estate of Mrs. Augusta A. Thompson, to pay to him $15,000, which he claims is due him through a lien on the property of the estate. Hitt was his own lawyer. Congressman Marshal Van Winkle appeared for Dr. Varick, and at the conclusion of a short oral argument Vice Chancellor Stevenson ordered $20,000, arising from the sale of the property on which Hitt claims to hold a lien, turned into the Court of Chancery to await the settlement of the case.

NEW ALIS ELEVEN START ON A PROMISING CAREER

LIVELY JUNIORS PLAYERS DROP THE III FROM THEIR TITLE.

The Alis III eleven is no more. That is, as the Alis III. Flushed with success, and discerning no glimmer of the return of the original Aliseers, the "Thirds" have discarded the numeral and stood forth in the unadorned title of the old Roy Phillips' pets. "Alis"—just plain "Alis"—is a mighty name in football in this section; at any rate, it was not so long ago; and the youngsters who have taken it will have to work hard to keep a proper and fitting lustre on it. Their record for the season promises much in this direction. If the eleven hangs together as the original Alis team did, and play along logical lines of advancement, it will be in the same high place as the old Alis team was, in its prime, in a very few seasons.

Tomorrow morning Alis will meet the Westfield A. A. on Hope Common. The game will be a ripper, unless all signs fail. Twice within a month the teams have played stubbornly to a tie. The first game ended 5 to 5 and at the next meeting neither eleven could score. Alis believes she can break the deadlock tomorrow.

GIRL SOMNAMBULIST.

Saw in Play and She Followed Act When Asleep.

A remarkable case of somnambulism was brought to the attention of the authorities of Elizabeth yesterday when it was learned that a girl eleven years old had jumped Sunday morning from her bedroom window after witnessing a theatrical performance Saturday night.

She attempted to again jump from the window Monday night, but her mother caught her night-dress and pulled her back.

The child is Marie Tubbs, of No. 423 West Jersey street, Elizabeth. Her father and mother took her to a local theatre Saturday night. During the play a tramp jumped from a window. This exciting scene seemed to upset the girl and her parents took her home.

She appeared to have quieted down when she retired, and her parents thought she had fully recovered from the shock. About midnight the child left her bed, walked to the open window in her room and jumped, landing on the ground, a distance of twenty feet. The shock she must have sustained when she landed did not awaken her.

She picked herself up and walked through the back yard to the barn, where she unlatched the door and was about to enter when she awoke. She was chilled through, having nothing on but her nightgown. She did not at first know where she was, and it was several minutes before she was able to reach her house. She went to the front door and rang the bell several times, and finally succeeded in awakening her father, who let her in.

She was watched all night after she returned to bed, but slept quietly until morning. Sunday night also she slept undisturbed, but early yesterday morning her mother, who was in her room, saw the child get out of bed and walk to the window. She was about to jump from it when her mother pulled her back. The child was still asleep, but awoke in a few minutes.

Dr. Victor Mravlag, who was called to attend the girl, says he is at a loss to account for her actions, except that the sight she witnessed in the theatre may have preyed on her mind.

BUNGLING BURGLAR.

Noise He Made Awoke Man for Whom He Had Anaesthetic.

A burglar, with sponge and chloroform, attempted at 3 a. m. yesterday to enter the residence of Herbert Lighthipe, No. 56 Main street, Orange. He made so much noise that he awoke Mr. Lighthipe's son, through the window of whose room he was creeping, and the young man's shout frightened him off. He left his sponge behind.

Young Lighthipe was sleeping with the window of his bedroom open. When he was awakened he saw the man who was scrambling inside.

"Hello, there; what are you doing here?" exclaimed young Lighthipe, as he scrambled from bed and made a rush for the window. The burglar loosened his hold, scrambled down a piazza post and ran. Lighthipe went to the telephone and notified Police Headquarters. Desk Sergt. Leary notified the West Orange police, who sent out Policemen Finneran and Reinhardt with Roundsman Ryan. The three bluecoats got no clue of the burglar, but they did find the sponge on the sill of the window. It was saturated with chloroform and oil of peppermint.

Sang Prophetic Song.

Hackensack, Nov. 29.—Edward Cholerton, who was buried Sunday, was a member of "Happy Jack's" minstrel troupe, and at a recent performance sang a tenor solo, "Lay My Wedding Dress Away." Cholerton was soon to wed Miss Corby, of Hackensack. She will obey the admonition in the song title.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

F. H. Henderson, who recently purchased the Mollenhauer property on Union avenue, is making some decided improvements about the place. The lake, which has been neglected for several years, is being dug out, islands are being made in it and the place will soon be restored to its former beauty. Mr. Henderson is a well known New York banker and will make this his summer residence. Contractor John Schmidt is doing the work.

No special events are scheduled here for tomorrow. About the only attraction will be hunting. Even the Brookside Gun Club, which has held a holiday shoot for several years, failed this year to arrange one.

Thanksgiving services will be held tomorrow at the Baptist and All Saints' Episcopal churches. The choirs will render special music. Service will be at the usual morning hour, 10:30.

Charles and Battell Loomis, of the Mount Pleasant Military Academy, are spending their Thanksgiving vacation with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Battell Loomis, of the borough.

Mrs. H. C. Smith, who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. L. B. Coddington, has returned to her home in Plainfield.

The electric light company is replacing some of the old electric light poles with new and larger ones.

Mr. and Mrs. William Dean, of Summit, have been visiting Mrs. Dean's mother, Mrs. Mooney.

Albert MacCauley's new house on Westfield avenue is enclosed and will soon be ready for occupancy.

School closed this afternoon for Thanksgiving vacation, reopening again Monday morning.

Additional suburban news on page two.

May Identity Dead Youth.

Atlantic City, Nov. 29.—A clue given Coroner Gaskill by Thomas P. Endicott, of this city, yesterday may lead to the identification of the young man found dead on a lot in the suburbs last week, a suicide or victim of foul play. Endicott says the dead boy greatly resembled a youth of the name of Clarence Wilson, recently employed by him, but the face is so disfigured as to make absolute identification impossible. His address was San Francisco, and as the victim had a note in his pocket addressed to J. Stitt Wilson, in a California town, it is believed his last message was to a relative. The police have written to the address given in the note.

Police Get Slot Machines.

Hoboken, Nov. 29.—Chief of Police Patrick Hayes, of this city, sprung a surprise on the saloonkeepers last night by sending out fifty policemen in plain clothes with orders to seize nickel-in-the-slot and penny-slot cigar machines found in barrooms. The policemen played the machines for the purpose of getting evidence and then tagged each device with a card bearing the name and address of the owner. Two patrol wagons subsequently made a tour of the city and gathered up the machines. There were 130 devices taken to the two station houses.

Boy Shot by a Boy.

Hackensack, Nov. 20.—Charles Kreher, thirteen years old, a son of John Kreher, a special officer in the employ of the Hamburg American Steamship Company at New York, is said to be in a dying condition at the local hospital. The lad was shot in the abdomen by Francis Edwards, eighteen years old, a son of a laborer, who works on a farm near here. Edwards and his father say the shooting was accidental, but Kreher says that it was not, and the authorities are making an investigation.

THANKSGIVING SERVICES IN THE LOCAL CHURCHES

MAJORITY OF CONGREGATION WILL UNITE WITH FIRST BAPTIST MEMBERS

In addition to the other events that will occupy the attention of holiday seekers tomorrow there will be the usual Thanksgiving services to be held in the local churches. A union service, in which most of the churches will unite, will be held at the First Baptist church at 10:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. C. W. Parsons, pastor of Grace M. E. church, will preach the sermon. There will be special music and the church will be appropriately decorated for the occasion. The offering will be for the Children's Home.

Another service will be held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church at 10:30, when the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, will preach the sermon. There will be special music by the church choir. An offering will be received for the relief associations of the city.

Special services will be held in the local Episcopal churches. At Grace church there will be Holy Communion at 7:30 and a service with Holy Communion at 10:30. The offering will be for the aged and infirm clergy fund.

Rev. Dr. Egar, of North Plainfield, will be in charge of the services at the Church of the Holy Cross to be held at 10:30 o'clock in the morning tomorrow.

There will be high celebration with processional at St. Stephen's church at 10:30, and the choir, under the direction of Charles Suhr, will render special music. As Thanksgiving falls on St. Andrews' day, it is considered a double feast day for the Episcopalians. Special services will also be held in the morning at the Church of the Holy Cross and the Church of the Heavenly Rest.

At St. Mary's church there will be masses at 6:30 and 8 o'clock in charge of Father Bogan and Father Delehanty. The afternoon and evening will be devoted to confessions. Similar services will be held at St. Joseph's church in the morning. Father Miller will have charge.

Alis vs. Westfield.

Among tomorrow's attractions in sports will be an interesting football game between the new Alis team, of this city, and the Westfield A. A. The teams appear about even in strength, as two tie games have already been played between them this season. The first on October 28, resulted with the score 5 to 5, and in the second on November 18, neither side scored. Tomorrow's contest will be played on Hope Common at 10:30 a. m. Both teams will put forth their best efforts to win, so the game promises to be well worth witnessing.

Saloon Revival in Jersey City.

The Rev. William and Mrs. Asher, who are conducting the saloon branch of the revival going on in New Jersey, opened their Jersey City campaign last night, at the saloon of E. R. Wessels, Newark avenue and Grove street. The service opened with the singing of the "King's Business," by Mrs. Asher, who accompanied herself on an organ presented to her by the saloonkeepers of Minneapolis. At the close of the service five men announced their conversion.

AMUSEMENTS.

The main thing in a play is, after all, the story, and the plot of "Big Hearted Jim," the new comedy melodrama, in which George Klimt will appear at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night, is one that never lets go its hold on the audience. The four acts, all pictures of real American life in the West, are all excellent little plays in themselves with a fine breadth and sweep of story to connect them in a complete drama. Jim Saxson, the Montana sheriff, is Klimt's other self, so perfectly is the part fitted to his personality, and Klimt and Gazzolo have made sure that the many other interesting characters will stand out as they should by placing them in the hands of clever comedians and strong emotional actors.

Local theatregoers will have an opportunity to witness at the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night one of the most interesting and original plays that has been produced this season. "The Child Wife," by Charles A. Taylor, author of "The Queen of the Highway," "King of the Opium Ring," and other well known successes, is entirely new. The plot is woven about the life of a young and pretty girl, who marries her boy sweetheart to escape the persecution of a vallain who is aiming to secure her fortune. There is not an instant during the performance which is not exciting, but the story is one of delightful simplicity with a thread of true love that is refreshing. The comedy is bright and natural and relieves the strain of the absorbing plot which holds the audience from beginning to end. The production is made by William T. Keogh, proprietor of the New Star theatre in New York, and no expense has been spared to make it complete in every detail. An especially capable company has been engaged and the complete scenic equipment is carried. Everything has been done to make the attraction the most pleasing on the road.

One of the biggest scenic productions on tour this year is "Sherlock Holmes," which will appear at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night. One act of the play shows the interior of a fashionable drawing room in London, appointed and decorated faithfully after the manner of the best vogues now current in London drawing rooms today. The second scene shows a curious subterranean congerie of offices below the walks of London, wherein rest and plan nefarious schemes securely a band of organized looters of society. So conveniently is this establishment devised and adorned that one might think the institution was arranged for the pursuit of some office industry, rather than a place for perfecting plans of outlawry. Another setting showing a cellar beneath the storehouse beside the Thams in London is also of fascinating pictorial interest.

The management of the New Plainfield theatre has effected an arrangement, after a long series of negotiations with Robert Grau, the famous vaudeville purveyor of New York, by which this city is to be favored from now on with the very best of refined vaudeville presented in metropolitan style—once every two or three weeks. The first of the series of performance will be given Friday, December 8, matinee and evening, and among the stars will be Charles Dickson & Co., Marie Jansen, the famous comic opera prima donna; Wood Brothers, Charles Wayne, comedian of "The Tenderfoot" company; Leah Russell, character artiste; The Great Zeno, Mildred Flora, comedienne, and Mrs. Goldfinch, the famous London actress, and her own company, in a one act comedy, "Dear Charles Edward."

The play decided upon for Saturday, December 9, at the New Plainfield theatre is Ralph Stuart's production of "By Right of Sword." Mr. Stuart has appeared in "By Right of Sword" hundreds of times throughout the country, and has received universal praise for his masterly impersonation of the leading character. The play is a story of today, and modern dress prevails, relieved by the picturesque uniforms of the Russian army. The play is full of comedy, and Mr. Stuart's supporting company have important and congenial roles.

Bankers and Brokers," the new musical comedy which B. E. Forrester will bring to the New Plainfield theatre December 12, with Yorke and Adams as stars, is the joint work of George Totten Smith and Aaron Hoffman, and is claimed to be far above the average of musical plays now before the public. No expense has been spared in the equipment of this organization. Archie Gunn was engaged to design the costumes and the scenery is the work of John Young. Yorke and Adams are surrounded by a company of sixty-five people.

Talk of Action Against Reed.

Rahway, Nov. 29.—It is reported that two of former Tax Receiver Reed's bondsmen are proposing to commence proceedings against him, if the matters between himself and the city are not settled this week. Much anxiety is beginning to be felt by all those whose names are on his sureties. Mr. Reed, when seen by a reporter yesterday, spoke guardedly but confidently regarding the outcome of the trouble.

An EXPLANATORY NOTICE

To the Citizens of Newark and our Customers throughout the State:

The 18th of last May I sold my business property known as 73 Market St. including Nos. 69 and 71, to the Chelsea Realty Co., and gave them a deed for it on July 12th, taking a lease on the property until March 1st, 1906.

To be perfectly frank with the people—having been in business since 1860, and in advanced years I began to tire, so made up my mind to close out my entire stock and devote the balance of my life to my Storage and Carpet Cleaning Business, and settle up my retail business.

But I found it IMPOSSIBLE to get rid of my stock in so short a time and now I have rented the store for another year, and will continue to sell goods at reduced prices—NO LOWER PRICES CAN BE FOUND IN ALL THE CITY.

Hoping this will fully explain my position and retain the good name and reputation we have built up and tried to maintain since we first started business in 1860, I remain,

Yours very truly,
AMOS H. VAN HORN, President.

HAIR TELLS CHARACTER.

Color of Hair Said to Indicate a Person's Temperament.

Many people believe that blonde, or light hair denotes affection and dark hair constancy. A person without hair is not devoid of character; far from it. The disposition of the average baldheaded man is to show such solicitude for the welfare of others, that he neglects himself. A germ causes baldness. Prof. Sabouraud, of Paris, France, innocculated a rabbit with Dandruff germs, causing it to become totally bald in five weeks' time. To rid the scalp of these dangerous germs it is necessary to apply Newbro's Herpicide.

"Destroy the cause—you remove the effect."

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

ADVICE TO BUSINESS WOMEN.

It is an astonishing fact, but a true one, nevertheless, that some girls have framed a habit of calling on men at the latter's place of business, and remaining after hours in the office where they are employed in order to talk to the men. Such conduct shows a lack of pride and dignity and is a serious mistake.

A girl should never be tempted to call upon a man at his place of business, nor at his house, either, for that matter. Of course, if his mother or sister invite her to the house it is quite another matter.

If a man thinks enough of you to care to see you often, he will find a way to do so without asking you to call on him. When you go to see him you are simply saving him the trouble of coming to see you.

The habit of lingering after business hours to chat with the young men in the office is also a bad one. When you are through with attending to your duties, leave the office. A business office is not the place for fun and social conversation. If the young men wish to talk to you they should seek you in your own home. This chattering will not raise you in your employer's estimation.

From the moment you enter the office until wou leave it attend solely to your duty. No matter how great your friendship with one of your fellow wokers, treat him during office hours as you would treat a comparative stranger. Dignity is an invaluable asset to the business woman.

TESTING SILK, WOOL AND LINEN.

It is often difficult to tell, certainly, whether a fabric is all wool, or a mixture of wool and cotton. An infallible test is as follows: Take the bolt of goods at the cut end and examine closely the crosswise thread, slowly pulling apart. It it breaks almost evenly and comes apart slowly, then one is safe in judging it to be all wool; but if it breaks in short, uneven strands and falls apart easily, it is undeniably cotton. It is much more satisfactory to get either all wool or all cotton.

Silk may be judged by its thickness, if for street costumes, as it must have "body" to it. Avoid flimsy silk as you would a plague, for it will drag from the seams, hang limpy and be altogether unsatisfactory. Silk may also be judged by the thread. Pull the thread from the end, as in testing cottons and woolens. If the thread is well rounded and firm, and does not split apart at the touch, it is safe to conclude that it will stand service. Or, make a crease with the finger nail; if the crease dents deeply, and does not soon come out the silk is substantial and worth a good price. If the crease disappears immediately and leaves a torn or cut thread in its place, it is inferior and not to be purchased.

For testing linens, simply take up the corner of the cloth and stretch it over a dampened finger. Should it spot immediately, it is undoubtedly pure linen. Cotton will not absorb water quickly, and linen takes water like a blotter takes ink. A silk shirt waist and light weight broadcloth skirt will outwear two linen dresses, and save laundry expenses.

No merchant is foolish enough to guarantee a glove which costs less than $1.50, an dto buy them is only presenting him with the money for which he guarantees you absolutely nothing. There are no bargains in cheap goods, for no merchant will sell his goods, even on the "bargain counter" unless he gets at least the cost and a little profit over for them.

To Revive Wilted Roses.

Wilted roses, seemingly fit only for the rubbish heap, may be completely revived and freshened. Put the stems of the roses in a tumbler of water, and then place the tumbler and roses in a vessel of sufficient size to allow the entire bouquet to be covered. Cover the vessel tightly and leave undisturbed for twenty-four hours. By that time the roses will be found all fresh and invigorated as if just plucked from the bushes, with every petal covered with artificial dew. Wilted lettuce may also be freshened and kept in excellent condition for weeks if treated in the same way.—National Magazine.

The latest fad of the matinee girl is a kiss album; it's made—but that's telling. Read next Sunday's New York World. Next Sunday's World pictorially is a wonder. Notable features are "Babes of the Zoo," "Opera Stars Off the Stage," "A Funny Man's Funny Family," and the "Biggest Bug in New York."

Morristown Lawyer Dead.

The Iron Brigade

A Story of the Army of the Potomac

By GEN. CHARLES KING

Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Fryne," Etc.

Copyright, 1902, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Grant had crossed the James and invested Petersburg, when to shake him loose, if possible, by the old device of scaring Washington, Early was sent down the Shenandoah valley, with 12,000 men and orders to stir up Maryland. Stir accordingly he did, until the arrival of the Sixth corps from the James and the approach of the Nineteenth. Then Early harked back, leaving just a few of his men cut off by a sudden rush of union cavalry, one of these a young captain of his own staff, an almost invaluable officer. So, this warm August evening, as Benton came riding down from a scout among the beautiful heights that border the valley on the east, he stopped his horse at the public trough and caught a glimpse of three forms that had stopped short at sight of the blue-jackets and, after a moment's hesitation, had turned back the way they came. One, an elderly clergyman, gave his arm to a gentlewoman, evidently bowed with care and sorrow. The third form was that of a girl, slender, graceful, and in her walk there was something vaguely familiar to Benton's eyes, even before he noted that she wore a drab felt hat, broad-brimmed and feathered. Benton followed to the corner, and saw the girl enter the gateway of an unpretentious little home, while the other two walked slowly on. Quickly he crossed the street, followed along a hedge of rose bushes, turned sharply through the gate, and face to face at the trellised porch met the girl whom he had first seen sauntering along that leafy side street at Charlottesville in the spring of '62. Bearded, bronzed and stalwart as he was to-day, she saw nothing to remind her of the pallid prisoner of the Chiltons, and only indignation at his intrusion blazed in her cheeks and eyes, but, in spite of gallant effort, she struck her colors at his very first word, when, with uplifted forage-cap he bowed and calmly addressed her:

"Miss Pelham, I believe, whom I had the pleasure of seeing at Charlottesville. I hope your brother is not wounded—and here."

Then he repented him of his cruelty when he saw her sway and stretch forth her hand for the support of the railing at the steps. "Pardon me," he continued, his blue eyes fixed on her almost ashen face, "but nothing less could have brought you here, and, pardon me again, but I must enter," and he moved as though to pass her by. Instantly, almost in terror, she grasped his arm.

"No! Oh, no!" she cried. "I give you my word! My brother is not here!"

"Then I am more than glad," said Benton, for it all seemed to flash over him in the instant, and, despite her clinging hands and almost frantic appeal, he sprang up the steps and into the open doorway. There on the bed, gaunt, fever-stricken, and gazing up at the startled, colored mammy, acting as nurse, and then into the face of the blue-uniformed intruder, lay the wreck of the one personal enemy Fred Benton was aware of in all Virginia—all that was left of Scott Lounsberry.

Maud Pelham sprang past the union officer and stood almost defiantly facing him.

"You shall not take him—touch him!" she cried, in tones intense and low. "He is terribly wounded. He has done you no wrong!"

Benton looked upon her in blended wonderment and pity. If what Winston said were true, what was she doing here? Instinctively he had removed his cap and stood before her bareheaded. Almost in sadness Benton began to speak.

"He tried hard to harm me and he made you the instrument," he said. "Did you not know that note was meant to lure me into a trap? Did you not know that his men were waiting there to seize or possibly kill me?"

From the bed there came a feeble cackle of laughter, and the girl's wild, dilated eyes that at Benton's words were staring at him, turned in sudden alarm to the fevered man, whose voice quavered in a sneer of mingled hate and triumph.

"You got away, thanks to her, and her meddling, but he won't—by God—he won't! They've got Jack Chilton hard and fast this time—a spy with a hatful of information and they'll hang him within the week!"

CHAPTER XXVIII.

SURRENDER.

The fever that followed the serious wounds received by Maj. Lounsberry was in itself sufficient to end the earthly career of even a stronger man. Two days after Benton found him that fever was gone, but so was the last atom of his strength. Those two days he tossed in delirium, watched by one unhappy, but devoted girl and that faithful old mammy, and visited at such intervals as her own failing strength would permit by his heartbroken mother. Word of his peril reached Charlottesville soon after the sharp fight at Snicker's Gap. Early's retreating force had striven to bring him along, but, between the torment caused him by the jolting of the ambulance and the persistent attacks of union cavalry, they had had to leave him by the way. Mrs. Lounsberry and the venerable rector of their church started within six hours of the receipt of the news, by which time all Charlottesville had heard of it, and almost the first to come to the stricken mother was the girl her son had wronged. A strange meeting was that, and stranger still was one but half an hour later when Rosalie Chilton appeared, and two Virginia girls who had not exchanged a word since the first days of the war, and neither of whom had been a visitor at the Lounsberrys' for many a moon, buried their differences with that sorrow-laden mother, and set their own quarrel aside that they might be of service to her and to a soldier of the south in the hour of such affliction. Moreover it was Dr. Chilton's old carriage, with Dr. Chilton's old horses and driven by Black Dan, that the journey to the distant front was made. This was no time to speak of the cruel things said by the Lounsberrys of Dr. Chilton and Rosalie after Benton's escape. The grave had closed over the proud, impetuous head of that now doubly bereaved household. Ill fortune had followed the father's death, and much of his little estate had been sold under the hammer. Small comfort had the handsome prodigal proved himself at that or any other time, but much had he promised as the result of his approaching marriage. There had been a memorable interview between the mother and that wronged and trusting girl when at last Maud Pelham's forebodings were realized. There had in fact been a violent scene, for Mrs. Lounsberry had sought to shield her son at Maud's expense. But that, too, was all ignored now. The other engagement had been broken summarily two weeks after Yellow Tavern, for one of Wade Hampton's staff, sent home wounded, had told at Charleston how Floyd Pelham had struck Lounsberry and why. There had been weeks in which Maud Pelham would have met Lounsberry only with scorn and contempt, but that was before his comrades sent him to Coventry, and never again after news of his serious wound. Though all Charlottesville knew that he had been false to her, she went to his mother the instant she heard the tidings, and with her on the anxious journey that followed.

DON'T EXPERIMENT.

You Will Make No Mistake If You Follow This Plainfield Citizen's Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, it's time to act and not time to experiment. These are all symptoms of kidney trouble, and you should seek a remedy which is known to cure the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use. It has cured many stubborn cases in Plainfield. No need to experiment. Follow the advice of a Plainfield citizen and be cured yourself.

Charles H. Lippencott, painter, of 107 Somerset street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "The statement made by me some years ago regarding what Doan's Kidney Pills had done for me was not only true at that time but now, four years later, I am glad to confirm it. I had dull heavy pains around my groins, dreadful backache, dizzy spells and in damp weather or when I caught cold the trouble was so bad I could not get about. I tried my best to find some prescription or remedy to cure me, but without success. I was suffering intensely when I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's Pharmacy, but it only required a few doses to convince me that I had the right remedy. In a short time I was cured. I have used your remedy since then and with the same satisfactory results. I am glad to say anything in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Tammany organization, dominated by Mr. Murphy, had arranged an ambitious programme for its gentlemanly protege, Mayor McClellan. It was expected that he would be elected by a large majority, and that next year he would become the Democratic candidate for governor of the State of New York, with a view to making him a Presidential candidate in 1908. But Mr. McClellan's political future would seem to lie behind him, to quote a current political phrase. He has made the fatal mistake all his life of following the line of resistance. He has been a recipient of favors at the hands of Tammany bosses, and has never fought his own square fight in public life. He possesses ability and intelligence of no mean order, and in this lies his condemnation. Men of his parts cannot serve to give Tammany an air of respectability without a full perception of the role they are playing; and when for a long and unbroken series of years they have fed comfortably at the Tammany crib, they have rendered themselves incapable of a really independent and self-directed public career. There is a great deal to be said for a certain class of men prominent in the Tammany organization. The district leaders, for example, are men who fought their way up from the ranks, and hold their own among their fellows, as a general rule, through sheer manly strength and largeness of heart, and born gifts of leadership and command. Their political ethics may not be refined, but they are men of strong characters, and they must stand or fall upon their own merits when judged by certain established standards. But this sort of praise cannot be meted out to a group of "gilded youths" who have allowed themselves to be used as stool pigeons by the Tammany organization, who have never lifted their fingers in the real struggle of politics, who have never for a day fought openly for their convictions in the presence of the community, and who have been willing to help clothe Tammany with an air of respectability in return for offices and emoluments. This is not the sort of stuff out of which Presidents of the United States are made. Mr. Jerome could have moved as smoothly as Mr. McClellan along that well-lubricated political track, but he is of a different fibre, and he would not sell his independence of speech and action for any sort of public job. It as barely possible that Mr. Jerome's extreme independence may prevent his filling high offices in the future. But he has already made his name a household word from Maine to California, and he has made the quality of his political thought and action an inspiration to thousands of young men destined to fill important places in the nation. Thus, if Mr. Jerome never serves in any other public position than the New York district-attorneyship, he is, nevertheless, a marked man before the nation.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for December.

Edward S. Jordan completes his series of article on "Buying Football Victories" in Collier's in the issue of December 2. This last article treats of the University of Minnesota, where football is commercialized by the gambling spirit of citizens of the twin cities. Yet in spite of this demoralizing tendency Dr. Cyrus Northrup, of the University of Minnesota, declares that he can see no reason to change present conditions. In a recent inquiry as to whether or not football methods as new pursued should be changed or not, President Northrup stood alone in defence of present methods. Yet in his own university we find installed a coach who was practically told to get victories or get out.

Electric Company for Glen Gardner.

Glen Gardner, Nov. 29.—At a regular meeting of the Lebanon Township Committee last Saturday the Lebanon Electric Light, Heat and Power Company made an application for a franchise to "erect poles and suspend wires for the purpose of lighting the streets and alleys of Lebanon township." The company is incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, and, it is said, has purchased the old Young mill property, located in the northern part of this village, with its valuable water power, and that it is the intention to furnish light, heat and power to the towns and villages in the township, and probably power for a trolley line between this place and Woodglen, where several farms have been recently purchased by city people for summer homes. The president of the company is Charles V. O'Donnell, and Joseph C. Farr is its secretary. The committee will meet again Friday, December 1, when the ordinance will be passed and the franchise granted.

STATE TEACHERS TO MEET AT SEASHORE

ATLANTIC CITY CHOSEN FOR ANNUAL SESSION IN DECEMBER.

The executive board of the New Jersey State Teachers' Association met at the Hotel Albert, New York City, the other day, reconsidered its action to hold the annual meeting of the association in Trenton, and then voted to meet in Atlantic City. The day of the convention will be December 27, 28 and 29. The day sessions will take place in the High School and the evening meetings in the First M. E. church.

September 30 last the executive board decided to hold the annual meeting in the auditorium of the State schools in Trenton, as usual. South Jersey, however, had made a strong bid for Atlantic City, and the sentiment grew stronger. At the October meeting of the board many letters were read requesting that the meeting place be changed. On that account the meeting of Saturday was called, the former vote reconsidered and the change made. The association has always met in Trenton.

A strong programme is being arranged for the session. The mornings will be devoted to matters of general interest, the afternoons to departmental affairs and in the evening there will be lectures and addresses. There will also be addresses in the morning. Some of the speakers already engaged are as follows: George H. Phillips, principal of West Chester, Pa., Normal School; Myron L. Scudder, principal of the New Paltz, N. Y., Normal School; John Cotton Dana, of the Newark Public Library; J. H. Manly, of Leland Standford, Jr., University; A. E. Winship, editor of the Journal of Education, of Boston; Dr. G. Stanley Hall, president of Clark Univeristy, of Worcester, Mass.

Besides these speakers negotiations are under way to secure the attendance of either Booker T. Washington or Jacob Riis. Russell H. Conwell, of Temple College, Philadelphia, will probably speak.

The departmental meetings will be divided into three sections. The high school department will be presided over by Superintendent Fred L. Shepard, of Asbury Park. The grammar department will have Superintendent William J. Scheerer, of Elizabeth, as its chairman. The arrangements for the kindergarten department have not been announced.

The executive board is composed of Dr. William M. Swingle, Orange, president; R. J. Boynton, Paterson, first vice president; Miss M. L. Van Winkle, Jersey City, second vice president; Professor Louis C. Wooley, Trenton, secretary; H. J. Neal, Lakewood, treasurer; Miss Lydia K. Ennis, Jersey City; Miss Mary A. Burrough, Camden, and Thomas J. Bissel, Newark.

Professor Wooley attended the meeting Saturday and stated that it was expected this would be one of the best sessions the association has ever held.

LITERARY.

A distinct Christmas flavor found in Lippincott's Magazine for December adds to the general interest which is never lacking. This is a season of happiness and Lippincott's is happy too. Jolliness, humor, and pathos are there, but the deeper tragedies of life have no place in this issue. The opening novelette, "Of the Lion's Breed," is by Grace MacGowan Cooke in collaboration with Vond Reed; and it is good enough to indicate the quality of the seven shorter stories which follow. It is a picturesque romance of the coal fields, strongly dramatic, yet treated with the utmost simplicity. "Josiah Allen's Wife" calls her amusing contribution "The Last Straw." This may prove illuminative to husbands. Mrs. I. Zangwill, who still writes under her maiden name, E. Ayrton, is the author of "Don Cupid," a sweet child sketch with a grown-up love interest. An automobile racing story by Ralph Henry Barbour, called "Victory With Honor," abounds in humorous situations and lively dialogue. "A Studio Mouse," is a clever tale of artistic life among the "cliff dwellers." In it the Mouse (Georgia Knox) describes a courtship which threatens to cut off its source of supplies. Seumas MacManus, the Irish humorist, tells "How Condy Dhu Raised the Devil," and makes it superlatively funny. Ella Middleton Tybout's story, "A Moment of Confidence," shows two pictures of the fireside,—which cynics try to make us believe is obsolete,—very real human pictures, complete in contrast. "The Wildwood Limited" is a story of a locomotive engineer, by Cy Warman, whose name in the line he has chosen has few equals. This tale will be especially enjoyed by railroad men. Marion Harland once spent Christmas in Bethlehem of Judea. She describes the Christmas ceremonies in the church, which is built on the site of the manger where Christ was born, and gives much interesting news of the town, in her paper in the Christmas Lippincott's. A paper on "The Modern Lyceum," by Paul M. Pearson supplies up-to-date information on this live subject; and Wimer Bedford, a veteran, writes an anecdotic article on "Some Generals of the Civil War." This will be followed by a second paper of further reminiscences. Christmas poems by Charles Hanson Towne and Clinton Scollard mark the glad season. "Walnuts and Wine" have caught the prevailing happiness and reflect its spirit in joke and verselet.

Without overdoing it, the editors have made the Atlantic for December a notable Christmas number. It opens with a Christmas essay upon the timely topic of "Riches" by that delightful and telling essayist, E. S. Martin, and in the five stories by such favorite writers as W. J. Hopkins, author of "The Clammer," Alice Brown, Caroline Duer, Clare Benedict, and Rose Young, much of the happiness of the season is reflected. There are likewise three fine and distinctively Christmas poems, by John B. Tabb, Laura Spencer Portor, and "H." Notwithstanding this delightful wealth of reading in the Christmas vein, the number, like all numbers of the Atlantic, is rich in varied articles or interest and importance. Particularly notable are two papers upon dramatic subjects. James S. Metcalfe, the well known dramatic critic of Life, who has recently come into such an admirable notoriety for his fight against the syndicate, contributes a paper, "Is the Theatre Worth While?" while Talcott Williams has a fine reminiscent and critical paper on the late Sir Henry Irving. "Woman Suffrage in the Tenements," by Elizabeth McCracken, author of "The Play and the Gallery" and many other first-hand studies of American life, is an uncommonly instructive and amusing contribution to a vexatious question. Among the other articles of broad interest are "German Ideals of Today," by Professor Kuno Francke, "A French Critic of Old Imperialism," by Gamaliel Bradford, Jr., and "Johnson and 'My Policy,'" the fifth in William Garrott Brown's great historical series upon "The Tenth Decade of the United States."

James and Mary Fight.

James Dennis and Mary Schaefer, both colored, confronted one another in the city court this morning, volleying accusations and counter accusations. There was such a tangle of charges that Judge Runyon threw up his hands in hopeless bewilderment. James says Mary is the most cantankerous woman he ever knew, and Mary puts it all up to James. They live on East Sixth street. Both claimed to be able to prove the other's guilt, and the judge ordered them to produce the witnesses next Monday morning.

Funeral of Miss Tonkin.

FAMILY DISPUTE BOND OWNERSHIP

PLAINFIELD WOMEN'S SUIT AS ADMINISTRATRIX ON TRIAL TODAY.

Before Judge Lanning in the United States Circuit Court, the testimony was all taken yesterday in the case of Nancy C. Beaumont, of this city, administratrix of the estate of Lucius S. Beaumont, who lived in Butler, Pa., against her brother, John L. Beaumont, of New York, and argument before the jury was begun by counsel for the plaintiff. The case was adjourned until today.

Miss Beaumont is suing for the recovery of $25,000 worth of bonds of the New York Gas and Electric Heat and Power Company, which she claims belong to the estate of Lucius. She maintains that the bonds in dispute were removed December 2, 1903, from a box in the vault of the Lincoln Trust Company, which was rented by Lucius and his brothers, John and George.

The nature of the defense is that Lulcus transferred the bonds to John some time between October 25 and 30, 1903.

Miss Boyle Gets Six Cents.

The decision in the Alma Boyle case, in which Miss Boyle sued Joseph Hymen, of Westfield, for damages for slander, was handed down by Judge Atwater Monday. The plaintiff gets six cents' damages. The decision is a victory for the defendant. William Newcorn conducted the defense.

On account of the fair being held in Company K's armory, overcoats will be issued to the members tonight and tomorrow morning by Sergeant A. I. Littell at 110 North avenue.

300 Dance Invitations.

More than 300 invitations have been issued by the Criterion Club for its dance to be held on December 5. The affair will take place at the Casino.

Drug Store Hours for Tomorrow.

The regular covenant meeting will be held at the First Baptist church tonight and on Sunday morning there will be a communion service. A number of persons will be received into the church at that time and be given the right-hand-of-fellowship.

BOROUGH APPEAL CASES.

Twenty-five Objectors Heard and a Total of $6,000 Removed.

Twenty-five borough property owners appeared before the Commissioners of Appeal, yesterday and today, to protest against assessments. As a rule their objections were considered of enough importance to make reductions and a total of $6,000 was taken off. In many of the cases, the protestants were old soldiers and others who were entitled to exemption. Several more objectors remain to be heard and they will probably appeal before the body Friday afternoon.

The commissioners are William C. Smith, John Case and L. E. Barkalew. Dr. J. H. Cooley, the assessor, was also in attendance.

Dog Scared Off Burglar.

The furious barking of his watch dog caused D. C. Darby, of Alton, to hurry to a window at his home, last night, just in time to see a man running at top speed from the yard to the road. Darby seized a revolver and fired at him four times but without hitting him. The fellow was badly scared, however, and dropped a pair of overshoes and a sharp knife blade a fot long. He had evidently planned to rob the house but was foiled by the faithful canine.

Death of Infant Son.

John, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John Scott, of West Fourth street, died Monday. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon and interment was made in the Methodist cemetery.

Helplessly Drunk.

Thomas Wallace was arrested by Patrolman Messler on Liberty street last night for helpless drunkness. He was freed by Judge Runyon in the city court this morning.

SPECIAL BARGAINS IN RUBBER GOODS

LEST YOU FORGET!

That Thanksgiving is coming, we gently remind you that gala attire is the order of the day. Everybody wants to look his best and turn out spick and span in honor of this most American of all holidays. No need of new clothes either when those you already possess can be made by an expert cleaner to look "better than new." Not an empty phrase that, but a fact, for the garment that's turned out by an up-to-date cleaner looks as if it really belonged to the wearer and loses the too-too apparent "newness" of the "just out of the shop" suit or gown.

Suits, Overcoats, Gowns, Jackets—in fact, every article of personal attire, we cleanse "in your own time," and in a manner unequalled for beauty and finish.
